humanities and at Quincy, Ill., he devoted two years to philosophy. At the end of this time he was sent to St. Louis, Mo., to complete his studies. The subject of this sketch received minor orders and sub-deaconship from Archbishop Ryan in April, 1884, and on Ascension Day he was ordained deacon. On April 26, 1886, he was ordained priest by Archbishop P. R. Kenrick in the St. Anthony Church, St. Louis, Mo. During the following year he was appointed pastor of Altamont and St. Elmo, Ill. In April, 1888, he was sent to Michigan and began his work among the Ottawa Indians, and subsequently was sent to the Pacific Coast. He was stationed at St. Boniface's Church, San Francisco, Cal., for one year, attending the Indian missions in Mendocino County, north of San Francisco. Subsequently he was sent to St. Turibius Mission, Lake County, California. Until January, 1893, he labored in the mountains of El Dorado among the Indians and then the chapter of the Franciscan Fathers of the Province of the Sacred Heart removed him to Washburn, Wis. Here he spent four years devoting his time to the spiritual welfare of the people of St. Louis congregation of Washburn. As monuments of his energetic work and solicitude for his people, the fine Franciscan residence, adjoining, is to be seen to-day.

St. Boniface's Church, Waumandee, Wis.

THE congregation of St. Boniface at Waumandee, Buffalo County, Wisconsin, was organized on September 1, 1867. Prior to that time it was attended as a mission from Fountain City, but on its origin the Rev. L. Spitzlberger was appointed first resident pastor, and it was during his incumbency that the parsonage, which is still in use, was built. His successor, the Rev. Ludovicus Lay, erected a handsome church in 1877. This building is in the Roman style of architecture, which idea is carried out to a considerable extent in the entire furnishings. This particularly pertains to the three altars, which are massive and handsome specimens of artistic work. After Father Lay came the Rev. Theophil Beau. He was followed by the Rev. Ignatius Schaller, after whom the congregation for the second time was in charge of Father Lay. His successor, then, was the Rev. Sebastian Rohr, who built a schoolhouse and boarding-school. He was succeeded by the Rev. Fathers, T. M. Wicker, Peter Alfes and Xaverius Willms. Then came the present rector, the Rev. A. Havestadt. The congregation of St. Boniface is comprised of some five hundred and fifty members. The school, formerly in charge of sisters, is now conducted by a lay teacher, and has an average attendance of fifty pupils. There is also a Branch of the Family Protective Association and an Altar Society connected with this congregation.

The parish of St. Peter's, in Montana Township, Buffalo County, is attended as a mission by the Rev. Father Havestadt from Waumandee, who holds services there once each month. The congregation was organized some twenty years ago, and is composed of twenty-five families, nearly all of whom are German. The church was dedicated by the Rev. Theophil Beau, on April 24, 1878. There is a school in connection with St. Peter's, in which instruction is given by a lay teacher to the children of the parish during certain periods of the year.

The Rev. A. Havestadt was born at Muenster, Germany, on February 20, 1838, and after acquiring his earlier education, and completing a full course in the necessary studies, he was ordained to the priesthood on August 27, 1865. He came to America in 1872, his first appointment in this country being to the pastorate at Tecumseh and Beatrice, Nebraska. He then became attached to the diocese of La Crosse, and was successively pastor of the congregations at Cashton and Humbird, being appointed from the latter place to his present position at Waumandee.

Sacred Heart Church, West Superior, Wis.

THE establishment of Sacred Heart parish at West Superior, Douglas County, Wisconsin, dates back to August 15, 1886, when the Rev. Eustace Vollmer, who was then stationed at Superior, held services in a building known as Barton's Hall. Services thus held were attended by nearly every Catholic in West Superior, a little over a dozen in all.

Upon the advice of Father "Eustace," as he is commonly called, some money was collected towards the latter part of that year as a fund with which to begin the erection of a church. As a result of this, and on further strenuous efforts on the part of Matthew Ryan, Walter Dumphy, Albert Lederman, and others, a beautiful site on the corner of Twelfth street and John avenue, consisting of four lots, was donated by the Land and River Improvement Company, and the erection of a small church begun in the summer of 1887. This new parish was placed in charge of the Rev. Casimir Vogt, O. S. F., who was at that time doing missionary work in Northern Wisconsin. Soon after the completion of the church, Father Vogt was succeeded by Father Damien, also a missionary worker, who, like all good Franciscan Fathers, was greatly interested in the education of the young, and, consequently, to his efforts can be attributed the establishment of the first Catholic school in West Superior. The building of a school necessitated the purchase by the congregation of a couple of lots adjoining the church property. About this time, Father Damien was succeeded by Father Bruno, who took up the unfinished work of his predecessor, carrying to completion his evident designs in the erection of a suitable brick school building. Father Bruno was succeeded in March, 1890, by Father Sturm, now of Milwaukee, who was the first resident pastor of West Superior. It was during his administration that the city, as well as the parish, experienced a remarkable boom. West Superior had in a moment, as it were, become the center of attraction, the result being that thousands of people of a speculative turn of mind crowded to that center. As might naturally be supposed, a fair share of this generous influx in population were Catholics, who thus added largely to the prospects and immediate pecuniary condition of Sacred Heart parish. So flattering, in fact, were the indications for the future, that many improvements were made to the property, among other things being the erection of a pastoral residence, the enlargement of the church to almost twice its original size, and an addition to the school building which increased its capacity threefold. These improvements occupied a period extending from March, 1890, to October, 1891, the amount of expenditure in that direction alone being in the neighborhood of $7,000. In October, 1891, Father Sturm was succeeded by Father Joseph Hermon, who found a number of exceedingly knotty problems on hand for his consideration. He, however, devoted a considerable portion of his time to the establishment of missions, to be served in conjunction with the mother parish, locating one at Steel Plant, one at Connor's Point, and one at South Superior; the second of these was provided with a school, which was maintained at the expense of the mother church. Unfortunately, too, at this time, some differences of opinion arose between the pastor and some of the foreign element represented in the parish, which finally resulted in the establishment of St. Joseph's Church, at the present time under the able administration of the Rev. Charles J. Weber. In February, 1894, Father Hermon was succeeded by the Rev. Walter Fardy, who found the affairs of the parish in anything but a favorable condition. This, of course, was almost entirely owing to the arrival of the panic, which caused many of the best and most influential citizens—among them a large percentage of Catholics—to leave the city. Even those who remained, well-intentioned as they might have been, were unable to do anything in behalf of the church, there being hardly a man in the community who was not overburdened with a large amount of real estate for which there was no appreciable value. To add to the difficulty, it must be remembered that there was a debt of $10,500 hanging over the parish, a condition which certainly did not tend to the benefit of that congregation. However, the advent of the pastor seemed to renew the courage of the people, his evident determination to override all existing difficulties adding to their strength of purpose in endeavoring to assist him in so laudable an undertaking. Under his administration, the then neglected buildings received immediate and marked attention. The church was handsomely decorated within, being also supplied throughout with electric lights and costly fixtures. A substantial stone foundation was added to the newer part of the school building, the entire structure supplied with a modern and improved system of hot water heating, and the exterior of the building treated to a veneer of Menomonie brick, the total expense of these improvements amounting to $5,000. In addition to this, and as a final effort in the right direction, the pastoral residence was provided with a suitable heating apparatus at an expense of $500. Then, having infused new life into the affairs of the parish, Father Fardy devoted his entire attention to the removal of the mortgage before mentioned and other accumulated debts, which now amounted to a total of $13,000. In this seemingly almost impossible undertaking, he was successful, so that on January 1, 1898, the parish was entirely free from debt, making a total of $18,500 that has been collected in less than four years, the greater part of it, in fact, in two years. "When," remarks one of the members of this congregation, "we consider the hard times, the unsettled condition of the people, and the discouraging circumstances, it is remarkable what has been done in so short a time, and simply goes to show that the Sacred Heart parish is composed of some of the most energetic people in Wisconsin." The congregation of the Sacred Heart at the present time numbers in the neighborhood of one thousand souls, while the parochial school of five departments, which is in charge of Sisters of St. Francis, has also an average attendance of two hundred and fifty pupils. Of Catholic organizations in this parish, there are a League of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, established April, 1896; Catholic Knights of Wisconsin: President, P. J. Hughes; Vice-President, Martin Sauter; Secretary, George H. Kloeckner; Treasurer, W. J. Kommers. Catholic Order of Foresters: Chief Ranger, John E. McCabe; Past Chief Ranger, John N. Lydon; Vice-Chief Ranger, George C. Beams; Recording Secretary, James J. Surch; Financial Secretary, T. W. Moran; Treasurer, I. N. Snyder; Conductors, William La Joe and J. F. Bissonnett; and Woman's Catholic Order of Foresters.

Sacred Heart Church, West Superior, Wis.

St. Joseph's Church and School, West Superior, Wis.

St. Joseph's Church, West Superior, Wis.

THE German congregation of St. Joseph at West Superior, diocese of La Crosse, was founded by the present rector, the Rev. C. J. Weber. The founding of this congregation was the outcome of a meeting held on August 15, 1895, at which Father Weber presided, when it was unanimously decided to organize a new parish for the German Catholics of West Superior. This congregation was incorporated under the name of St. Joseph, the first parish officers being Messrs. Frank X. Niehoff, secretary, and Mathias Kommers, treasurer. In October of the same year four lots were donated to the congregation by the Land and River Improvement Company, of whom four additional ones were purchased. In the spring of 1896 work was begun on the erection of the church and school, both buildings being completed and dedicated on October 15th of the same year, by the Right Rev. Bishop Schwebach. The congregation at this time consists of seventy-four families. Of Catholic organizations connected with this parish there are: A Young Ladies' Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary; Childhood Society; Young Men's Society; Altar Society for Married Ladies; St. Joseph's Society for Married Men, and a Branch and Court of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, and Catholic Order of Foresters.

Rev. Chas. J. Weber.

The parochial school connected with St. Joseph's was opened for regular tuition in October, 1896, when forty-five children began their studies under the direction of two Franciscan Sisters of La Crosse. The number of children in regular attendance at the present time is sixty.

The Rev. Charles J. Weber, founder and rector of St. Joseph's congregation, was born in Belvidere, Minnesota, in 1869. He began his studies for the priesthood in 1884, in which year he entered the Seminary of St. Francis, near Milwaukee, where, after completing a thorough course in the classics, philosophy and theology, he was ordained to the priesthood in the year 1892. His first appointment was as first assistant at Sacred Heart Church, West Superior, after which he was successively pastor of St. Mary's and St. Patrick's in that city, leaving the latter in 1895 to organize the parish and congregation of St. Joseph's.

St. John the Baptist's Church, Wilton, Wis.

THE first Catholic family known to have lived in the territory, now included in the parish of Wilton, was that of Anton Tomah, who located about the year 1852 some seven miles north of the present village of Wilton. There were no churches in this locality at that time, but Mass was said once a month in the little town hall at Tomah, then a small village of fifty inhabitants, by Father Noyes, at that time resident priest at Mauston. About a year later, a few Catholic families came and settled in the neighborhood of Mr. Tomah. Thus, the Catholic settlement increased from year to year until 1857, when Mr. Frank Barry took up a tract of land about four miles south of Wilton. Patrick O'Gara, James Cook, Patrick Welch and others followed, who were obliged to attend services at Tomah, some eighteen miles distant, but at that time was the nearest point visited by any priest. A few years later James Nolan, James Kerrigan, John Kerrigan and others formed a settlement in the vicinity of Richville and soon after began to talk seriously of building a church. In 1865 a church was erected, the same being attended by Father Quigley, then a resident at Mauston. Some few years later the congregations of Tomah and Richville were both placed in charge of Father Durward, who took up his residence at the former place. During this period, Catholics had been settling rapidly around Wilton and their numbers so far increased that they also demanded a church and pastor. Father Durward as well as the Bishop demurred on the grounds that the settlement was not of sufficient strength to justify the erection of a church, or be able to properly care for a resident pastor; however, there being some thirty families in all, in 1875, a mission was formed and a small church built, which was attended by Father Durward for eight years. At the end of that time, Father Durward was succeeded by Father Metzler, who objected so strongly to assuming the charge that it was transferred to the Rev. Father Keller, of Union Center, by whom it was attended as a mission for two years. By this time the congregation had increased to some sixty families. At the termination of Father Keller's pastorate, the congregation of Union Center with the adjoining missions were placed in charge of Father Herman, who did considerable in the way of improvements to the church building at Wilton. These improvements were hardly completed when the center portion of the building was struck by lightning and so badly injured that the necessary repairs almost equalled in extent the cost of an entirely new structure. This work was, however, at last accomplished, and in addition a new sanctuary was added to the main building. In 1892 the mission at Wilton was placed in charge of Father Campbell of Elroy, but, for some two years prior to acquiring its own resident pastor, was attended by the Rev. Father Burns, who had been appointed as assistant to Father Campbell. In July, 1895, the Rev. J. D. Manning was appointed to the pastorate at Wilton. Upon arriving he found the church and its surroundings in a rather dilapidated condition, but through his persistent and energetic efforts the property was soon brought into a more satisfactory condition,—buildings repaired and renovated and a parsonage built, all of which was completed without leaving any outstanding debts. In August, 1896, the church was struck by lightning and burnt to the ground; but within a few days Father Manning had a new building under way, Mass in the meantime being celebrated in the school-house. The cornerstone of the new church was laid on October 7, 1896, by the Right Rev. Bishop Schwebach, who also blessed the building on January 14, 1897. The Catholics of Wilton can now pride themselves on having as finely built and well appointed a church and parsonage as any parish in the diocese, outside of the city of La Crosse, and the property to-day gives substantial evidence of the untiring energy and zeal of their good pastor.

St. John the Baptist's Church, Wilton, Wis.

Rev. D. J. Manning.

St. Joseph's Church at Kendall, in Juneau County, is a mission of St. John's and is attended as such by the resident pastors at Wilton. This congregation was first established in 1880, by Father Killilea, and is now composed of some seventy-two families, the majority of whom are Irish. Services are held at St. Joseph's every other Sunday. There are also an Altar Society and Sodality of the Blessed Virgin Mary connected wth this congregation.

The Rev. D. J. Manning, present rector of St. John the Baptist, at Wilton, acquired his classical education at Toronto, Canada. He took a full course in philosophy at the Grand Seminary at Montreal and completed his studies at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, where he was ordained to the priesthood in June, 1893. He was appointed to his present charge as rector of St. John the Baptist on July 25, 1895.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART VIII.

Churches Incorporated in the Archdiocese of Milwaukee and Dioceses of Green Bay and La Crosse.

Archdiocese of Milwaukee.

Complete list of Churches incorporated under the laws of the State of Wisconsin and existing within the archdiocese of Milwaukee, to-wit.:

Places Alphabetically Arranged.	Title of Incorporation.	When Incorporated.
Alverno	St. Joseph's Congregation	Dec. 20, 1883.
Ashton	St. Peter's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Beloit	St. Thomas' Congregation	Dec. 20, 1883.
Benton	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Barton	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Beaver Dam	St. Michael's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Beaver Dam	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Beaver Dam	St. Peter's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Berlin	St. Stanislaus' Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Bloomington Mission.	St. Mary's Congregation	May 28, 1898.
Burlington	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
Caledonia	St. Louis' Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Cassville	St. Charles' Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Centreville	St. Wendel Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
Centreville Mission.	St. George's Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Clyman	Assumption of B. V. M. Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
Columbus	St. Jerome's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Cottage Grove Mission.	St. Patrick's Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Cross Plains	St. Francis Xavier's Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Cuba Mission.	St. Rose's Congregation	Nov. 9, 1895.
Cudahy	St. Frederick's Congregation	Mar. 25, 1896.
Dane	St. Michael's Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Darlington	Holy Rosary Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Delavan	St. Andrew's Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
Dickeysville Mission.	Holy Ghost Congregation	Jan. 11, 1896.
Doylestown	St. Patrick's Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Eagle	St. Theresa's Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
East Bristol	St. Joseph's Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Eden	St. James' Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Edgerton	St. Joseph's Congregation	Oct. 3, 1883.
Elkhorn	St. Patrick's Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
Fond du Lac	St. Joseph's Congregation	Dec. 11, 1891.
Fond du Lac	St. Mary's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Fort Atkinson	St. Joseph's Congregation	Dec. 16, 1895.
Fox Lake	St. Mary's Congregation	May 12, 1892.
Franklin	Assumption of B. V. M. Congregation	Jan. 12, 1897.
Glenbeulah Mission.	St. Fridolin's Congregation	Feb. 12, 1896.
Grafton	St. Joseph's Congregation	Dec. 17, 1897.
Greenfield	St. Mathias' Congregation	July 2, 1892.
Greenfield	St. Mary's Congregation	Jan. 12, 1897.
Hartford	St. Kilian's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Hazel Green Mission.	St. Joseph's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Highland	St. John's Congregation	Mar. 16, 1897.
Janesville	St. Mary's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Janesville	St. Patrick's Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
Jefferson	St. John the Baptist Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Jefferson	St. Lawrence's Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
Juneau Mission.	Immaculate Conception Congregation	July 20, 1896.
Kansasville	St. Mary's Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Kenosha	St. George's Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Kenosha	St. James' Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Kewaskum	Holy Trinity Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Kieler	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Lancaster	St. Clement's Congregation	Dec. 8, 1883.
Leroy	St. Andrew's Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Lyndon	St. Mary's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Madison	Holy Redeemer Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Madison	St. Patrick's Congregation	May 26, 1888.
Madison	St. Raphael's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Manitowoc	St. Boniface's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Manitowoc	St. Mary's Congregation	Jan. 13, 1887.
Mapleton	St. Catherine's Congregation	Nov. 12, 1883.
Mazomanie	St. Barnabas' Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Meeme	St. Isidore's Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Mequon Mission.	St. James' Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Middleton	St. Bernard's Congregation	June 27, 1889.
Mill Creek Mission.	St. John the Baptist Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Milwaukee	St. Ann's Congregation	Aug. 14, 1894.
Milwaukee	St. Anthony's Congregation	Aug. 27, 1883.
Milwaukee	St. Boniface's Congregation	Dec. 1, 1888.
Milwaukee	St. Casimir's Congregation	June 25, 1894.
Milwaukee	SS. Cyril and Method's Congregation	May 15, 1893.
Milwaukee	Holy Trinity Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Milwaukee	St. Hyacinth's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Milwaukee	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Dec. 1, 1888.

Places Alphabetically Arranged.	Title of Incorporation.	When Incorporated.
Milwaukee	St. John's Cathedral Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Milwaukee	St. John Nepomuc's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Milwaukee	St. Josaphat's Congregation	May 5, 1888.
Milwaukee	St. Joseph's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Milwaukee	St. Lawrence's Congregation	Aug. 22, 1892.
Milwaukee	St. Mary's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Milwaukee	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Milwaukee	SS. Peter and Paul's Congregation	Mar. 7, 1892.
Milwaukee	St. Rose's Congregation	Mar. 21, 1888.
Milwaukee	St. Stanislaus' Congregation	Oct. 3, 1889.
Milwaukee	St. Vincent de Paul's Congregation	Aug. 13, 1888.
Milwaukee	St. Wenceslaus' Congregation	Aug. 30, 1883.
Mineral Point	St. Mary's Congregation	Dec. 22, 1883.
Monches	St. John's Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Monroe	St. Victor's Congregation
Mount Hope	St. Lawrence's Congregation	Nov. 6, 1883.
Mount Horeb	St. Ignatius' Congregation	Aug. 21, 1894.
Mukwonago Mission.	St. James' Congregation	Feb. 25, 1896.
Muskego Mission.	St. Joseph's Congregation	Jan. 12, 1897.
New Koeln	St. Stephen's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
New Muenster	St. Alphons' Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
North Milwaukee	Holy Redeemer Congregation	May 26, 1897.
Oak Creek	St. Matthew's Congregation	Dec. 20, 1883.
Oconomowoc	St. Jerome's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Oshkosh	St. John's Congregation	June 4, 1896.
Oshkosh	St. Vincent de Paul's Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
Patch Grove Mission.	St. John's Congregation	May 19, 1887.
Perry	Holy Redeemer Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Pewaukee	St. Mary's Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
Platteville	St. Mary's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Plymouth	St. John the Baptist Congregation	Feb. 12, 1896.
Port Washington	St. Mary's Congregation	Dec. 8, 1883.
Potosi	St. Andrew's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Racine	St. John Nepomuc's Congregation	Jan. 15, 1897.
Racine	St. Joseph's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Racine	St. Mary's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Racine	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Racine	St. Rose's Congregation	Jan. 14, 1886.
Random Lake	St. Mary's Congregation	Dec. 13, 1895.
Richwood	St. Joseph's Congregation	Dec. 6, 1883.
Ridgeway	St. Bridget's Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
Ripon	St. Patrick's Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Ripon	St. Wenceslaus' Congregation	April 1, 1896.
Roxbury	St. Norbert's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Saukville	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Schleisingerville	St. Peter's Congregation	Oct. 27, 1896.
Schoolhill Mission.	St. Nazianz Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Sheboygan	Holy Name Congregation	Dec. 20, 1883.
Sheboygan	St. Mary's Congregation	May 27, 1896.
Sheboygan	St. Peter Claver's Congregation	Feb. 6, 1888.
Shullsburg	St. Matthew's Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
South Milwaukee	St. John's Congregation	Aug. 4, 1893.
Spr'gfield Corners	St. Martin's Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
St. Anna	St. Anna's Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
St. Lawrence	St. Lawrence's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
St. Martin	Assumption B. V. M. Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
St. Martin	Sacred Heart Congregation	Aug. 29, 1883.
St. Michael	St. Michael's Congregation	April 28, 1884.
St. Nazianz	St. Gregory's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Sun Prairie	Sacred Heart Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Theresa	St. Theresa's Congregation	Aug. 15, 1883.
Vermont Mission.	St. James' Congregation	April 28, 1884.
Waterford	St. Thomas' Aquinas' Congregation	Oct. 1, 1883.
Watertown	St. Henry's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Waukesha	St. Joseph's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Waupun	St. Joseph's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Westport	St. Mary's Congregation	Sept. 15, 1883.
Whitewater	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Wilson	St. George's Congregation	April 28, 1884.

Diocese of Green Bay.

Complete list of Churches incorporated under the laws of the State of Wisconsin and existing within the diocese of Green Bay, to-wit.:

Places Alphabetically Arranged.	Title of Incorporation.	When Incorporated.
Green Bay	St. Francis Xavier's Cathedral. Congregation	Oct. 22, 1889.
Green Bay	St. Willibrord's Congregation	July 24, 1883.
Green Bay	St. John's Congregation	July 24, 1883.
Green Bay	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 11, 1883.
Green Bay	SS. Peter and Paul's Congregation	Aug. 26, 1895.
Ahnapee (now Algoma)	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Dec. 20, 1883.
Amherst Jct.	St. Mary's Congregation	Jan. 7, 1887.
Aniwa	St. Boniface's Congregation	Oct. 2, 1893.
Antigo	St. John's Congregation	July 24, 1885.
Antigo	St. Hyacinth's Congregation	Feb. 28, 1896.
Appleton	St. Mary's Congregation	Nov. 24, 1883.
Bear Creek	St. Mary's Congregation	Feb. 17, 1896.
Bay Settlement	Holy Cross Congregation	Feb. 8, 1884.
Berlin	St. Michael's Congregation	Dec. 21, 1886.
Berlin	St. Stanislaus' Congregation	Sept. 6, 1883.
Black Creek		April 9, 1896.
Briggsville	St. Mary's Help of Christians Congregation	Feb. 13, 1887.
Center	St. Edward's Congregation	March 4, 1885.
Chilton	St. Augustine's Congregation	Dec. 19, 1883.
Chilton	St. Mary's Congregation	Dec. 1, 1883.
Clark's Mills	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Feb. 7, 1885.
Clintonville	St. Rose's Congregation	July 3, 1893.
Coleman	St. John Baptist Congregation	Dec. 13, 1890.
Cooperstown	St. James' Congregation	Nov. 30, 1883.
Custer	Immaculate Conception Congregation	May 31, 1892.
Delwich	St. Mary's Congregation	Oct. 26, 1896.
DePere	St. Francis' Congregation	Nov. 30, 1883.
DePere	St. Mary's Congregation	Jan. 4, 1887.
DePere	St. Boniface's Congregation	Jan. 19, 1893.

Places Alphabetically Arranged.	Title of Incorporation.	When Incorporated.
DePere	St. Joseph's Congregation	Jan. 18, 1890.
Duck Creek	St. John the Baptist's Congregation	Jan. 11, 1884.
Eaton	SS. Cyril and Methodius' Congregation	March 5, 1884.
Flintville	SS. Edward and Isidore's Congregation	Feb. 3, 1886.
Florence	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Sept. 29, 1884.
Forestville	Holy Name of Mary Congregation	Feb. 13. 1884.
Freedom	St. Nicholas' Congregation	Dec. 17, 1883.
Grand Rapids	SS. Peter and Paul's Congregation	June 30, 1886.
Hollandtown		May 31, 1884.
Hortonville	SS. Peter and Paul's Congregation	Dec. 12, 1883.
Hull	St. Casimir's Congregation	Dec. 22, 1883.
Isaar	St. Sebastian's Congregation	April 9, 1896.
Kaukauna	Holy Cross Congregation	Nov. 20, 1883.
Kaukauna	St. Mary's Congregation	July 24, 1885.
Kewaunee	Holy Rosary Congregation	Nov. 23, 1883.
Lena	St. Charles Borromeo's Congregation	Feb. 19, 1897.
Lincoln	St. Peter's Congregation	July 31, 1884.
Little Suamico	St. Pius' Congregation	Dec. 19, 1895.
Luxemburg	St. Mary's Congregation	March 13, 1884.
Manawa	Sacred Heart Congregation	April 4, 1896.
Maple Grove	St. Patrick's Congregation	Dec. 20, 1883.
Martinsville	St. Martin's Congregation	Dec. 20, 1883.
Marinette	St. Mary's Congregation	Jan. 17, 1884.
Marinette	St. Joseph's Congregation	Nov. 14, 1887.
Marinette	Sacred Heart Congregation	Sept. 18, 1893.
Menasha	St. Mary's Congregation	Dec. 14, 1883.
Menasha	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 1, 1883.
Menasha	St. John's Congregation	June 3, 1889.
Merrill	St. Francis Xavier's Congregation	March 23, 1885.
Mishicot	Holy Cross Congregation	Feb. 20, 1884.
Montello	St. John the Baptist's Congregation	Sept. 20, 1883.
Morrison	St. John the Evangelist's Congregation	Feb. 14, 1884.
New Franken	St. Kilian's Congregation	Nov. 21, 1883.
New London	Most Precious Blood Congregation	Nov. 20, 1883.
Oconto	St. Joseph's Congregation	Dec. 10, 1883.
Oconto	St. Peter's Congregation	Dec. 31, 1883.
Oconto Falls		Dec. 11, 1896.
Oshkosh	St. Peter's Congregation	Dec. 21, 1885.
Oshkosh	St. Mary's Congregation	July 10, 1883.
Pine Grove	Holy Trinity Congregation	June 26, 1890.
Polonia	Sacred Heart Congregation	Dec. 22, 1883.
Portage	St. Mary's Congregation	Mar. 17, 1886.
Portage	St. Francis' Congregation	June 14, 1886.
Preble	Holy Martyrs of Gorcum Congregation	Dec. 18, 1883.
Princeton	St. John's Congregation	Nov. 21, 1883.
Princeton	St. Patrick's Congregation	Sept. 9, 1884.
Rhinelander	St. Mary's Congregation	June 6, 1892.
Sevastopol	SS. Peter and Paul's Congregation	Sept. 25, 1884.
Seymour	St. John's Congregation	April 9, 1896.
Sharon	St. Martin's Congregation	Jan. 22, 1897.
Shawano	Sacred Heart Congregation	July 27, 1889.
Stephensville	St. Patrick's Congregation	Nov. 23, 1883.
Stevens Point	St. Joseph's Congregation	Jan. 24, 1885.
Stevens Point	St. Peter's Congregation	Aug. 30, 1883.
Stevens Point	St. Stephen's Congregation	Aug. 30, 1883.
Stockbridge	St. Elizabeth's Congregation	Jan. 30, 1884.
Stockbridge	St. Mary's Congregation	Dec. 17, 1883.
Sturgeon Bay	St. Joseph's Congregation	Nov. 30, 1883.
Tigerton	St. Anthony's Congregation	Oct. 16, 1893.
Tomahawk	St. Mary's Congregation	Jan. 5, 1891.
Two Rivers	St. Luke's Congregation	Nov. 23, 1883.
Waupaca	St. Mary Magdalen's Congregation	Jan. 27, 1890.
Wausau	Immaculate Conception Congregation	Dec. 15, 1883.
Wausaukee	St. Augustine's Congregation	Oct. 26, 1896.
Whitelaw	St. Michael's Congregation	Feb. 12, 1897.
Wrightstown	St. Paul's Congregation	Nov. 30, 1883.

Diocese of La Crosse.

Complete list of Churches incorporated under the laws of the State of Wisconsin and existing within the diocese of La Crosse, to-wit.:

Places Alphabetically Arranged.	Exact Title of Incorporation.	When Incorporated.
Arcadia	"Catholic Congregation of Our Lady of Perpetual Help"	Dec. 20, 1890.
Ashland	"St. Agnes' Catholic Congregation"	Oct. 10, 1885.
Athens	"Holy Redeemer's Catholic Congregation"	Oct. 19, 1896.
Baraboo	"St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation"	Jan. 16, 1885.
Big River	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"	March 27, 1895.
Bloomer	"St. Paul's Catholic Congregation."	March 18, 1887.
Boyd	"St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation"	March 11, 1895.
Bruce	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"	Jan. 27, 1897.
Cazenovia	"The Congregation of St. Anthony De Padua"	Dec. 21, 1883.
Chetek	"Catholic Congregation of St. Boniface"	Aug. 27, 1889.
Chippewa Falls	"Notre Dame Parish"	Jan. 21, 1885.
Chippewa Falls	"St. Charles Borromeo's Catholic Congregation"	March 18, 1887.
Chippewa Falls	"Holy Ghost Catholic Congregation"	May 7, 1887.
Clayfield	"Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help"	Feb. 27, 1895.
Colby	"St. Kilian's Catholic Congregation"	Nov. 13, 1888.
Cumberland	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"	Jan. 8, 1885.
Delona	"All Saints' Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Dorchester	"St. Louis' Catholic Congregation"	Feb. 5, 1895.
Durand	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"

(Incorporated since the completion of this list.)

Places Alphabetically Arranged.	Title of Incorporation.	When Incorporated.
Eau Claire	"St. Patrick's Catholic Congregation"	Aug. 28, 1884.
Eau Claire	"The Church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus"	Feb. 19, 1886.
Eau Galle	"St. Henry's Congregation"	Dec. 6, 1883.
Edson	"Sacred Heart of Jesus Catholic Congregation"	Feb. 15, 1887.
El Paso	"St. Joseph's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Elroy	"St. Patrick's Congregation"	*Jan. 21, 1885. Sept. 21, 1894.
Erin	"St. Patrick's Church"	Dec. 29, 1886.
Fairchild	"St. John's Catholic Congregation"	Feb. 20, 1888.
Fountain City	"The Congregation of the Immaculate Conception"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Glencoe	"St. Joseph's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Hammond	"The Catholic Congregation of St. Mary's Im. Conception"	Dec. 12, 1889.
Hewitt	"St. Michael's Catholic Congregation"	July 12, 1892.
Hudson	"St. Patrick's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Humbird	"St. Joseph's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Independence	"SS. Peter and Paul's Catholic Congregation"	Aug. 15, 1888.
Iron River	"The St. Michael's Catholic Congregation"	June 14, 1893.
Junction City	"St. Michael's Catholic Congregation"	March 11, 1897.
Keyesville	"The Congregation of the Nativity of B. M. V."	Dec. 24, 1883.
La Crosse	"St. Mary's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
La Crosse	"St. Wenceslaus Catholic Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
La Crosse	"St. Joseph's Catholic Cathedral"	Feb. 16, 1884.
La Crosse	"The Holy Cross Catholic Congregation"	April 15, 1885.
La Crosse	"St. James' Catholic Congregation"	March 15, 1887.
La Crosse	"Holy Trinity's Catholic Congregation"	*July 5, 1887. Feb. 18, 1893.
La Crosse	"St. John Baptist's Catholic Congregation"	Sept. 28, 1887.
Loyal	"St. Balthasar's Catholic Congregation"	May 22, 1894.
Lyndon Station	"St. Mary's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Marathon City	"The Congregation of the Nativity of the B. V. M."	Dec. 4, 1883.
Marshfield	"St. John Baptist Congregation"	Oct. 6, 1883.
Mauston	"St. Patrick's Congregation"	Nov. 24, 1884.
Medford	"The Catholic Congregation of Our Lady of the Rosary"	March 7, 1890.
Menomonie	"St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation"	Nov. 19, 1884.
Milladore	"St. Wenceslaus' Catholic Congregation"	March. 23, 1895.
Minong	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"	Jan. 23, 1896.
Mosinee	"St. Paul's Catholic Church"	Oct. 20, 1886.
Necedah	"St. Francis of Assissi's Catholic Congregation"	Nov. 1, 1892.
Neillsville	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"	Nov. 22, 1884.
New Richmond	"Church of the Im. Conception of the Blessed Virgin"	Aug. 11, 1883.
North Creek	"St. Michael's Catholic Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Phillips	"St. Patrick's Catholic Congregation"	Dec. 22, 1888.
Pine Creek	"The Sacred Heart and St. Wenceslaus Catholic Cong."	Oct. 2, 1885.
Pittsville	"The Catholic Congregation of Pittsville"	Oct. 23, 1896.
Poniatowski	("St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation") Holy Family*	March 8, 1887.
Prairie du Chien	"St. Gabriel's Catholic Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Prairie du Chien	"St. John Nepomuc Catholic Congregation"	April 18, 1893.
Prentice	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"	March 9, 1896.
Rib Lake	"St. John the Baptist's Catholic Congregation"	July 18, 1896.
Rice Lake	"St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation"	April 9, 1891.
Richland Center	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation"	March 28, 1892.
Rising Sun	"St. James' Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
River Falls	"St. Bridget's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Rozellville	"St. Andrew's Catholic Congregation"	April 16, 1894.
Saint Joseph's	"St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation"	Feb. 26, 1887.
Saint Mary's	"The Nativity B. M. V."	Dec. 24, 1883.
Sauk City	"St. Aloysius' Congregation"	Dec. 6, 1883.
Seneca	"St. Patrick's Church"	Jan. 1, 1886.
Shell Lake	"St. Joseph's Catholic Congregation"	May 11, 1895.
Sparta	"St. Patrick's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Stanfold	"The Catholic Congregation of St. Mary's of Lourdes"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Superior City	"St. Francis Xavier's Catholic Congregation"	Feb. 6, 1895.
Thorp	"St. Bernard's Catholic Congregation"	Aug. 23, 1893.
Tilden	"St. Peter's Congregation"	Feb. 11, 1887.
Tomah	"St. Mary's Congregation"	Dec. 24, 1883.
Turtle Lake	"St. Ann's Congregation"	March 26, 1892.

Places Alphabetically Arranged.	Title of Incorporation.	When Incorporated.
Washburn.....	"St. Louis' Catholic Congregation".....	Aug. 26, 1887.
Waumandee.....	"St. Boniface's Congregation".....	Nov. 24, 1884.
West Superior...	"Catholic Congregation of the Sacred Heart of Jesus".....	March 29, 1889.
West Superior...	"St. Patrick's Catholic Congregation".....	Aug. 9, 1892.
West Superior....	"St. Mary's Catholic Congregation".....	Jan. 21, 1893.
West Superior...	"St Joseph's Catholic Congregation".....	Aug. 5, 1895.
West Superior...	"St. John's Catholic Congregation".....	Sept. 12, 1896.
Wilton.....	"St John Baptist's Catholic Congregation".....	May 4, 1892.
Winfield.....	"St. Patrick's Catholic Congregation".....	Oct. 15, 1886.

*Indicates changed title.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART IX.

Catholic Institutions—Archdiocese of Milwaukee.

The Provincial Seminary of St. Francis of Sales, St. Francis.

THE Seminary of St. Francis is situated near to the little village of that name in the Town of Lake, where it commands a beautiful and charming view of Lake Michigan. At all times a most suitable spot for the establishment of such an institution, it is during the summer months that this particular locality is seen to the best advantage; when the bright cool green of its gently rolling surface, attractive sparkle of many rippling streams and beautiful and varied foliage of numerous handsome groves combine in forming a landscape which cannot fail to please the eye and gladden the heart of Nature's severest critic.

The beginning of this institution dates back to the year 1853, when the Rev. Joseph Salzmann, D. D., and Rev. Michael Heiss, two zealous and learned priests of the Diocese of Milwaukee, appeared before their Bishop, the Right Rev. John Martin Henni, and volunteered to erect a seminary for the education of priests. Their object in undertaking this great and arduous task was to provide for the spiritual welfare of the thousands of Catholics scattered in the different parts of this young and flourishing State. On a missionary tour to the western part of Wisconsin and Eastern Iowa, undertaken in the early part of 1853, the Rev. J. Salzmann witnessed and sensibly felt the spiritual desolation of Catholics; from all parts they raised the cry for help: "Send us priests to teach our children the holy faith of our fathers and break the bread of life to our starving souls."

The work of building a seminary was, however, by no means easy and encouraging, especially in those days when Catholics were poor and had to struggle and toil for their mere existence. But the holy enthusiasm and zeal of Dr. Salzmann soon conquered these obstacles and secured success, where many others would have lost courage. Forthwith he appealed to the generosity of the Catholic people, and this appeal was not made in vain. To secure the necessary funds, he set out on a collecting tour, which embraced not only the State of Wisconsin, but all the neighboring states: Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois and Michigan—and extended as far as St. Louis, Cincinnati, New Orleans and New York. In 1855 the building was begun, and on January 29, 1856, the feast of St. Francis of Sales, the seminary was solemnly blessed and opened by the Bishop of Milwaukee, the Right Rev. John Martin Henni. In the first scholastic year it numbered twenty-five students. The Very Rev. Michael Heiss was appointed first Rector, and the Rev. J. Salzmann Procurator of the seminary. Soon the number of students increased and the good work steadily prospered despite the continual financial troubles and embarrassments which during the first years of its history often imperiled the existence of St. Francis Seminary.

When in 1868 Rector Heiss, who for upwards of twelve years had adorned the institution by the renown of his learning and piety, was appointed first Bishop of the new Diocese of La Crosse, the Very Rev. J. Salzmann succeeded him as the second Rector. He held this important office until January, 1874, when his premature and much-lamented death inflicted an unexpected loss, long felt by the institution which he had founded, and which mainly owed its success and prosperity to his untiring energy and enlightened zeal.

Summing up Dr. Salzmann's accomplishments, Father La Boule, a professor at the Salesianum for upwards of nineteen years, and an able writer, says: "Dr. Salzmann was a profound theologian, historian and far-famed pulpit orator," and possessed a charm of manner, a buoyancy of spirit, that made him the loving father of the young and the poor—as it made him a prince in society.

"To provide for the future development of the Seminary, internal and external, an excellent choice for the rectorship was made in the election of Father Christopher Wapelhorst, who remained at the head of the institution until the fall of the year 1879. Five years only did Rector Wapelhorst remain, but in the history of the Seminary this period deserves being called 'lestrum faustissimum' in more than one regard. A large wing was erected to the south of the old central building.

This last addition to the Seminary is the completion of Salzmann's original plan—for the ample space gained thereby for the students of theology and philosophy makes it possible to have all the students and professors housed under one roof, all provided with separate rooms, etc., allowing still a separation between the classical and theological departments. The erection of this building, which was dedicated by Archbishop Henni on December 16, 1875, was an important step forward, which evidently was appreciated by the episcopate of the country, as it was by the students in attendance. St. Francis, about this time, rose to the highest fame as an institution of learning and priestly training. Evidence of this was abundantly given on various occasions about this time, such as the one when the elevation of St. Francis of Sales to the dignity of a 'Doctor of the Universal Church' was most solemnly celebrated at the Salesianum on January 28th and 29th, 1881, when a very large number of clergy and bishops assembled at the Seminary to celebrate its Silver Jubilee. On the former occasion Archbishop Ryan, now of Philadelphia, and Bishop Heiss, of La Crosse, delivered the panegyrics on the Seminary's patron; and on the latter, Bishop Spalding lectured on Christian Education, then broaching for the first time his plan of a Catholic University in the United States.

"During this period it was that Father Fagan found means for the establishment of a monthly College-paper, 'The Salesianum,' which was for some years a welcome visitor to former Salesians. Owing to the fact that several members of the faculty were called to other fields of labor, Father Wapelhorst was at times not a little embarrassed in the choice and acquisition of men to fill the vacancies. As a rule his selections were good. Among the new names found on the roll of professors during this period were these: Rev. Dr. Augustin Rohling, the eminent Hebrew scholar, exegete and author of learned works, Father J. Ming, S. J., Mr. Joseph Schultheis, Mr. John Singenberger, Rev. Anthony Roettger, professor of philosophy, Rev. Edward Fitzpatrick of St. Louis, professor of exegesis and English literature, Rev. Herman Leygraff, professor of history and master of discipline, Rev. J. J. Keogh, Rev. B. Elskamp, Rev. Joseph Kruse, Rev. Sebastian Favre, Rev. Gottfried Wuelfing, D. D., and Rev. Charles Becker, who has been since the year 1877 to the present day a professor of languages, mathematics and church music, and is now prefect of studies. Rev. Anthony Gerhard, Rev.

Priests' Seminary, St. Francis, Wis.

John Friedl and Rev. Henry Kampschroer were members of the faculty for a few years. Fathers Kilian Flasch and Peter De Berge returned after having been in charge of the congregation for a number of years.

"In the year 1873 the German Debating and Literary Society, known as the 'Albertus-Verein,' was organized among the students of German nationality and extraction, and almost simultaneously the English St. Thomas Society sprang into life. To these were added sometime after the St. James, English, and St. Boniface, German, societies for the junior students. The St. Thomas Society and that of Bl. Albertus were productive of much good, especially during the rectorship of Father Wapelhorst. The weekly literary and elocutionary exercises held before the society members, the numerous public tilts on the field of argument and the acting of classical plays at different intervals of the year, have served no little during the past twenty years and more towards the acknowledged reputation of St. Francis. The 'Albertus-Verein,' which, besides its general society-work, deserves especial credit for having ably assisted in cultivating and nursing among the students a refined taste for the German language and its literary treasures, this year, June 22d, will celebrate at the Seminary with its founders, Archbishop Katzer, the twenty-fifth anniversary of its existence. A splendid programme worthy of the occasion is to be carried out. For some years past, students of Polish nationality and extraction coming in considerable numbers to the Salesianum, a prosperous 'Polish Literary and Debating Society' is also in operation, doing excellent work. At about this time, too, it was that the reform in church music began in America. Dr. Salzmann certainly had such a movement in view when he erected the Pio Nono College and Teachers' Seminary, and early engaged for that institution the services of the eminent musician and composer of church music, Mr. John Singenberger. Father Wapelhorst warmly seconded the movement started and already considerably advanced. For that end he brought to the aid of Mr. Singenberger such men as Mr. Joseph Schultheis and Rev. Charles Becker, who both during successive periods accomplished much in the Seminary, educating the candidates for the priesthood in church music and song. St. Francis Seminary deserves credit for setting on foot in America a movement that, despite the apathy of so many 'friends of good music,' has succeeded in creating a better taste and branding with a stigma of reproach all spurious church music. It is, therefore, a source of purest joy to the Seminary to be chosen, this year, as the gathering place of the Society, where chaste song and melody in honor of St. Cecilia and in thanks to God will fill with echoes of jubilee the hallowed walls within which once stood the cradle of the society. Father Wapelhorst resigned his position in the summer of 1879, to enter the Franciscan Order in St. Louis, where he died A. D. 1891. Father Wapelhorst was a competent successor to Heiss and Salzmann, having been chosen at their suggestion. A man of rare and varied abilities, of kind and sympathetic heart, he was inferior to no one in attention to discipline and to the spiritual as well as intellectual advancement of his 'Salesians.' His work in the Seminary was more felt than seen, and his memory is held in deepest gratitude by the students of his time. He is the author of an excellent commentary on liturgy.

"Rector Kilian Flasch, who followed in the direction of the Seminary up to the year 1881, when he was chosen to succeed Bishop Heiss of La Crosse, while in disposition very different from his predecessor, was yet of the same spiritual mould and of similar intellectual endowments, having also combined characteristics of Heiss and Salzmann.

"His winning kindness, his extraordinary proficiency in theology, and calm but keen judgment made him at once 'the soul and center' of the Seminary, the fatherly counsellor and model of professors and students alike. He was well fitted for the rectorship, having been at different periods master of discipline, professor of moral theology, and spiritual director of the seminary. Soon after his accession to the office in 1879 he appointed the Rev. Joseph La Boule and Rev. James Bergen to fill vacancies in the faculty. For the chair of philosophy he also succeeded in winning the services of Rev. Simon Lebl, D. D., who, too, is still a valued worker at the Seminary. It was during the administration of 'good Father Flasch,' as he was lovingly called, that the Silver Jubilee of the Seminary was celebrated June 28th and 29th, 1881. The great concourse of clergy and other friends of the institution, and the addresses then made by eminent church dignitaries, strongly emphasized the fact that Heaven had crowned the work of the Salesianum with eminent success. The departure of Father Flasch from the Seminary in 1881, even though it was as a Bishop, was sincerely regretted by all. Often returning to his Alma Mater, he always remained a dear friend to his former confreres and pupils. The rectors so far mentioned, as well as many of the professors, who at different periods, from 1856 to 1881, had been the self-sacrificing teachers and spiritual guides of hundreds of docile pupils, are no more among the living. God, whose eye was witness to their many trials of soul and body, has wiped away the sweat from their brows and laid them to rest. But their spirit lives in the lives of many noble-minded priests of the Northwest. The spirit of Salz-

Professors of Seminary, St. Francis, Wis.

Rev. Jos. Selinger.
Rev. Fred. Schulze.
Rev. Leopold Drexel.
Rev. J. F. Pierron.

Rev. S. Lebl.
Rev. Chas. Becker.
Rev. Jos. Rainer.
Rev. Jos. La Boule.

Rev. Fred. Pomner.
Rev. B. Dieringer.

Rev. J. F. Ryan.
Rev. Louis Peschong.
Rev. Rich. Smith.
Rev. Jos. Berg.

mann and Heiss, of Wapelhorst and Flasch, was and is the guiding star of their successors in the rectorship, the Right Rev. Mgr. Augustine Zeininger and Very Rev. Joseph Rainer.

"A sense of propriety forbids the writer of this sketch to more than summarily describe the work done by the two following rectors of the Seminary.

"We believe no one more regretted the departure of Rector Flasch than Father Zeininger, who was elected by Archbishop Heiss in the former's stead. For many years previous Father Zeininger had charge of the temporal management of the Seminary, and the double burden incumbent on a professor and procurator rested on his shoulders. He had, by dint of good financial management, succeeded in gradually wiping out the debt incurred in the erection of the last large addition to the Seminary. His own buoyant spirit and rare talents made him equal to the task. Many improvements were made during this period, which extends from 1881 to 1887, such as the remodeling of the old building and attaching beautiful porticos and fire-escapes to suitable parts of the building. Previous to his rectorship he had secured for the Seminary an abundant supply of most wholesome artesian water.

"Changes in the faculty were made as follows: In the place of Dr. G. Wuelfing came in 1881 Dr. Otto Zardetti, later Bishop of St. Cloud, Minnesota, and now Archbishop and Canon of St. John Lateran in Rome. Rev. John Gmeiner returned to the Seminary, and, after the departure of Father Birkhauser, assumed the latter's place as teacher of Church History and Canon Law. Rev. Frederic Schulze, now professor of Moral Theology and Spiritual Director, arrived in 1886. In the places of Father Bergen and Father Fitzpatrick came the Rev. John Morrissey and Rev. Francis Ryan, and on the departure of the former, Rev. Father Reilly for over ten years held the chair of English literature, which for some years he taught conjointly with Canon Law and Homiletics. Father Zeininger, though always active either inside or outside the house, the 'man of business by habit' was considered an eminent natural philosopher, a practical teacher of moral theology, and a large-hearted, generous superior. Upon his resignation in 1887 he was made Chancellor of the archdiocese, and is now its honored Vicar-General.

"Always happy in its choice of rectors, the Seminary was eminently so in the selection of the one who, since the year 1887 to the present hour, has stood at the helm of the institution. The writer dare not offend the modesty of the universally revered rector, Very Rev. Joseph Rainer, by attempting even the soberest description of his labors for the Seminary conjointly with those of the late and present members of the faculty. During his fruitful career of over thirty years of almost unceasing and ever cheerful work as a professor, then at different periods of time as spiritual director, prefect of studies, and for eleven years as rector, he has indeed built himself a monument 'aere perennius' in the hearts of hundreds of his pupils. He is the historic link between the illustrious founders of the Seminary and the promising clergy of our days. With him are associated, some for many years past his confreres in the work, thirteen fellow professors ver Jubilee at the Seminary.

"He has often had reason to feel gratified over the results of the past, especially on occasions like the Reunions, celebrated at the Alma Mater by former students returning after each tenth year of their priestly life. A most striking evidence of the esteem and love in which he is held by them and the clergy in general was given in the year 1892, when he celebrated his Silvel Jubilee at the Seminary.

"Among the changes made during Father Rainer's administration, the annals show the following: Dr. Zardetti was followed by Dr. J. Buechler. Upon the return of the latter to Switzerland, Rev. Joseph Selinger, D. D., a former student of St. Francis, and a graduate of the American College in Rome, was called to the chair of dogmatic theology in 1890, which he still occupies.

"In 1887 Rev. August Schinner, now secretary of the Archbishop, came down to the Seminary as one of its professors, and in 1888 Fathers Frederick Pommer, professor of natural philosophy and mathematics, and Richard J. Smith, professor of English and Canon Law, were added to the faculty. A few years later some of the professors having assumed charge of the parishes, Fathers Barnabas Dieringer, Leopold Drexel and Joseph Berg were called to fill the vacancies, and at the opening of this scholastic year Rev. James J. Ryan and Rev. John Pierron were engaged as professors.

"The office of Procurator for a third time was entrusted to Rev. Henry Reinhart, and when finally his health no more held out, he retired to private life, leaving his portfolio in the hands of the Rev. Sturm, who for two years following ably managed affairs, doing much especially for the embellishment of the Seminary surroundings. Father Sturm, leaving his post to join the Jesuit Order, the present Procurator, the Rev. Louis Peschong, by request of the Archbishop, assumed charge of the temporal affairs of the Seminary.

"Between seven and eight hundred priests have gone forth from the Seminary into the missions of the Northwest, who, with very few exceptions, have proved faithful to their calling. Three of its professors have become Archbishops and eleven of its students have been honored with the mitre.

"During the past decade several seminaries and colleges with preparatory courses have been established within the sphere wherefrom the Salesianum recruited its students. Still the enrollment has ever remained surprisingly large; as late as 1890 the attendance being two hundred and seventy, and the capacity of the Seminary was taxed to its very utmost. Since then, despite the fact mentioned, and the pressure of bad times, the number of attendants has varied from two hundred to two hundred and fifty.

"The nationalities represented are those making up the Catholic population of Wisconsin and the Northwest; German, Irish, Polish, French and Dutch, and occasionally also the Russian and Scandinavian. In character the Seminary is cosmopolitan as is the Church herself, yielding, however, to none of her sister institutions in state or church in intensity of true patriotic sentiment. 'America is my country,' often said its founder, Dr. Salzmann, 'and in it I wish to labor and to die.' Applying this noble sentiment, our young clergy strive to rise to the highest plane of Christian and civil perfection expressed in the words 'Catholic and American.' On the apex of the central building stands out in bold relief the majestic figure of St. Francis of Sales. On the campus floats on a higher staff the spotless emblem of the Stars and Stripes; above it and the entire surroundings, visible over forest and lake, shines resplendent in the sun-lit sky the symbol of Him who is 'the Light of the world.'"

The Very Rev. Joseph Rainer, present rector of the Salesianum, was born on February 10, 1845, in Tyrol, Austria. He completed his classical studies at Bozen and pursued his theological course at Innsbruck. In August, 1866, he came to America with the Rev. Dr. Joseph Salzmann, who was then returning from a visit to his native country. Father Rainer was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop John Martin Henni on September 4, 1867, at St. Francis Seminary, saying his first Mass on the eighth of the same month in St. Norbert's Church at Roxbury, where the celebrated missionary, Father Inama, O. Pr., was then stationed as rector. After his ordination he was appointed professor at the Priests' Seminary, and since that time—a period of thirty years—has worked faithfully in the educational field, having held several professorships prior to the appointment to his present position as rector of the Seminary in 1887, at which time he succeeded the Right Rev. Mgr. Zeininger. Father Rainer is well known among Catholic educators as a man of high attainment and recognized ability. Of a modest and retiring disposition, he possesses in many respects a remarkable character, and during the long years of his connection with St. Francis Seminary, he has endeared himself to the students who have had the benefit of his counsel and advice, and is ever regarded by them in the light of a friend and father. Devoted to his work, he commands the confidence, respect and esteem of all with whom he comes in contact, and is most highly regarded and revered by his associate professors. He is the author of the "Life and Times of Dr. Joseph Salzmann," and some small works of a devotional character. In 1886 he took an active part in the Provincial Council held at Milwaukee, and for many years was a member of the synodal board of examiners. Under his able and judicious administration, the Salesianum has reached its present perfect condition of organization, for which it is so highly regarded throughout the entire country. In addition to his numerous duties as rector of the educational affairs of this institution, he is also professor of Liturgy, Hebrew, Greek and Latin.

The Rev. Frederick Schulze, spiritual director and professor of moral and pastoral theology, was born at Paderborn, Westphalia, in the year 1854. He acquired his studies for the priesthood at the University of Louvain, Belgium, after which he came to the United States in 1877 and was ordained to the priesthood during the same year. Later, he was active as rector of several congregations in the diocese of Alton, Illinois. In 1886 he was appointed professor of moral philosophy at the Salesianum, and three years later became spiritual director of that institution. Retired in his habits, he is a devoted and efficient worker in his particular calling.

The Rev. Charles Becker, who maintains the position of prefect of studies, and is also professor of Latin, Greek, mathematics and music, has been a member of the faculty of St. Francis Seminary since 1877. He was born in Westphalia, Germany, in 1851. It was in his native country that he also acquired the necessary education for his future calling, studying theology at Paderborn. Having partially completed these studies, he came to America in 1873, where he at once continued the necessary courses at St. Francis Seminary, remaining there as a student for three years. He was finally ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Foley of Chicago on June 10, 1876. After ordination he spent one year in missionary work at Elmhurst, Illinois, at the end of which period he was called to a professorship at St. Francis. Father Becker said his first Mass on June 15, 1876, in Holy Cross Church, St. Louis, Missouri. In addition to his other accomplishments, he is a finished musician, and has done much toward improving the character of church music during the past two decades. Father Becker has been director of the St. Francis Seminary choir for over twenty years.

The Rev. Joseph S. La Boule, professor of church history, homiletics, German literature and French, is a native of the Badger State, having been born at St. Lawrence, Washington County, Wisconsin, on January 28, 1857. At the latter village all of the family to which Father La Boule belongs were born, and there, too, his parents are buried. The family has since removed to Milwaukee. When of the proper age, he attended public and private schools of his native place, and entered the ecclesiastical seminary of St. Francis during the month of September, 1870. There, after a course of nine years' study, he was ordained to the priesthood December 1, 1879, saying his first Mass in St. Lawrence's Church at St. Lawrence on the eighth of the same month. It is worthy of mentioning that Professor La Boule was the first priest educated and ordained from the congregation of St. Lawrence. Prior to ordination, Father La Boule had already been appointed a professor at the Seminary by the rector, Kilian Flasch, late Bishop of La Crosse, his eminent knowledge of such duties obtained as an instructor in St. Aemilianus' Orphan Asylum fitting him particularly for that position. For a number of years, Father La Boule was professor of universal history, and also taught in other departments, being for five years master of discipline in the theological department, which position he resigned in 1897. Father La Boule is an accomplished scholar and has achieved distinction as a preacher and lecturer. Well known as an energetic worker at home, he is also an active member of the Catholic Summer School, held annually at Madison, Wisconsin, and of the Parkman Club of Milwaukee. He is the author of a recently published critical biography, "Father Allouez, the First Missionary in Wisconsin."

The Rev. Dr. Simon Lebl, professor of philosophy, sacred scripture, archaeology and homiletics, was born in Hall, in Tyrol, Austria, in the year 1847. He obtained his education at the University of Innsbruck, and was ordained to the priesthood at Brixen, Austria, in 1870. He came to America in 1881 and was at once appointed to his present professorship at the Salesianum. Five years later he took an active part in the First Provincial Council, held at Milwaukee, and is now acting under the appointment of Archbishop Katzer as "Censor librorum." A man of extraordinary learning, he is a typical professor, and a kind father to his pupils.

The Rev. Joseph Selinger, D. D., professor of dogmatic theology, Hebrew and Greek, was born in 1859 at Hannibal, Missouri, leaving his native place at an early age, he removed to St. Charles, in that State. Dr. Selinger acquired his classical and theological education in the Seminary of St. Francis, with which institution he is at present associated. In 1883 he was sent to Rome by Bishop Ryan, present Archbishop of Philadelphia, where he studied theology at the American College for a number of years under the personal direction of Mgr. Satolli, afterwards papal delegate to the United States. It was at the University of Propaganda in Rome that he received the degree of Doctor of Divinity, and was also appointed professor of dogmatic theology in association with Mgr. Satolli, which position he resigned to accept a similar seat in the American College, where he remained for one year. He was then recalled to St. Louis by Archbishop Kenrick in 1888, and appointed assistant pastor to the Rev. O. J. Hoog, of Jefferson City, Missouri, where he remained until 1890, when he received his present appointment to the chair of dogmatic theology at St. Francis Seminary, which position he fills with zeal and ability.

The Rev. Frederick Pommer, professor of natural philosophy, natural history, mathematics, German and drawing, was born near Paderborn, in Westphalia, in 1852, and removed to this country in 1875. Father Pommer acquired his classical education at Wuertzburg, Bavaria, and continued the necessary courses for the priesthood at St. Francis Seminary, from which institution he was ordained on June 24, 1879. Subsequent to ordination, he was engaged in mission work in the State of Missouri. Especially fitted for a professorship in natural sciences, he was in 1886 called to the chair of natural philosophy and mathematics at St. Francis Seminary.

The Rev. Richard Smith, professor of cannon law and the English language, is one of the youngest members of the faculty at the Salesianum. He was born near Darlington, Wisconsin, in 1862. Here he attended the public schools until nearly fifteen years of age, when he entered St. Francis Seminary in order that he might acquire the necessary education for the priesthood. This he accomplished after a course of nine years, being ordained to the priesthood in 1886. After ordination, Father Smith's first charge was the rectorate at Gratiot, Wisconsin, where he remained for nearly two years. Following a natural bent to literary pursuits, he accepted an invitation to the professorship of Christian doctrine and English literature in the Salesianum, where he at the same time conducted classes in Greek. Thus he continued until 1897, when he was appointed professor of canon law in the same institution.

The Rev. Leopold Drexel, professor of history, Latin, geology and mineralogy, was born at Calvary, Wisconsin, in 1859, and was ordained to the priesthood June 22, 1882, saying his first Mass on the second of the following month in St. Joseph's Church at Milwaukee. After ordination he was appointed rector of the congregation at Cassville, Wisconsin, where he remained until 1888. He was then called upon to organize a new parish on the west side of the city of Milwaukee, to be comprised of those members of St. Joseph's congregation who resided north of Lloyd street. Until this organization was completed, Father Drexel remained as assistant to the Rev. H. J. Holzhauer, rector of St. Joseph's. Under his personal direction and supervision, a church and school were erected and dedicated in honor of St. Boniface. Father Drexel remained with this congregation until 1892, when he accepted a professorship in St. Francis Seminary, where he proves to be a welcome and active member of the faculty.

The Rev. Barnabas Dieringer, professor of Latin, history and music, was born in the month of July, 1863, at Theresa, Wisconsin. Having completed the prescribed course of studies at the Salesianum, he was ordained to the priesthood in June, 1888. He was then appointed rector of the Catholic congregation at Newburg, Wisconsin, where he remained until 1891, when he accepted a professorship in the Salesianum, with which institution he has since remained, working much good, especially in his classes of music.

The Rev. Joseph Berg, professor of Latin and natural history, was born April 16, 1869, at Jefferson, Wisconsin. He acquired his education at the Provincial Seminary at St. Francis, and was ordained to the priesthood on November 21, 1892, saying his first Mass at St. John Baptist's Church at Jefferson, Wisconsin. Well known to his professors as a man of study, he, subsequent to ordination, was appointed professor at the Salesianum, where he has since remained.

The Rev. James F. Ryan, professor of English, Greek and Christian doctrine, was born at Whitewater in 1867. He attended the schools of his native place and also took a course at the State Normal School, located there, after which he entered the Seminary of St. Francis, from which institution he was duly ordained to the priesthood in 1894. For three years following ordination, he was assistant pastor to the Rev. H. F. Fairbanks, rector of St. Patrick's congregation, Milwaukee, but in 1897 received his appointment to the professorship he is now maintaining with competency at the Seminary.

The Rev. John P. Pierron, professor of Christian doctrine, arithmetic, geography and German, was born June 21, 1866, at Dacada, Sheboygan County, Wisconsin. He began a course of studies at St. Francis Seminary in September, 1885, and was ordained to the priesthood from that institution June 20, 1894, celebrating his first Mass on the first of the following month at St. Nicholas' Church, Dacada, Wisconsin. Soon after ordination, he was appointed assistant to the Rev. Father Decker, pastor of St. Anthony's Church, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Here he remained for three years, when he was appointed to his present professorship.

The material progress and prosperity of the Provincial Seminary of St. Francis of Sales is largely due to the skillful management of its former Procurator, the Rev. H. Reinhart, now of La Crosse, who discharged the duties of this important office for thirteen years. For two years following the administration of Father Reinhart, the temporal affairs of this institution were in the hands of the Rev. Edmund Sturm, who in turn was followed by the present Procurator and Master of Discipline, the Rev. Louis Peschong.

Father Peschong was born in 1858 at Belgium, Ozaukee County, Wisconsin. When about fourteen years of age he was sent to Calvary College, Calvary, Fond du Lac County, where he completed his classical studies. He finished his theological course at St. Francis Seminary, Milwaukee, and after his ordination in 1882 by the Most Rev. Michael Heiss, D. D., he was appointed pastor of Marytown, Wisconsin, where he built a beautiful church. In 1883 he was appointed pastor of St. Stephen's Church, New Coeln, Wisconsin, where he remained for five years, during which time he enriched that congregation with a church costing about $15,000, a beautiful parish house and a parochial school building. He took charge of St. Mary's congregation at Belgium, Wisconsin, his native town, in 1890, where he remained for two years, during which period he again built a handsome parish house. In 1892 he once more changed parishes, this time taking charge of St. Mary's Church at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, where, during a short stay, he made a few improvements on both house and church. In July, 1894, Father Peschong was called to St. Francis Seminary as Procurator. Here he immediately began work of improvement, adding an electric light plant, water power and additions to the steam heating service of the institution, as well as numerous radical changes in the interior of the building, which together cost not less than $25,000. In 1895 he combined with the office of Procurator that of Master of Discipline, which office he holds at the present time.

The Rev. Mathias Gernbauer was born January 2, A. D. 1825, at Pram, in Upper Austria. He studied for the holy priesthood at Linz, Upper Austria, and came to this country when a theologian in the year 1847, with Dr. Joseph Salzmann and the Rev. Fathers Urbanek and Fusseder, in order to devote his time and efforts to the American missions. This party left Bremen on the steamer "Rhone" on the 2d of August, and landed at Baltimore on the 19th of September.

The Rev. Father Gernbauer, together with the deceased Father De Berge, completed a two years' course of theology at Germantown, under the ardent care of Dr. Salzmann. Father Gernbauer was ordained by the Right Rev. Bishop Henni, whose acquaintance he had already made in Europe as a student. The ordination took place at Milwaukee in St. Mary's Church, A. D. 1849. Subsequently he became successively pastor of the congregations of Holy Cross Church, Ozaukee County, Holy Name Church, Sheboygan; St. Mary's Church, Milwaukee, and later worked faithfully and assiduously in the same capacity at Waterford, Beaver Dam, Manitowoc and Cross Plains; but at all times, whilst building churches and looking after the faithful scattered over a great part of the State of Wisconsin, his heart was with the Seminary of St. Francis and its founders. Being the first to graduate, a love for this institution seemed to be bred in him, and on all occasions when visiting his missions he gathered alms to assist his noble friend and benefactor, Dr. Salzmann; and it can well be said that, next to Dr. Salzmann, the humble and pious Father Gernbauer has collected most money for this institution.

After many years of hard work in the missions, he was assigned a professorship at the seminary, which position he filled with credit to himself and the institution for fifteen years. Though feeble and in poor health most of the time on account of early exposures in traveling from church to church, he was always at his post. Few professors ever enjoyed the good will and respect of the students as did the saintly Father Gernbauer, and even to-day, after many years, his name is familiar among the old priests of the Archdiocese of Milwaukee.

Chapel in the Woods at St. Francis, Wis.

But not only the students and priests, but also the lay people loved Father Gernbauer, and everywhere he seemed only to have friends, and his piety and joviality to the present day are watchwords in many Catholic houses in the State.

Above all the Rev. Father Gernbauer was devoted to the Blessed Virgin Mary, and never would the happy smile upon his benign countenance be more radiant than on the feasts of the Mother of God, when he would extol her virtues in order to induce the candidates of the priesthood to become her children. He was the founder and builder of "The little Chapel of the Woods" and the many pilgrims to that holy shrine can often be seen at the foot of the grave of the good priest, whispering a prayer for the repose of his soul, and thanking him for his work in erecting the "Way of the Cross" and the "Chapel of the Woods," which have brought blessings to numberless homes.

Of him it can truly be said that he was a "child of Mary," and ever and anon was he busy to spread the devotion to the Blessed Virgin Mary. His conversations, his sermons, his everything centered there. You might meet him anywhere, and he would speak of his mother, meaning the Mother of God; and his last words as he expired were, "Good-bye, I am going to Mother." He is now resting in the cemetery back of the "Chapel of the Woods," where he waits the Day of Resurrection.

Catholic Normal School and Pio Nono College, St. Francis.

THE Catholic Normal School of the Holy Family and Pio Nono College, at St. Francis, is another lasting monument to the unbounded energy and zeal of Dr. Salzmann, who founded that establishment in 1870. The story of this undertaking and its completion is an interesting one, and well worthy, in every respect, of this additional notice to what has already been said of the life's work of the reverend doctor. He, as it is known, was a man of exalted ideas and endless zeal—endless and tireless where the interests of the church were concerned, and any benefit to be obtained whereby its interests might be still more firmly established and advanced. Already, it will be remembered, he had founded the Priests' Seminary, and, after having seen that placed upon a basis of safety, with an evidently satisfactory future before it, he turned his attention towards the establishment of an institution for the education of teachers. But funds, at this time, were the most limited of all commodities, and upon their limited measure a most exhaustive draft had already been made. The friends of Dr. Salzmann, therefore, whom he consulted regarding this matter, urged him strongly to abandon the plan; not but what they believed in the benefits to be obtained from the active coöperation of such an institution, but they rather doubted the ability of even one as tirelessly energetic as he to carry to its completion a work of such evident cost and extent. He was not to be daunted, however, and friends having, to a great extent, materially deserted him—although he had the well wishes of everybody—he turned his attention to a broader field in which to obtain that assistance necessary for the completion of this cherished hope. So, leaving behind him all these elements of dissatisfaction and uncertainty, which would fain have impressed him with the impossibility of the undertaking, he went to Europe and laid the matter before King Louis I. of Bavaria, who emphasized his outspoken approval of the plan by a donation of three thousand florins. With this to still further reassure him, Dr. Salzmann returned to the United States, where he was remarkably successful in collecting funds for the completion of the work. He also obtained an unusual amount of aid at this time in funds, as well as personal endorsements, from the organization designated then and known to-day as the German American Catholic Central Society. And so, after a prolonged but successful struggle, the corner-stone of this new temple of learning, to which the reverend doctor often referred as his "Benjamin," was laid by Bishop Melcher, of Green Bay, June 12, 1870, and the building completed and dedicated on January 2, 1871. On September 14th of the latter year, Pio Nono College was thrown open for the students, affording them every possibility for obtaining a broad and liberal education.

Of this college Dr. Salzmann became the first rector and procurator, remaining as such until the time of his death, in 1874, when that honor was conferred upon the Rev. Theodore Bruener, who discharged the duties of that position until 1879. He was followed in turn by the Rev. John Friedl, from 1880 to 1881; the Rev. William Neu, from 1881 to 1884; the Rev. Charles Fessler, from 1884 to 1889; the Rev. M. M. Gerend, from 1889 to 1895, and the Rev. M. J. Lochemes from 1895 to the present time.

Up to the current year, the graduates of the Normal School number about two hundred, many of whom are teaching in Catholic schools throughout the country or hold the office of organist and choir master. Of the former students who took the College course, some have chosen the profession of law or journalism, while others have become successful business men. The total number of students enrolled at this institution since it was opened, in 1871, is about twelve hundred, the average annual attendance being from seventy-five to eighty. The school, as it now stands, is in every way admirably adapted for the work for which it is intended.

This institution offers to the students two distinct courses, the normal, or teachers' course, and the commercial, or college course. In the former, a particular feature is made of ecclesiastical music, that department being under the immediate direction and supervision of the Chevalier John Singenberger, founder of the American Caecilian Society, the sole object of which is the cultivation of church music.

The Rev. M. J. Lochemes, present rector of the Catholic Normal School and College at St. Francis, and professor of Christian doctrine, pedagogy, literature, history and elocution, was born in New York City on September 29, 1860. In the year following he was brought by his parents to Milwaukee. For a number of years he attended Holy Trinity parochial school. Later on he completed the course of studies at St. Francis Seminary, and was ordained to the priesthood August 5, 1883, saying his first Mass at Holy Trinity Church, on August 12, 1883. From 1883 to 1889 he was rector of the Catholic congregation at Random Lake and St. Michael's, but in the latter year was appointed to a professor's chair in the Catholic Normal School, in which capacity he remained until his appointment to the rectorate of that institution as successor to Father Gerend. Father Lochemes is widely and favorably known as the author of many valuable literary works; he is a fruitful and interesting writer.

The present professor of mathematics, Latin and drawing, and prefect of studies at the Catholic Normal School is the Rev. H. B. Ries, who was born in Milwaukee on May 17, 1859. Here, having attended Holy Trinity and St. Francis parochial schools, he entered the college at Calvary, Wisconsin, and afterwards the Salesianum, from which institution he was ordained to the priesthood on June 24, 1883. Father Ries said his first Mass on July 1, 1883, in the Capuchin Church at Milwaukee. After ordination he was appointed rector of St. Martin's congregation at Springfield Corners, then of St. Michael's congregation at Dane, Wisconsin, and in 1889 was appointed a professor at Pio Nono College.

Pio Nono College, St. Francis, Wis.

Another professor, the Rev. J. M. Kasel, who has charge of the Christian doctrine and German departments, was born at Fouhren, Luxemburg, on January 22, 1855. He studied for the priesthood at Luxemburg, being finally ordained on August 24, 1879. Seven years later, in 1886, he came to Milwaukee, where he was appointed assistant to the Rev. A. I. Decker, of St. Anthony's congregation. He remained in this position for seven years, when he was appointed a professor of the Catholic Normal School, in 1893.

One noticeable feature pertaining to the Normal School is the fact that it was the starting point for a marked reform in church music, brought about through the indefatigable efforts of the Chevalier John B. Singenberger. The first move in this direction was made in Germany, by the Rev. Father F. X. Witt, through whose instrumentality the Caecilian Society was organized, its object being to create a reform in church music in Europe. At about the same time the president of the German Caecilian Society was requested to name a musician qualified in every respect to lead this proposed movement of reform in America. The selection fell upon Professor Singenberger, who was at that time only twenty-four years of age. He is a Swiss by birth, and acquired his education, to a great extent, in the institutions of his native country. In 1861 he entered the Jesuit College of Feldkirch, Tyrol, where he devoted himself to studying the classics, philosophy and music. At a later date, he continued his musical studies, under the direction of Karl Greith, of St. Gall; in 1872 he removed to Regensburg, where he completed his musical studies under the direction of Dr. Witt, and other celebrated masters. After devoting a year to this purpose, he came to the United States, having received the appointment of Professor of Music at the Catholic Normal School at St. Francis. The first work undertaken by him, upon assuming these duties, was the organization of a Caecilian Society, in connection with which he had begun a gradual and consistent agitation in favor of musical reform. He also, in addition to his numerous duties as Professor of Music, published a number of compositions, including fourteen Masses, and a large variety of secular music. He is also editor of the Musical Monthly "Caecilia," which has an extensive circulation throughout Europe, as well as this country. The extraordinary services of Professor Singenberger were recognized by Pope Leo XIII. in 1882, when he was raised to the knighthood of St. Gregory. Since coming to this country, the chevalier has worked uninterruptedly in his position as Professor at the Normal School, having neither sought for nor desired other affiliations.

Group of Priests and Students, Pio Nono College, St. Francis, Wis.

Bookkeeping, commercial law and mathematics are taught at Pio Nono by Professor T. D. Hart, a native of Stockport, England, where he was born in 1847. Professor Hart has been connected with the college since 1889.

Professor of English and Science, J. C. Healy, is a graduate of the English course of the University of Wisconsin, and has been connected with the college since 1892. He is a native of Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, where he was born on February 25, 1866.

Rev. M. J. Lochemes, Rector.

It is with genuine satisfaction that the officers of the Catholic Normal School and Pio Nono College can point to the good work in the past, and it is this record of the past that bespeaks a bright future for the institution.

Convent of the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis.

THE place where the religious and ecclesiastical institutions at St. Francis became erected in the course of time was also selected by a religious community of Sisters and Brothers for their future place of residence. Under the direction of the Revs. Anthony Keppler and Mathias Steiger, seven Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis, together with the two Brothers, Anthony and Leo, left Eichstaedt, Bavaria, May 27, 1847, and emigrated to America. Upon their arrival they immediately came to Wisconsin, and, accepting the advice of Bishop Henni, bought thirty-eight acres of land in the locality south of Milwaukee, near the shore of Lake Michigan, which place was known at that time by the name of Nojoshing. Here they erected a house of primitive character for a convent, their means at that time being extremely limited. The two priests assisted the neighboring pastors in their parishes; Father Keppler became pastor of the congregation at New Coeln, while Father Steiger visited the congregation on the Beloit Road and other congregations on the shore of Lake Michigan, at Port Washington and Belgium. He, after a day's illness

St. Francis Convent, St. Francis, Wis.

Mother Antonia.
(DECEASED.)

succumbed to an attack of cholera on September 9, 1851, and was buried near the little convent at Nojoshing. Later his remains were removed to the cemetery near the "Chapel of the Woods." A strange fatality seemed to follow these devoted men, as, soon after, Father Steiger fell a victim to the same disease. This was a hard blow for the young community, which was now left without any spiritual director. Occasionally a neighboring priest visited the convent, and on Sundays they had to go to Milwaukee to hear Mass. When the Rev. Michael Heiss, subsequently Archbishop, returned from Europe in November, 1852, he tended to the spiritual welfare of this Order. When it became necessary to select a site for the Priests' Seminary, he chose a spot near to the little cloister, and upon the recommendation of Bishop Henni, forty-eight acres of land were bought adjacent to the property of the Sisters in July, 1853. Brothers Anthony and Leo spent the remainder of their lives in the services of the Order at the Seminary, where they assisted in many different ways, and the Sisters took charge of the housework. When the St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum was erected near the Convent, the Sisters also took charge of that. At this time an addition was built to the Convent. On July 19, 1863, the ceremonies pertaining to making the vows and taking the veil were observed. Later, it being the wish of Mother Antonia that the Sisters should not perform certain household duties, differences arose between the Professors and the Sisters which resulted, March 12, 1873, in her ordering them to return to La Crosse. The matter being left entirely to their own election by the Archbishop, thirty-six of the Sisters concluded to remain. It was also decided to place the schools in charge of the Sisters, for which purpose a number of candidates were suitably educated. As a result of this two schools were placed under their direction in 1878. In 1886 the Venerable Mother Antonia was made Superioress of the Order, which grew so rapidly under her fostering care, that it became necessary to increase the accommodations of the Convent, and on October 2, 1887, the corner-stone of a large new brick building was laid; the work was completed and the building dedicated October 10, 1888. Resting on a solid stone foundation, the high walls, the ornamented portico, and the Renaissance-like style of the southeast gable give to the square structure a pleasing appearance and evinces artistic appreciation. The interior, with its well-lighted, spacious corridors, corresponds perfectly with the monastic simplicity of the exterior. A two-story structure joins the old Convent with the new building. In 1894 a beautiful chapel was added to the main building, the corner-stone of which was laid July 19, 1894, and the dedication took place August 20, 1895. The spiritual welfare of this community was attended to by the Reverend Professors of the Seminary until the 27th day of August, 1896, when the Rev. G. Weiss was appointed the resident chaplain. The Order comprises at present one hundred and seventy-six members, and has charge of the housework at St. Francis Seminary, Pio Nono College, Archbishop Katzer's and Bishop Vertin's residences, and the pupil department at St. John's Deaf Mute Asylum, St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum, besides the direction over twenty parochial schools. Henceforth, the aim of this community will be the furtherance of Catholic education. On March 8, 1898, the community suffered a severe loss in the death of their beloved Mother, who had so faithfully directed the Order for the past twelve years. She was succeeded as Superioress by the Venerable Sister M. Thecla, on April 17, 1898.

Rev. George Weiss, Chaplain.

The Venerable Mother M. Antonia, O. S. F., late Superioress of the Franciscan Convent at St. Francis, was born January 7, 1855, at Catskill, Green County, New York, her name being Rosa Thren. On December 12, 1869, she entered the Order of St. Francis, and commenced her novitiate in the following year.

On August 15, 1873, she made her first vows. In 1886 Mother Antonia was elected General Superioress, to which high position of confidence and trust she was subsequently repeatedly elected. Through her prudent and zealous administration, much good was accomplished for the Order, among other things being the erection of the present large and handsomely appointed convent, which is a model of modern architectural design and comfort. At a later date a handsomely appointed chapel was added to this building. Firm and kindly in all things, she had an ever beneficial and wholesome influence over those who came under her immediate jurisdiction, or within the limits of her friendly consideration. She died March 8, 1898, and was buried in the cemetery near to the chapel in the woods at St. Francis.

St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum, St. Francis, Wis.

ST. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum at St. Francis was founded a few years after the Priests' Seminary was erected. The institution is a result of the benevolence and philanthropic character of the pioneer missionaries and laity of Wisconsin, and in the group of instittutions which adorn St. Francis it takes a prominent place. Situated across the valley, southeast from the Ecclesiastical Seminary, this institution commands a fine view of Lake Michigan and the surrounding woods and valleys. The location, as well as the building, is well adapted for a sheltering and hospitable roof for the poor orphans. The asylum, as it now stands, is the fruit of half a century of labor on the part of the directors, and represents numberless gifts of charitable Catholics of Wisconsin. Bishop Henni, as early as 1850, appealed to Catholics for aid in establishing a home for children bereft of their parents and his appeal was nobly responded to. A temporary asylum built in the City of Milwaukee was put in charge of the Sisters of Charity, but the number of orphans applying for admission became so large, and the expense of supporting them in the city so great, that it was deemed necessary to build a separate asylum for the boys near St. Francis, and place them in charge of the Sisters residing there. An unpretentious frame house was erected in 1854, and by 1861 and 1866, the number of orphans having increased to about 85, additions were built. In 1873 a large brick building was put up at a cost of about $15,000. It was in that year that the St. Peter's C. B. U. of Milwaukee won the $3,000 chance in a lottery instituted for the purpose of rapidly defraying the debt incurred for the new building and presented the entire amount to the Asylum. Each year collections were taken up in every German Catholic Church for the benefit of the asylum, a great number of donations coming also from private persons. Societies, too, have been formed in German parishes which do very creditable work for the maintenance of the asylum. In order to establish a home for those boys who by vagrancy or other cause had become charges of the State and had consequently been sent to State Reform Schools, a number of clergymen and laymen, in the year 1878, formed a corporation under Chapter 325 of the laws of Wisconsin, regulating the establishment of industrial schools. A Board of Directors was chosen of which the Rev. Wapelhorst, rector of the Priests' Seminary, was elected president; Mr. Charles Holzhauer, secretary and Mr. Aug. Greulich, Jr., treasurer. Thus the "Boys' Home" was established in connection with the St. Aemilianus Asylum and a suitable place was opened for deserted and vagrant children. Besides other advantages offered, a thorough Catholic training of the boys is here assured, the best remedy to reform them. The "Boys' Home" receives neither support from State funds nor from private parties, but sustains itself from the money paid to the directors by counties from which the boys are committed. The amount paid for each boy is $2 or $2.50 a week, which averages a little over $100 a year. This institution has thus far been a success. Many a boy who might otherwise be doomed to imprisonment or wanton life is rescued from danger and made a useful citizen. The young boys attend the school and do some work in the house or on the adjoining farm. In 1885 a wing was added on the south side of the building and a spacious chapel erected south of the asylum. In 1889 the entire building was enlarged and furnished throughout with steam heating and other improvements which amounted to $17,000. The length of the building was now 192 feet and the width 68 feet, and the chapel was 48 feet long and 30 feet wide. In the year 1892 a large square structure on the northeast side was erected. During the night of December 10, 1895, all of the buildings except the last one erected were totally destroyed by fire. Of this great loss but $31,677 was recovered from insurance companies. Plans were at once made for a new building, on which $47,000 was expended. The corner stone of this structure was laid on June 28, 1896, by Msgr. A. Zeininger and on the 13th of December the same year the dedication took place, Archbishop Katzer of Milwaukee officiating. The building is a model for an institution of its kind, and is provided with all of the latest improvements. It has a 60 foot front and is 110 feet deep. According to the last yearly report one hundred and sixty-five boys were in the asylum. Instruction in all the elementary branches is given by the Sisters. The Christian doctrine, in former years imparted by theologians of St. Francis Seminary and afterwards by the Rev. Fathers Elskamp, La Boule and Smith, professors of the seminary, has since 1894 been imparted by the Rev. Norbert Kersten, chaplain of the asylum, who has been entrusted with the religious education of the boys. The present officers of the institution are: Archbishop Katzer, president; Anton Porth, vice-president; Rev. A. Zeininger, director ex-officio; August Rebhan, secretary; Philip Host, treasurer; Anton Gmeiner, Peter Schmitz, Peter Lehman, F. P. Adler, Peter Van Beck, J. F. Girmscheid, Joseph P. Singers and Theodore Bohmann, board of directors.

St. Aemilianus' Orphan Asylum, St. Francis, Wis.

Very Rev. Norbert Kersten, Chaplain.

St. John's Institute for Deaf Mutes, St. Francis, Wis.

THE Catholic Church has always been a friend and champion of the unfortunate and oppressed. No class escapes her notice, and in the face of incomprehensible difficulties, she has made provision for the poverty-stricken, the blind, the insane, the feeble-minded, the deaf and dumb, and, in short, all those who through misfortune become the objects of charity.

It was the Roman Catholic Church and the acts of her ministers that changed all the existing notions regarding the status of the deaf mute in society. The Roman and anti-Christian notion was, that the deaf mute could not be educated, and, consequently, the treatment received by him was harsh in the extreme. From the dawn of Christianity, we find examples of deaf mutes educated by the bishops and priests of the Church. Finally, the work was taken up systematically by the Fathers Pedro Ponce and Abbe De l'Pee.

Their efforts led to the organization of schools throughout Europe, and in the course of time, both lay and clerical educators became interested in the work. It was, too, from the school of Abbe De 'l 'Pee that the first American deaf mute educator acquired the method of obtaining the knowledge which has made the school that bears his name famous.

The Catholic Church has not only been the forerunner and disseminator of deaf mute education, but continues still with all her powerful influence to educate and elevate the poor unfortunate mute. With this purpose in view, the St. John's Institute for deaf mutes was organized. Less than thirty years after the admission of Wisconsin into the Union, and in the thirty-second year after the establishment of the bishopric in Milwaukee, this institute came into existence. It was organized in the year 1876, by the Rev. Theodore Bruenner, and has consequently passed the twenty-first year of its existence. Through this period, the institute has been successfully presided over by the Rev. Theodore Bruenner, the Rev. John Friedl, the Rev. Charles Fessler, and the present rector, the Rev. M. M. Gerend, who has presided since 1889. It has gone on from its humble beginnings in rooms above the gymnasium of the Pio Nono College, until it has reached the finished and fully equipped structure of to-day. During the past few years, the chapel has been finished, the building renovated and the grounds improved and ornamented. All this has been accomplished with no little difficulty. Extraordinary efforts had to be made both to secure funds for the improvement of the buildings and the sustenance of the school. Several times it appeared as if these difficulties would close the institution, yet, through the goodness of God, they have been met thus far, and the home stands to-day a refuge for all those unfortunates who stand in need of its beneficent influences.

St. John's Deaf Mute Institute, St. Francis, Wis.

The institute is a three-story building of cream-colored brick, situated at the village of St. Francis, just south of the Catholic Normal School and the Pio Nono College. It is heated by furnaces, provided with ample ventilation and has kept in touch with all the modern improvements. In a wing south of the main building, is the chapel, dedicated to the memory of the late Most Rev. Archbishop Heiss, one of the warmest friends of the deaf mute. This chapel is most neatly finished and furnished. A neat little altar, statuettes, sculpture, pews, and ornamentations, the work of the deaf mutes, bears evidence to the skill they have acquired while attending St. John's Institute; for it is the policy of the institute, so far as possible, to have the young mutes acquire some trade which may be a means of sustenance to them in after life.

The grounds have been beautified and made attractive by the deaf mutes, under the supervision of their rector. To the east side, a little lake has been constructed, which is adorned with little islands and rustic bridges connecting them. The lawn has been embellished with numerous beds of flowers, trees and mounds. A large cage has been placed in the center of the lawn, in which is a happy family, consisting of a variety of animals. It is a delight to see the mutes watching these animals and feeding them through the wire, with grass, leaves and nuts, which they gather in the neighboring wood. A shrine of the Blessed Virgin has also been constructed there.

Through their misfortune the deaf mutes are unable to enjoy their homes, as other children, but it is the aim of St. John's Institute, by its motherly care and pleasant surroundings, to supply as far as may be the pleasures and delights of other children. Here they are a happy family, bound together by common bonds of sympathy and misfortune. Under well-directed intelligent guides, they develop in understanding, until the misfortune, so far as human agency can make it, is at a minimum.

The school curriculum includes not only the secular branches, reading, writing, geography, arithmetic, etc., but also the truths of religion. This is very helpful, for the deaf mute usually is headstrong and obstinate, and the knowledge of God and His religion aids materially in governing them and building up their character. The child's case is studied upon his arrival at the institute, and that method of instruction adopted which is deemed most advantageous in the individual case. So far as practicable, the articulation method is used. In cases where the children have been long at schools elsewhere, and taught in the sign method, their religious instruction must be continued in that method, for these children can remain but a short time in school. It is used also in the case of defective vocal organs. In other cases the articulation method is used.

The school is supplied with charts, maps, and such objects as are necessary in elementary work in school. In addition to school work, the girls are taught housework, baking, cooking, etc., needle-work, plain and fancy, and also painting. The boys are taught carving and shoemaking, and, by frequent use, attain dexterity in the use of tools. Thus the education is elementary, religious and industrial at the same time.

Deaf Mutes in the Class Room.

The girls' department is at present in charge of Sister Patricia, of the Order of St. Francis. With a devotion to her pupils characteristic of the Sisters, she seeks to bring these poor souls who know not God to a knowledge of their Redeemer, and to give them such instruction as will enable them to succeed among their fellows. How well she succeeds, the bright girls that have been, and are now in her care, testify. She is assisted in her work by Miss Anna Condon, a graduate of the school teachers of the articulation system.

Professor L. W. Mihm, a graduate of the Catholic Normal School, who has been in charge of the boys' department for nineteen years, is a striking example of a patient and devoted interest in a good work. His is a remarkable instance of the impression of the teacher upon the pupil. His stamp is left upon the pupils, in their hand writing, ways of thinking and action. He is their ideal, and when it comes to the problems of life, they look back to Professor Mihm and the rector of the institute for counsel and advice.

Professor Mihm is now assisted in his work by Professor Stettner, who takes charge of the articulation work. Professor Stettner was the first teacher at the school, which is known as the Phonological Institute, or School for the Deaf in Milwaukee.

Many of the children who attend the school are entirely unable to pay tuition and board. But no one is refused admission on this account. In the case of the poor, the child is received with the only condition, that the parents pay as much toward its support as they feel able to. The support of these children, and the expenses necessary for the management of the house, throws a considerable burden upon the shoulders of the rector. Means must be had, and for these means he must appeal to the charitable. The rector has published several books, and conducts a quarterly in order to bring funds. Bazaars and other entertainments are given, from time to time, and these, through the kindness of the friends of the institution, have furnished the necessary requisite to make it self-supporting. These friends and benefactors are remembered daily in Holy Mass, and in the prayers of the mutes. No worthier charity may be found, as a visit to the institute will convince.

Of the wonderful amount of good accomplished by Deaf Mutes at Work.

such an institution as this, no easier estimate, perhaps, can be formed than by referring partially to an address delivered by the Rev. M. M. Gerend, president and rector of St. John's Institute, in which much valuable and interesting data is given. He first refers to the name "deaf and dumb" as a misnomer, or at least misleading, on account of the definition generally accepted wherever it is applied. As regards this, he says: "A deaf mute is a person who can neither hear nor speak.

Deaf Mutes in the Carving Shop.

A person who was born deaf, or who loses his hearing at a very early age, is mute or dumb, also. The primary defect is deafness, dumbness, as a rule, being only the consequence of it. This we can readily understand if we watch a little child that is learning to speak. The child hears the sound and tries to imitate it, and, as it advances in age, it learns to imitate sounds, and finally succeeds in speaking words and sentences. It is thus that everyone of us has learned to speak. Now, the deaf mute cannot hear, and consequently cannot imitate sounds, and must, as a matter of course, remain mute, or dumb. You see, then, that the term 'deaf and dumb' is somewhat unfortunate, because it conveys a wrong idea. The affliction of the deaf and dumb is not twofold; it affects two organs, certainly, but only in the way of cause and effect. The ear is the guide and directress of the tongue, and if the ear is doomed to perpetual silence, the tongue is included in the same ban. Now, in order to correct this error, some of the authorities have adopted the term 'deaf mute,' which is now generally used in this country. The poor unfortunates whom we signify by this term have joyfully indorsed the use of it in preference to that of 'deaf and dumb,' because, as they say, this term is also used when speaking of an irrational beast. Thus we, for instance, say, 'the dumb animal, the dumb beast.' The deafness is either inherited or caused by sickness or accident. Deafness, when inherited, is called congenital. When caused by sickness or accident, it is called adventitious. It is estimated that ten per cent. of all the deaf in the United States spring from kindred parents in the following proportions, namely: when only one parent is congenitally deaf, i. e., born deaf, one child out of every one hundred and thirty children will be deaf, and when both parents are congenitally deaf, one in ten of the offspring will be deaf. The children of such as are adventitiously deaf, i. e., through sickness or accident, do not seem to be affected by the deafness of parents. Among the causes of adventitious deafness, scarlet fever is the most fruitful in the United States, this disease alone causing from twenty to twenty-five per cent. of all cases. Next to scarlet fever, comes brain fever.

Deaf Mute Girls at Play.

Deafness is much more common than it was formerly supposed to be. It was only when the schools for the deaf now in existence began their useful work, that the actual numbers of those unfortunates began to appear. Wherever schools were established, inquiries were made and inducements were handed out, and thus it was ascertained that the number of deaf mutes was alarming. Statistics show that in this country about one in every one thousand five hundred inhabitants is a deaf mute, which, when estimating the population of the United States at sixty millions, would show a result of forty thousand deaf mutes.

For these forty thousand deaf mutes we have in our country, which so well boasts of its humane character, about eighty schools, taught by almost seven hundred teachers and attended by about ten thousand pupils. Of these eighty schools, according to substantial authority, twelve are Catholic. These schools are as follows: St. Joseph's[1] Institute at New York, eighty-nine pupils; branch of the same in West Chester County, in New York, one hundred and forty-five pupils; another branch at Brooklyn, New York, sixty-two pupils; Le Colteaux St. Mary's Institute, at Buffalo, New York, one hundred and fifty-four pupils; Epheta School, at Chicago, sixty-eight pupils; School for the Deaf and Dumb, at New Orleans, twenty-six pupils; the Sunday School for Deaf and Dumb, Philadelphia, fifty-nine pupils; a mission school for deaf and dumb, also at Philadelphia, fifty-one pupils; Deaf and Dumb Institute, at St. Louis, Missouri, thirty-one pupils; St. John's Institute, St. Francis, Wisconsin, Archdiocese of Milwaukee, about forty-five pupils—a total of seven hundred and twenty-five pupils.

Deaf Mute Boys at Play.

From further statistics furnished, and taking as a basis for our supposition the fact that there are at least ten million Catholics in the United States, we learn, by adopting the same principle as heretofore applied, that seven thousand of these are deaf mutes. Of this number, it will be seen from the foregoing statement, less than one thousand are attending Catholic institutions provided for the care of those who are thus afflicted. This is certainly not as it should be, for while, as some may be led to believe, there are State Institutions thoroughly competent of caring for them in a material way, they are, when so instructed, as it were, placed outside the pale of the Church, and far removed from its better and strengthening influences. As previously remarked, stubbornness is one of the marked peculiarities and characteristics of deaf mutes. First impressions having a radical effect upon them, it has been found in a majority of cases to be a fact that this condition can best be overcome by appealing to and enlarging their faculties for reasoning. For this unhappy condition of theirs is not to be charged to a state of mental laxity or incapacity, but simply to the fact that the affliction to which they have been born, unfortunately limits them to a very narrow scope of ideas, as a result of which they attain that peculiar state of mind which in those not bereft of the powers of hearing and speech would be designated as dogmatical and absurd. In overcoming this undesirable attribute, those who have made a study of the disease are unanimous in the belief that it is to be better and more successfully handled through the medium of religious influence, than any other power which could be brought to bear upon it. For this reason, then, it is most desirable that these poor creatures, as far as possible, should be educated in schools or institutions which are able also to direct their moral forces and imbue their minds with such valuable accessories as are afforded by an earlier Christian training.

The work that is carried on at St. John's Institute is at another time very touchingly referred to by Father Gerend in the following language: "It is the work of Him who has declared, 'let the little ones come unto Me, and prevent them not, for theirs is the kingdom of Heaven.' It is the work that Jesus performed, when, during his sojourn upon earth, he laid his hands upon the sick and suffering, and by a word or touch restored them to health and sight and speech. On many occasions Scripture tells us He met the deaf mutes, but on none did He pass them by. Invariably He helped them. We call ourselves Christians, and, in order that we may lay due claim to this title, we must do as Christ has done—be Christians, followers of Christ, not only in name, but, above all, in deed. Our benefactors do this by contributing their mite in coin, and otherwise toward supporting a school where deaf mutes are taught, not only secular branches, but where they are made familiar with the teachings of Jesus and the doctrines of His Church, where they are shown the way that leads to Heaven and the means that will enable them to walk upon it. Were it not for our benefactors, this good work would be crippled and limited only to children of means, to the temporal and eternal ruin of the poor.

(1) These three institutions are State institutions in charge of Sisters of St. Joseph.

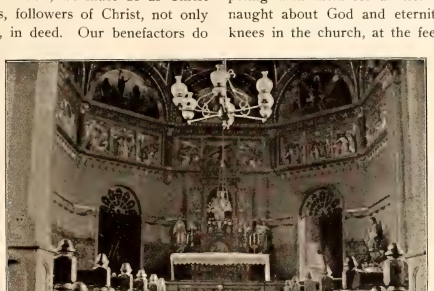
"Our benefactors are like so many apostles, indirectly preach the Gospel to the poor, expel that gloom and uncertainty from their minds which makes them miserable and disconsolate, fill them with hope and courage and love of God; like good shepherds, they lead back to the fold the lost sheep, extricate them from sin and peril, and make Heaven rejoice; they are angels who hover over suffering humanity, feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirsty, clothing to the naked, sheltering the homeless, soothing the weary, instructing the ignorant, warning the sinner, ever performing the most sublime work possible here below.

"The poor deaf mute who, six years ago, came to school ignorant, half-witted and silly, a fit object of pity and compassion, and a burden to his family, now leaves it well instructed, a good Christian and citizen, and a useful member of society. He was sullen and mum, now is cheerful, conversing with his hearing brethren by hand or mouth; he who was in the way is now seen side by side with others in the workshop or office, competing with them for an honest living; he who knew naught about God and eternity is now found on his knees in the church, at the feet of the priest or at the sacred rails, repenting for his sins, praising God, and devoutly praying for his benefactors.



Chapel at St. John's Institute, St. Francis, Wis.

"Allow me to remove, as it were, the curtain that separates this world from the next. Take a glance at the beautiful beyond, the place prepared for all the children of God; behold in the midst of the chorus of the angels and saints the deaf mutes made happy by our efforts; yes, behold these mouths, which were silent here below, chanting the praises of God forever! What greater satisfaction or reward can we work for? The thought that our feeble efforts have been instrumental in bringing about this happy result; the thought that we have assisted them in reaching their eternal destination —this thought, I say, must inspire us to do even more in the future, must encourage us to work till every deaf mute of Catholic birth can attend a Catholic school."

The Rev. M. M. Gerend, president of St. John's Institute, was born on June 17, 1858, at Sheboygan, Wisconsin. He studied for the priesthood at St. Francis' Seminary, near Milwaukee, and was ordained there on June 26, 1881, saying his first Mass on the Feast of the Most Precious Blood, July 3d of that year, in Holy Name Church at Sheboygan. From that time until 1889, he was pastor of Westport and Waunakee congregations. During his stay there he built a new church at Waunakee, and later one at Middleton, Dane County. He was president and procurator of the Catholic Normal School, Pio Nono College and St. John's Institute for Deaf Mutes from 1889 to 1895. In 1895, feeling unable to do justice to so many charges, he resigned as rector of the Catholic Normal School and Pio Nono College, and at present has charge only of St. John's Institute, attending, also, to the spiritual wants of two missions, i. e., St. Frederick's, at Cudahy, Wisconsin, and St. Bernard's Church, at Middleton, Wisconsin.

Rev. M. M. Gerend.

Father Gerend has devoted much time in behalf of the inmates of St. John's, for which institute he has published a number of books. He is also at the present time editor of the "Deaf Mutes' Friend Family Library," a Catholic quarterly, which is published for the benefit of poor deaf mutes.

Capuchin Institutions in Milwaukee, Wis., and Elsewhere.

IN July, 1869, the Monastery in Milwaukee was founded by the Rev. Ivo Prass. In 1870 Father Bonaventure Frey took charge of St. John the Baptist's in New York City, and dedicated the Monastery and new church there on June 24, 1872. The first Chapter was held at Mt. Calvary in Wisconsin on February 6, 1873. At this time Father Francis was elected commissary, Father Bonaventure Frey, first assistant, and Father Anthony Rottensteiner, second assistant. On November 5, 1875, the General canonically raised the Commissariate to a Provincial Custody, Father Francis Haas being elected Custos at the following Chapter, held February 17, 1876.

On May 28, 1876, the Rt. Rev. Augustine D. Corrigan, then Bishop of Newark, N. J., entrusted to the Capuchins the Church of the Assumption at Fort Lee on the Hudson. On June 27, 1877, the Rt. Rev. F. X. Krautbauer put them in charge of St. Joseph's Church, Appleton, Wisconsin. For a short period, too, they had hospices at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, and Point St. Ignace, Michigan.

Father Francis resigned at the Chapter held at Mt. Calvary on October 16, 1879, having been at the head of the Order for twenty years, and Father Bonaventure Frey was elected Custos.

On April 20, 1880, the church of the Holy Cross, opposite Calvary Cemetery, near Milwaukee, was dedicated by the Very Rev. L. Batz, Vicar-General. Here the Fathers organized a little parish, and at the same time performed funeral services at the cemetery.

On July 13, 1884, another church and monastery were erected opposite Mt. Eliott Cemetery, near Detroit, Michigan, and the year following the novitiate of the Order was removed from Mt. Calvary, Wisconsin, to this monastery, which has since become the residence of the Provincial.

The first Provincial Chapter was held at Mt. Calvary, Wisconsin, October 19, 1882, on which occasion the Very Rev. Bonaventure Frey was chosen Provincial. He was succeeded, October 15, 1885, by the Very Rev. Francis Haas, who, before the expiration of his term, was called to Rome, November 30, 1887, having been appointed Definitor General of the Order by His Holiness, Pope Leo XIII., as a reward for his labors for the progress of the Church in Wisconsin and other States. His successor was the Very Rev. Anthony Rottensteiner, who assumed the duties of his office on March 8, 1888. On August 27, 1891, the Very Rev. Lawrence Vorwerk became Provincial. The present Provincial of the Order, the Very Rev. Bonaventure Frey, has been in office since August 9, 1894. The Province now has six convents and three hospices. In Wisconsin they have four houses, convents at Calvary, Milwaukee and Appleton, and a hospice at Calvary Cemetery, near Milwaukee.

The Very Rev. Bonaventure Frey, present Provincial of the Order, was born at Herdem, Switzerland, June 12, 1831, and was ordained to the priesthood on June 13, 1854.

The Fathers of the Monastery at Calvary regularly

Capuchin Convent—View Looking Southeast.

Capuchin Fathers, Milwaukee, Wis.

attend the churches at St. Cloud, St. Joseph, St. Peter, Lamartine and St. Agnes Chapel at Fond du Lac. Other parishes which they have founded have since become able to support a resident pastor. The Fathers residing at Milwaukee attend St. Joseph's Hospital. The Fathers at Holy Cross (Calvary Cemetery) attend the County Poor Farm, hospitals and asylums at Wauwatosa.

Convent of the School Sisters of Notre Dame, Milwaukee, Wis.

THE Congregation de Notre Dame was founded Christmas night, 1597, in Lorraine, France, by Blessed Peter Fourier, a Canon of the Augustinians. He was born November 30, 1565, died December 9, 1640, was beatified January 10, 1730, by Pope Benedict XIII. and is about to be canonized by Pope Leo XIII. A branch of his congregation was transplanted into Germany, and, in particular, into Bavaria, where it flourished until the beginning of the present century. With numberless other religious institutions all over Europe, the Congregation of Notre Dame was suppressed at the beginning of this century, in the so-called "Secularization"; soon, however, it was restored to stronger life and greater work than ever before, in the cause of Christian education. Through the combined efforts of two saintly men, Bishop Michael Wittmann of Ratibor and Father Sebastian Job of Vienna, the Congregation was revived in 1833, with such modifications of its Rules and Constitutions as the greatly changed condition of the times required. Bearing the name of "School Sisters of Notre Dame," it is now the largest female order exclusively devoted to the cause of Christian education, with a membership of over 5,000 in Europe and America. About 80,000 pupils, in parochial schools, orphanages and academies, are taught by the School Sisters in America alone.

Invited to America by the Rt. Rev. Michael O'Connor, first Bishop of Pittsburg, Pa., upon the recommendation of the Redemptorist Fathers, the first four School Sisters from Munich arrived in New York, July 31, 1847. They established their first permanent home in Baltimore, Md., where the mother-house for the Eastern province—comprising their houses in Maryland, the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut—is located, since 1876. Since the year 1850, however, the principal mother-house for the whole American branch is the Notre Dame Convent, Milwaukee, Wis., with mission houses in the States of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and the province of Ontario, Canada. Besides Milwaukee and Baltimore, St. Louis is about to have a mother-house, now in the course of erection.

A few days before Christmas, 1850, upon the invitation of the Rt. Rev. John Martin Henni, the venerable pioneer Bishop of Wisconsin, the first School Sisters arrived in Milwaukee from Baltimore and Pittsburg. Mother Mary Caroline Friess, then only twenty-six years old, was their Superioress. She was a "valiant woman" in the best sense of the word. From 1850-1892, the time of her death, she governed her ever-growing community with a prudence, firmness and love that won for her the admiration and affection of all who learned to know her.

Christmas morning, 1850, Bishop Henni celebrated the first Mass in the little room arranged for the first convent chapel, on the corner of Milwaukee and Knapp streets. Jan. 2, 1851, Mother Caroline opened the first parochial school of Milwaukee, that of St. Mary's Church, on Broadway, then in charge of the celebrated Dr. Salzmann. Without delay she commenced to erect additions to the small (32x36 ft.) convent—"the house with the four chimneys," as it was popularly called—bought from a Presbyterian minister and paid for with the money donated by Louis I., the Catholic king of Bavaria. In the addition on Knapp street she opened a select day school, which was soon patronized by the daughters of the Juneau, Johnson, Hathaway, Furlong, Baasen, Greulich and other families; the additions on Milwaukee street were used for a boarding school, "St. Mary's Institute of Milwaukee." Both schools developed into large, flourishing institutions, in which many hundreds of young ladies of the city and from abroad received their education. To the sincere regret of the Sisters themselves, no less than their numerous patrons and friends, both schools had to be closed, the boarding school in 1886, the day school about six years later, for want of room; for, though the convent buildings cover one whole block, the immediate wants of the community as such require all the room they afford. They have to furnish accommodation:

1. To the older and invalid Sisters who have spent a great part of their lives in faithful work on the Missions and in their advanced years need and deserve a good comfortable home. The main building, along Milwaukee street, formerly occupied by the boarding pupils, has been arranged for their use.

2. To the novices, about one hundred of them, for their religious and scholastic training in schools corresponding to the public Normal schools.

3. To the candidates, varying in number from fifty to a hundred, for the same purpose as the novices.

4. To the aspirants, some forty to sixty. They are select pupils, generally such as in the Sisters' schools on the various Missions excel in talent and conduct and feel inclined to become Sisters themselves. They pass through a two or three years' course at the convent, after which they become candidates, if they so wish and have given satisfaction to their teachers and superiors.

5. To pupils at large, for music, painting and fine needle-work.

With the exception of this last division, hardly any of the inmates of the convent pay for their own support. Hence it is clear that Notre Dame Convent, contrary to the opinion of many, is not a self-supporting, still less a money-making, institution. In fact, it depends for its maintenance entirely on the Mission houses belonging to it in the various States above mentioned. The small surplus accruing from the industry and economy of its hard-working Mission Sisters is all needed for its own

It is chiefly to his munificence that Notre Dame Convent owes its principal branch-house in Wisconsin, "St. Mary's Institute" at Prairie du Chien.

The spiritual wants of the community were first attended to by Bishop Henni himself. Even in his old age the venerable prelate would pleasantly call himself "the first chaplain of the convent." The first resident chaplain, however, was the Rev. Anton Urbanek, a very learned priest of great musical talent. His beautiful compositions form to this day an important part of the sacred music repertory of the convent, while the well-deserved name of the Sisters in classical music continues to be the result of his zealous and thorough instructions. June 13, 1858, he was blown increasing wants, and the support of several poor Missions and orphanages. In its early financial struggles, the corporation of the School Sisters found faithful friends both among the clergy and laity of Milwaukee. Bishop Henni, Father Heiss, Dr. Salzmann, Father Lalumiere, S. J.,—all of them household names in Wisconsin—though themselves too poor to give financial aid, interposed their kind services in behalf of the Sisters, with such public-spirited citizens as Alexander Mitchell, John Furlong, the Hathaways, Hoffmanns, Baasens and others who were always ready to make loans to the Sisters upon favorable terms. Outside of Milwaukee the Sisters found a warm friend and generous benefactor in John Lawler of Prairie du Chien, one of the noblest men that adorn the history of the State of Wisconsin.

Convent in 1850.

to atoms in a steamboat explosion, on his way from New Orleans to St. Louis, whilst Mother Caroline, whom he accompanied on a visitation tour, was saved from the watery grave. His successor in office was the Rev. F. X. Krautbauer, Rector of St. Peter's Church, Rochester, New York. Father Krautbauer was of a very practical turn of mind, both as school man and architect. In both regards the School Sisters are greatly indebted to him. In 1875 he became Bishop of Green Bay, where he died in 1885. For the last twenty years the Rev. P. M. Abbelen has been in charge of Notre Dame Convent, with the Rev. Henry Niehaus as his assistant for over four years.

At the head of the whole congregation, since the death of Mother Caroline (July 22, 1892), is the Ven. Mother M. Ernesta as Commissary General, with four assistants; Mother M. Casimira Scheel, Sister Seraphica Mitchell, Sister Andrea Hack and Sister Anna Haas. Mother M. Casimira is Provincial Superioress of the Western province, assisted by Sister Emmerentia Eichhammer and Sister Borgia Meek. At the head of the Eastern province is Mother Clark Heuck, assisted by Sister Clarissa Schutte and Sister Bartholomaea Lindemann. The Superiors for the Southern province will be elected after the province is fully organized. The Mother Commissary General with her assistants is elected for a term of six years, the others for three years. All the head Superiors are elected by the Chapter Sisters, who, in their turn, are elected by all the members of the community entitled to a vote according to its constitutions. The elections need the approval of the Mother General, at Munich, and the Cardinal Protector, at Rome. For the rest, the American branch enjoys all the autonomy and independence from the European that could be wished for as conducive to its own efficient government according to the wants and circumstances of our country.

If the congregation of the School Sisters of Notre Dame, from its small beginnings in 1847, has within hardly fifty years grown up to its present magnitude and importance in the educational world, its success, under God's blessing and the wonderful development of our country, is principally due to the Sisters' own faithful and efficient work. It is not their ambition to shine in the world of letters, though not a few of them, whenever the occasion requires, give proof of true literary talent. But as a body, all they aim at is to be useful in the field of Christian education. They follow their own system of learning and teaching, not, however, in an exclusive, but rather eclectic manner. Whatever in other systems they consider an expansion of and an improvement upon their own they judiciously adopt into their own curriculum of studies and method of teaching. They endeavor to combine progress with conservatism. From the very beginning of their work in the United States, their method and system have found favor with those most deeply and intelligently interested in the work of Christian education, the Bishops and Clergy throughout the country. This is evident from the fact that thirty-two Archbishops and Bishops—more than one-third of our whole hierarchy—have invited the School Sisters into their Dioceses, and that every year a considerable number of applications from priests for Sisters has to be declined for want of teachers. Between the Western and Eastern provinces, the Sisters had, at the beginning of 1897, charge of 230 schools, of which eight are boarding schools, four orphan asylums, one institute for deaf mutes, one Indian school and 216 parochial schools.

The Main Building—Fronting West.

The congregation of the School Sisters is truly cosmopolitan. "E pluribus unum" is the School Sisters' motto no less than that of our country. As may naturally be expected, from their origin as a religious community and their field of labor as teachers, by far the greatest number of School Sisters is of German descent, born here; however, those Sisters of American, Irish-American, Polish, Bohemian and French birth or extraction form quite a considerable portion of the whole. The year 1897 was the golden jubilee year of the School Sisters in America. With gratitude beyond expression they look back upon their first half-century; with greatest confidence born of the holiness and necessity of their mission and their resolve to be faithful to it, they look forward into the future. May the blessing of God and the good will of men continue to be with them and their work forever more.

The Sisters of Notre Dame celebrated the Golden Jubilee of the Order in Milwaukee on July 31, 1897, on which occasion an impressive religious programme was carried out at the convent. Only a limited number of guests were present on this occasion, although most of the pastors of the local churches and immediate vicinity were among the number. The celebration began in the Chapel of Perpetual Adoration at nine o'clock in the morning, when Pontifical Mass was celebrated by Archbishop Katzer, who was assisted by Mgr. Zeininger, the Rev. L. Conrad, the Rev. L. Bushart, the Rev. H. Williams, the Rev. James J. Keogh, and the Rev. A. I. Decker, the latter also acting as master of ceremonies. The sermon on this occasion, an able and masterly discourse, was delivered in the English language, by Bishop Messmer, of Green Bay, in which he made it the occasion to pay a warm and well-deserved tribute to the patient and unselfish labors of the Sisters. A sermon was also delivered in the German language by Father Antonius, of the Capuchin Order, "Unity" being the subject. Later in the day, and during the afternoon, a reception was held for the visiting priests, the hall used on that occasion being beautifully draped with the National colors, and pictures of Mother Caroline, founder of the local convent, Archbishop Henni, Archbishop Heiss, Vicar-General Kundig, Peter Fourier, Pius IX., and Leo XIII. Other features of this notable occasion were the chanting of the history, or rather an historical review of the work accomplished by this Order, which was a poetical production from the pen of one of the Sisters, and was rendered by a choir of twenty. There were also two tableaux presented on this occasion, one representing the landing of the first twelve Sisters, in 1847, while the other reproduced the twelve church provinces in which the Sisters are now working. In this tableau, each province offered its greeting to the Madonna as the patroness of the Order, the provinces being each represented by one of the Sisters, who spoke the greeting. The celebration was terminated with a procession in the evening, a benediction being offered in the Chapel of the Perpetual Adoration.

The North Wing.

North Side of the South Wing.

Of the work accomplished by the Sisters of Notre Dame in the United States, and the great good effected through their indefatigable labors, some idea may be obtained by the following list, which comprises all of the institutions and schools with which they are connected in this country.

To begin with, there are three Mother-houses, one being located at Milwaukee, one at Baltimore, and one at St. Louis. The number of Sisters belonging to the Order in this country is two thousand, five hundred and fifty-seven, in addition to which there are three hundred and one candidates. At the present time there are two hundred and twelve Sisters, sixty-one candidates, and forty novices in the Mother-house at Milwaukee, among them being seventy-eight who have celebrated their Silver Jubilee as members of the Order.

The Milwaukee Mother-house comprises sixty-nine missions, thirty-nine being in the archdiocese of Milwaukee, fifteen in the diocese of Green Bay, twelve in the diocese of La Crosse, and thirteen in the diocese of Marquette, Michigan. In Milwaukee they have entire charge and supervision of the following schools:

St. Mary's School, since January 2, 1857, at which time there were one hundred and thirty children in attendance, who were in charge of Mother Carolina and one candidate. There are seven Sisters and one lay teacher in charge, the regular average attendance being four hundred and sixty-five.

Holy Trinity School, established March 19, 1854, with from sixty to eighty children in attendance, and one Sister in charge. The average attendance, at the present time, is three hundred and seventy children, who are instructed by seven Sisters and one lay teacher.

in charge. Four Sisters now direct the studies in this school, and one hundred and forty-five children are regularly enrolled.

Gesu School, established September, 1870, with three hundred children in attendance and four Sisters in charge, and the regular average attendance is four hundred and ninety scholars.

St. Franciskus' School, established September 4, 1871, with fifty-three scholars, now has an attendance of seven hundred and thirty-seven scholars, whose studies are directed by thirteen Sisters.

South Side of the North Wing.

St. Joseph's School, established October 2, 1860, with three hundred children, in charge of three Sisters. The present attendance is eight hundred and forty-three children, in charge of eighteen Sisters and one lay teacher.

St. Stanislaus' School, established September, 1869, with one hundred scholars, in charge of one Sister and one candidate. The present attendance is eight hundred and sixty-five scholars, in charge of ten Sisters.

St. John Nepomuc's School, established September, 1870, with ninety children in attendance and one Sister

St. Hedwig's School, established October 26, 1878, with from fifty to sixty scholars, and two Sisters in charge, now has an attendance of six hundred and twenty-six scholars, who are in charge of seven Sisters.

St. Wenceslaus' School, established December 15, 1883, with seventy children, in charge of two Sisters, now has an attendance of one hundred and forty-four children, in charge of three Sisters.

St. Michael's School, established January 3, 1884, with one hundred and twenty children, in charge of four Sisters, now has an attendance of nine hundred and seventy-five children, who are in charge of sixteen Sisters.

St. Hyacinth's School, established April 19, 1884, with five hundred and eighty-five children, in charge of three Sisters and two candidates, has at the present time a regular attendance of nine hundred and forty-eight scholars, who are in charge of ten Sisters.

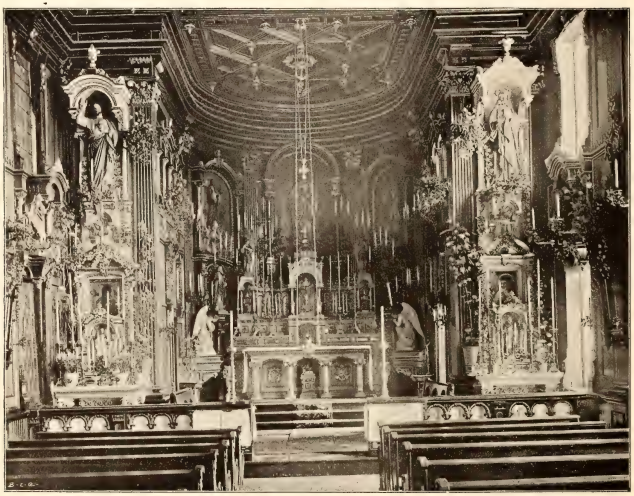
St. Augustine's School, established September 14, 1888, with ninety-two children, in charge of three Sisters, is now attended by two hundred and twenty-seven children, in charge of five Sisters.

attendance of four hundred and sixty-six children, who are in charge of six Sisters.

SS. Peter and Paul's School, established September, 1889, with ninety children, in charge of three Sisters, has now a regular attendance of one hundred and sixty-six children, in charge of five Sisters.

SS. Cyril and Method's School, established January 9, 1894, with two hundred and thirty children, in charge of three Sisters, now has an attendance of four hundred and two scholars, whose studies are directed by five Sisters.

St. Casimir's School, established November 11, 1894,



The Sanctuary.

St. Josaphat's School, established November 4, 1888, with three hundred children, in charge of three Sisters, now has a regular attendance of nine hundred and eighty-two children, in charge of eleven teachers.

St. Boniface's School, established November 21, 1888, with one hundred and twenty-nine children, in charge of three Sisters, is now in charge of ten Sisters, and has a regular average attendance of four hundred and seventy-five scholars.

St. Vincent de Paul's School, established December 28, 1888, with five Sisters in charge, now has a regular with two hundred and seventy-four children and six Sisters, is now attended by five hundred and sixty-seven children, in charge of ten Sisters.

St. Anna's School, established September 16, 1895, with one hundred and thirty-three children and four Sisters, is now attended by two hundred and thirty-five children, in charge of five Sisters.

In the State of Wisconsin the following schools are under the direction of the Sisters of Notre Dame:

St. Stanislaus' School, Berlin, established August 29, 1890, with an attendance of one hundred and fifty children, in charge of three Sisters, now has an attendance of one hundred and eighty-seven pupils, in charge of three Sisters.

St. Clement's School, Lancaster, established September 1, 1892, with an attendance of twenty-six children, in charge of two Sisters and a candidate, now has an attendance of ninety children, in charge of four Sisters.

Holy Cross School, Mount Calvary, Wisconsin, established July 26, 1852, with thirty children, in charge of one Sister and one candidate, at present has one hundred and fifty-four children in attendance, with nineteen Sisters in charge.

The Cross in the Convent Carden.

St. Henry's School, Watertown, Wisconsin, established December 3, 1857, with seventy-five children, in charge of two Sisters, now has a regular attendance of two hundred and ten children, in charge of five Sisters.

St. George's School, Kenosha, Wisconsin, established January 7, 1858, with sixty children, in charge of two Sisters, is now in charge of seven Sisters and one lay teacher, and has an enrollment of four hundred and ninety-five scholars.

St. Mary's School, Elm Grove, Wisconsin, established January 6, 1859, has now an attendance of fifty-four scholars and fifteen orphans, who are in charge of thirty-four Sisters.

Holy Name School, Sheboygan, Wisconsin, established September 8, 1860, with three Sisters, now has a regular attendance of six hundred and seventy-two scholars, who are in charge of twelve Sisters.

Immaculate Conception School, Burlington, Wisconsin, established December 7, 1860, with one hundred and ten children, in charge of two Sisters and one candidate, now has an attendance of two hundred and forty-five children, in charge of eight Sisters.

St. Patrick's School, Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, established September 10, 1862, with one hundred and twenty children, in charge of one Sister, now has an enrollment of three hundred and twenty scholars, in charge of six Sisters.

St. Francis Xavier's School, Green Bay, Wisconsin, established December 3, 1862, with thirty-five children, in charge of two Sisters and one candidate, is now attended by three hundred and ninety-five from St. Francis Xavier's congregation and one hundred and fifty-two from St. Willibrord's congregation, the entire number, five hundred and forty-seven, being in charge of fourteen Sisters.

Holy Redeemer's School, Madison, Wisconsin, established May 2, 1864, with one hundred children, in charge of two Sisters and one candidate, has now an attendance of three hundred and seventy scholars, in charge of nine Sisters.

St. Thomas Aquinas' School, Waterford, Wisconsin, established September, 1864, with forty children, in charge of two Sisters, has, at the present time, an attendance of one hundred and five, in charge of three Sisters.

St. Francis Xavier's School, Brighton, Wisconsin, established May 8, 1866, with two Sisters, is now attended by fifty-eight day scholars and eight boarders, who are in charge of four Sisters.

St. Kilian's School, St. Kilian's, Wisconsin, established November 14, 1867, with sixty-seven children, in charge of three Sisters, is now attended by one hundred and sixteen children, in charge of four Sisters.

St. Mary's School, Port Washington, Wisconsin, established September 2, 1870, with one hundred and thirty children, in charge of two Sisters, has now a regular attendance of two hundred and ninety scholars, in charge of six Sisters.

St. Francis Xavier's School, De Pere, Wisconsin, established November 19, 1870, with one hundred and twenty-four children, in charge of two Sisters, now has an attendance of seventy-five scholars from St. Francis Xavier's and one hundred from Immaculate Conception, the entire number, one hundred and seventy-five, being in charge of seven Sisters.

St. Mary's Institute, Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, established February 23, 1872, with ten boarders, under the direction of three Sisters, is now attended by fifty-one boarders, in charge of twenty-seven Sisters, who also have charge of St. John Nepomucene's School, which has an attendance of one hundred and twenty pupils.

St. Gabriel's School, Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, established September 2, 1872, with seven scholars, in charge of one Sister, has now an attendance of three hundred and forty-two pupils, in charge of nine Sisters.

Holy Rosary School, Kewaunee City, Wisconsin, established October 12, 1872, with thirty children, in charge of two Sisters, now has an attendance of ninety children, in charge of five Sisters.

St. Peter's School, Tilden, Wisconsin, established March 3, 1873, with forty children, in charge of one Sister and one candidate, is now attended by ninety children, in charge of four Sisters.

St. Stephen's School. Stevens Point, Wisconsin, established September 1, 1873, with one hundred and eighty children, in charge of four Sisters, is now attended by one hundred and eighty-nine children, in charge of six Sisters.

St. Joseph's School, Appleton, Wisconsin, established September 1, 1873, with sixty-eight children, in charge of one Sister, is now attended by five hundred and sixty-six children, in charge of eleven Sisters.

St. Mary's School, Menasha, Wisconsin, established September 15, 1874, in charge of two Sisters and two candidates, now has a regular attendance of three hundred and ninety-four pupils, in charge of nine Sisters.

St. Joseph's School, Oconto, Wisconsin, established October 22, 1874, with one hundred and eight children, in charge of three Sisters, has now an attendance of two hundred and seventy-five pupils, and eight Sisters.

Venerable Mother M. Carolina, Notre Dame.

St. Vincent de Paul's School, South Oshkosh, Wisconsin, established January 26, 1875, with eighty children, in charge of two Sisters and one candidate, has an attendance of four hundred and fifteen children, in charge of ten Sisters.

Our Lady of Lourdes' School, Marinette, Wisconsin, established September 5, 1876, with forty children and six boarders, in charge of two Sisters, has now an attendance of four hundred and sixty pupils and twenty-five boarders, who are in charge of twenty Sisters.

St. Patrick's School, Neenah and Menasha, Wisconsin, established April 2, 1877, with twenty pupils, in charge of one Sister and one candidate, now has an attendance of one hundred and fifty-one pupils, who are in charge of five Sisters.

St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, Green Bay, established June 27, 1877, with ten orphans, in charge of two Sisters, has now an attendance of one hundred and seventy orphans, in charge of twelve Sisters.

Holy Guardian Angels' School, West Bend, Wisconsin, established September 11, 1878, with forty-one children, in charge of two Sisters, has now an attendance of one hundred and fifty-two pupils, in charge of three Sisters.

St. Mary's School, Chilton, Wisconsin, established September 19, 1879, with forty-two children, in charge of two Sisters, now has an attendance of two hundred and two pupils, in charge of six Sisters.

St. Nicholas' School, Freedom, Wisconsin, established October 23, 1879, with seventy-nine children, in charge of three Sisters, has now an attendance of one hundred and ninety pupils, in charge of four Sisters.

Holy Cross School, Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, established June 20, 1880, with thirteen children, in charge of two Sisters, is now attended by ninety-four children, in charge of three Sisters.

Immaculate Conception School, Barton, Wisconsin, established April 26, 1881, with one hundred and seven children, in charge of three Sisters, has an attendance of ninety scholars, in charge of four Sisters.

Sacred Heart of Jesus School, Eau Claire, Wisconsin, established September 3, 1881, with fifty-six children, in charge of two Sisters, is now attended by three hundred and thirty-seven pupils, in charge of nine Sisters.

Notre Dame School, Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, established September 23, 1881, with five hundred pupils, in charge of eight Sisters and two candidates, has now an attendance of five hundred and eighty pupils, in charge of fifteen Sisters.

Our Lady of Lourdes' School, Dobie (Stanfold), Wisconsin, established September 28, 1881, with fifty pupils, in charge of two Sisters, is now attended by ninety-four children, in charge of four Sisters.

St. John Baptist's School, Marshfield, Wisconsin, established November 19, 1882, with eighty children, in charge of three Sisters, is now attended by four hundred and eighty-four children, in charge of eight Sisters.

Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary School, Sun Prairie, Wisconsin, established October 10, 1892, with sixty children, in charge of two Sisters, is now attended by ninety children, in charge of three Sisters.

St. Francis Xavier's School, Superior, Wisconsin, established August 28, 1894, with one hundred and five pupils, in charge of six Sisters, is now attended by two hundred and eighty-five pupils, in charge of seven Sisters.

Holy Rosary School, Lake Linden, Michigan, established August 29, 1894, with one hundred and eighteen pupils, in charge of three Sisters, is now attended by one hundred and forty-one pupils, in charge of four Sisters.

St. Joseph's School, Escanaba, Michigan, established September 8, 1884, with three hundred and eighty-five pupils, in charge of six Sisters, now has a regular attendance of five hundred and sixty-one pupils, in charge of thirteen Sisters.

Sacred Heart School, Laurium, Michigan, established September 15, 1891, with an attendance of four hundred and thirty-eight children, in charge of eight Sisters, now has an attendance of three hundred and twenty children, in charge of eight Sisters.

Rev. P. M. Abbelen.

Immaculate Conception School, Wausau, Wisconsin, established November 3, 1883, with ninety children in attendance, in charge of two Sisters and one candidate, now has an attendance of three hundred and nine children, in charge of six Sisters.

St. Philomena's School, Rudolph, Wisconsin, established May 4, 1886, with an attendance of sixty-three children, in charge of one Sister and one candidate, now has an attendance of seventy-five pupils, under three Sisters.

SS. Peter and Paul's School, Grand Rapids, Wisconsin, established September 14, 1886, with an attendance of sixty children, in charge of two Sisters, now has an attendance of one hundred and fifty-seven children, in charge of three Sisters.

Holy Ghost School, South Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, established September 30, 1886, with an attendance of one hundred and twenty pupils, in charge of four Sisters, now has an attendance of eighty-eight pupils, in charge of three Sisters.

St. Charles Borromeo's School, Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, established September 11, 1886, with one hundred children in attendance, in charge of four Sisters, now has an attendance of two hundred and ten children, in charge of four Sisters.

St. Mary's School, Arcadia, Wisconsin, established September 3, 1889, with fifty children in attendance, in charge of one Sister, now has an attendance of one hundred and nineteen children, in charge of three Sisters.

Holy Trinity School, Newburg, Wisconsin, established August 21, 1890, with an attendance of eighty-one children, in charge of two Sisters, now has an attendance of one hundred and thirty-nine children, in charge of three Sisters.

The feast of St. Ignatius, July 31, 1897, a day that will be forever memorable among the many glorious days in the history of the Order, marked the golden jubilee, or completion of the fiftieth year, since the landing of the first School Sisters of Notre Dame in New York, 1847.

The rising sun found the convent chapels, court, and corridors fragrant with a profusion of cut flowers, potplants, and waving palms. Garlands of myrtle and smilax interspersed with gold leaves hung in graceful festoons around the walls of the chapels; the papal and American colors gaily decorated the long corridors and spacious halls, while the Star-spangled banner floated proudly on the east tower.

At the early hour of six forty-seven young religious pronounced their final vows of poverty, chastity and obedience in the convent chapel, where Mass was celebrated by the Very Rev. P. M. Abbelen, Spiritual Director of the Order; the remaining Sisters attended a Mass in the Adoration Chapel, celebrated by the Rev. A. von Haza-Radlitz, the Jesuit Father, who during the preceding week had conducted the Sisters' Retreat. This Mass was celebrated in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the laying of the corner-stone of the Adoration Chapel, and the fifth of its solemn blessing. Thus was ushered in the golden jubilee of the Order in America.

At nine o'clock the solemn pealing of the three convent bells summoned the invited bishops, priests, and inmates of the convent to the main chapel, where the ceremonies proper for the jubilee were to begin. Fifty of the senior Sisters, bearing lighted tapers ornamented with gold sprays, filed into the vestibule, awaiting the prelates and clergy to escort them to the chapel. Here Pontifical High Mass was sung by the Most Rev. Archbishop Katzer, D. D., with Mgr. Zeininger, V. G., as assistant priest, the Very Rev. L. Conrad, rector of Holy Trinity's, and the Very Rev. L. Bushart, S. J., rector of Marquette College, as deacons of honor; the Rev. H. Willmes, rector of St. Mary's, deacon, and the Rev. P. Szulerecki, rector of St. Stanislaus', sub-deacon of the Mass; the Rev. A. I. Decker, rector of St. Anthony's, and the Rev. D. O'Hearn of St. John's Cathedral, masters of ceremonies. Present were also a number of other local pastors, and professors of St. Francis' Seminary and the Pio Nono College, priests from abroad, and distinguished members of the Jesuit and Capuchin Orders of the city, honored the occasion by their presence.

As the Mass commenced, the choir, in the grand Gregorian chant, intoned the Introit, which was followed by a glorious burst of harmony from twenty voices, accompanied by the organ and string orchestra. The Mass sung on the occasion is known as the "Salve Regina Mass," by A. Stehle.

After the gospel the Right Rev. S. G. Mesmer, D. D., Bishop of Green Bay, stepped to the chancel rail and delivered an eloquent sermon on the analogy between the work of the holy women of the Gospel and the mission of the religious Sisterhoods of Holy Church, describing it as a mission of contemplative prayer, of corporal and spiritual ministry of charity. Referring to the Order, the Bishop congratulated it on its success, and invoked upon it the blessing of God for a long and prosperous future.

The sermon in German was preached by the Very Rev. Pater Antonius, ex-Provincial of the Capuchin Order. His text, taken from St. Paul to the Romans: "Now, the God of patience and consolation grant you to be like-minded, one toward another, according to Christ Jesus," etc., had been suggested to him, as he said, by the closing remarks of the Jubilee Souvenir, written by the Spiritual Director: (Sisters) "Be and remain united. Not the great number of Sisters, not the far extension of the missions, not the erection of new provinces; unity makes you strong and firm forevermore, the unity of love for the Divine Friend of children and the children, the unity of love for the Order and for each other."

After Mass, Witt's celebrated "Te Deum" rolled in grand waves of harmony over the incense-laden atmosphere.

Divine service ended, the Jubilee guests were invited to the dining hall. Here, also, the Papal and National colors formed tasteful drapings. Mottos of welcome in Latin, German, English, French, Polish, and Bohemian were suspended from the four sides of the room. Facing the table of honor, was a graceful design, which read, "May all present live to see, their priesthood's Golden Jubilee." Smilax, ferns, floral emblems, American beauty and meteor roses were arranged with delicate taste wherever space permitted.

At two o'clock the distinguished guests and the community assembled in the great reception hall. Here, again, the colors of Church and State greeted the eye. The gallery displayed pictures of the founders, patrons and benefactors of the Order: St. Augustine, St. Peter Fourier; Popes Pius IX. and Leo XIII.; Venerable Bishop Michael Wittmann and Father Sebastian Job; Venerable Bishop John N. Neumann and Bishop Michael O'Connor; Archbishops Henni and Heiss, Bishop Krautbauer; Rev. A. Urbanek, Rev. Martin Kundig, Rev. Dr. Salzmann, Rev. St. P. Lalumiere; Mothers Theresa and Caroline; King Louis, of Bavaria.

A Jubilee Greeting, entitled, "Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam," which motto stood forth in prominent gold lettering over the proscenium, was spoken by the candidates of the Order.

Part I., a recitation in English, described the call and response of the pioneer Sisters for their work in America. The tableau pictured the sea voyage and landing, under the auspices of the "Star of the Sea" and the Holy Angels.

Part II., a German recital, enumerated the most notable events occurring from 1847 to 1897.

Part III., introduced a grand tableau, representing the angel of each of the twelve church provinces in which the Sisters are now working, in the act of depositing their golden harvest at the feet of Mary, "the Mother of this Institute," who was surrounded by the patron saints and founders of the Order. "Danket dem Herrn," by Breitenstein, formed a grand finale to the interesting historical review of the Jubilee Greeting.

In conclusion, the Most Rev. Archbishop rose for an address, in which he congratulated the Sisters on their Golden Jubilee, and offered his best wishes for a glorious future of the Order, to which he gave his episcopal blessing.

Procession and benediction with the Most Blessed Sacrament in the Adoration Chapel closed the programme of Notre Dame's Golden Day.

Thus amidst a profusion of flowers and foliage which blended harmoniously with the handsome drapings; to the swelling sounds of solemn and enchanting melodies and with utterances of wisdom and kindly admonition from many high in the favor and councils of the Church was celebrated this jubilee of thankfulness and praise.

Girls' Home—Motherhouse of Sisters of Mercy, Milwaukee.

THE Order of Mercy was introduced into the United States in 1843 by the Rt. Rev. Michael O'Connor, Bishop of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. The first convent of the Order in the United States is St. Mary's, of Webster Avenue, Pittsburg, which was founded from the mother house in Carlow, Ireland, by seven Sisters, namely, Mother M. Frances Warde, Sister M. Josephine Cullen, Sister M. Elizabeth Strange, niece of Cardinal Wiseman, Sister M. Aloysius Strange, also a niece of Cardinal Wiseman, Sister M. Philomena Reid, a novice, Sister Veronica McDarby, a lay sister, and Sister Margaret O'Brien, a postulant. Mother M. Elizabeth Strange is the only one of that fervent band now living. Sister Margaret O'Brien, when receiving the religious habit, assumed the name of Sister M. Agatha, and in 1846 was appointed Mother Superior of a band of five Sisters sent to make a foundation in Chicago.

The Order of Mercy in Wisconsin was filiated from Chicago, and established in this State in 1870 by seven Sisters, with the permission of the Rt. Rev. John Martin Henni, at that time Bishop of Milwaukee.

The mother house was for several years in St. Joseph's parish, Fond du Lac, but in 1894 was transferred to the city of Milwaukee. At present the Sisters are engaged in the following work in Milwaukee: First—Six Sisters in charge of the convent at 1133 Sycamore street, attached to which is a home for working girls of respectable character, while young ladies coming there from other cities to seek employment as teachers and clerks will be given a pleasant and comfortable home. This convent was established in 1894. Second—Ten Sisters in charge of the convent at 423 Second avenue and St. Patrick's School, of which they assumed charge in 1886. Third—Six Sisters in charge of the convent at 451 Russell Avenue and Immaculate Conception School, of which they took charge in 1887. At present the community numbers eighteen professed Sisters, one novice and three postulants.

Under the patronage of Our Lady of Mercy, the congregation of religious called Sisters of Mercy was established in Dublin, Ireland, A. D. 1827, for the service of the poor, sick and ignorant, by Miss Catharine Elizabeth McAuley, with the approval and coöperation of the Most Reverend Daniel Murray, D. D., Archbishop of Dublin.

Miss McAuley entered the Presentation Convent, Georgis Hill, Dublin, and served her novitiate with two of her companions, Miss Anna Maria Doyle and Miss Elizabeth Harley, on September 8, 1830. They received the Habit of Religion on the second day of the octave of the Immaculate Conception of the same year. They made their religious profession into the hands of Archbishop Murray December 12, 1831, and returned the same day to St. Mary's Convent of Our Lady of Mercy on Baggott street.

Miss McAuley, who received the name of Sister Mary Catharine, was appointed by His Grace, the Archbishop of Dublin, to the government of her newly founded Community, which then began its religious life. The rule of the congregation was approved by His Holiness, Pope Gregory XVI. on the 3d day of May, 1835, and confirmed by an Apostolic Breve of the same pontiff bearing the date of June 6, 1841. The Order was introduced into England in 1839; Scotland, 1849; British America, 1842; Australia, 1845; New Zealand, 1849; Channel Islands (Guernsey and Alderney) 1868, and South America in 1856. The Order has also been introduced into Tasmania (Van Diemen's Land), Isle of Man and Isle of Wight. During the Crimean war there were temporary establishments at Constantinople, Scrutari, Kulilu in Turkey, and in Balaklava, Russia.

At present the Convents of Mercy number as follows: Ireland, 186; England, 56; Scotland, 10; Australia, 54; New Zealand, 11; Newfoundland, 9; South America, 3; Island of Jamaica, 1; Central America, 1; United States, 352. Total, 683.

Industrial School of Our Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd, Milwaukee, Wis.

UPON the death of Father John Eudes, founder of the Order of Our Lady of Charity, there were only four convents, all of which were situated in France. These establishments were entirely independent of each other, carrying on their work without mutual assistance. After his death, and before the Revolution had an opportunity of placing its stamp of extermination upon all religious orders, five additional convents were added to that number. In the terrible storm of rapine and blood which followed the dawn of the Revolution, these houses of refuge and charity were incontinently swept away with the other religious establishments, the Order being virtually annihilated; but it was not to be, and the salvation of the Order effected at that time was, strange as it may seem to be, brought about through the energy, zeal and devoted courage of a young religious named Sister Mary of St. Dorothy. Already had the Mother Superior been arrested, together with many of her companions, all of whom were thrown into prison; and the case became somewhat hopeless, as well as desperate, when this young Sister hired a cart, placed in it all the oldest and most infirm of the religious, and, driving boldly to the council-chamber, where the Revolutionary leaders were assembled, said: "I bring you all our infirm and aged Sisters. You have deprived me of all means of feeding them, as well as of the younger Sisters, who helped to support them. Moreover, you have billeted soldiers on our house, and now that I am alone, I can neither look after them, nor earn bread for their support." "Very well," replied one of the Council, "we will send them to prison." "As you please about that," returned the Sister; "but, at any rate, there you must feed them." Embarrassed by her ready answer, and pleased at her courage, the Council answered: "Take home your poor old Sisters, citizen, and we will see to their maintenance." Accordingly, the soldiers were dismissed, the nuns liberated from prison, and sufficient means were provided for the support of the convent and its inmates.

Some considerable time after this event occurred, in the year 1806, when order had been somewhat restored, those of the members who had survived the ordeal met together in Paris, with a view to reëstablishing their work of charity. With this intent, they obtained a building which, previous to the Revolution, had belonged to the nuns of the Visitation. In this place they established themselves, from time to time gradually improving their condition until, in 1810, the extreme value of their services received the approval of the Government, while, a decade later, Louis XVIII. granted them revenues sufficient to erect a building for the use of penitents who desired to lead a religious life, under the title of "Magdalens." This was in 1820, since which time the work of the Order has prospered to a marked degree, gaining in influence and strength throughout the country. In 1891 the Order of Our Lady of Charity had increased the number of its houses to thirty-one, of which eighteen were in France, two in England, two in Ireland, three in Canada and three in the United States. The English houses are situated at Bartestree, in Herefordshire, and Waterlooville, near Portsmouth. All of these houses are altogether independent of one another, the only bond of union between them being that all are engaged in the same charitable work for souls, and all follow the same rule and constitutions; otherwise, they are entirely separate, having no common center of unity or general Superior to advise and direct them. This very condition by some has been deemed an impediment to the more rapid development of the work and extension of the powers of the Order, as has been amply proved by the rapid growth of that branch designated by the title of the Good Shepherd. Though only formally recognized by the Sovereign Pontiff, Gregory XVI., in 1835, it, in the early '90's, possessed one hundred and eighty-five convents, thirteen of which were in Great Britain and Ireland and thirty-six in the United States. These institutions at that time contained four thousand eight hundred religious, eleven thousand nine hundred and twenty-five penitents and Magdalens, and thirteen thousand children, making a total of twenty-nine thousand seven hundred and twenty-five under the government of the General Superior. On the other hand, the thirty-one independent refugees show a membership of but one thousand five hundred and twelve religious, three thousand one hundred and sixty-two penitents and Magdalens, and two thousand and thirty-eight children, a total of only six thousand seven hundred and twelve.

Regarding the history and development of the work originated and established by Father Eudes, the Rev. Bertrand A. Wilberforce, D. P., writes as follows: "It was accomplished by a French lady whose family name was Pelletier, and who was born in 1796. After a pious childhood, passed under the care of the Ursulines at Tours, she received the religious habit in the convent of Our Lady of the Refuge in the same city, taking the name of St. Mary of Euphrasia. Soon after her profession, which took place on September 8, 1817, the care of the penitents was entrusted to the young Sister, and the singular virtue and ability she displayed in this important charge, caused her to be made Superior of the Community even before the age required by the Rule.

But God intended this chosen soul for much wider and more enduring work than any that could be contained within the narrow limits of one Refuge. The Bishop of Angers expressed a most earnest desire that she would make a foundation in his episcopal city. Seeing an indication of the will of God in this urgent appeal, Mother Mary of St. Euphrasia determined to undertake the new foundation, and selecting certain members of her own community at Tours, she conducted them herself to Angers, establishing them there on the 31st of July, 1821. A sum of 30,000 francs had been left by a charitable lady in order to found the Refuge, and this legacy was supplemented by further donations, chiefly from the clergy of the city. This money was sufficient to establish the little community in a building that had been a manufactory on the bank of the River Maine, not far from the parish church of St. James. When her term of office at Tours had expired, Mother Mary of St. Euphrasia was elected Superior of the new foundation. She accepted the duty thus imposed on her, but when the moment arrived in which she was to depart forever from the convent in which so many happy years had been spent, she could not conceal her grief. A priest of Tours who was present on the occasion consoled her by uttering solemnly words that the after event amply verified: "Go to Angers, my daughter," he said, " for God will there accomplish much for His glory by your means." It was on July 30, 1830, that she undertook the government of the convent at Angers.

Count de Neuville, whose mother had left the legacy to the Order, became the chief benefactor of the convent. Being a widower without family, he sold his estate and built the church and five separate wings to the convent for the various works which Mother St. Euphrasia desired to establish. One of these buildings was the convent strictly so-called, being for the nuns, the others were for the penitents, the Magdalens, young girls who were in danger of falling and were styled "preservation children," and, lastly, an orphanage for destitute girls. These various buildings, with the additions since erected, form one of the largest religious establishments in France.

At the request of several of the French Bishops, foundations were before long begun in other towns, and it was proposed that these convents, instead of separating, should all remain united to the mother house. It was thought that far more vigorous life would be infused into them if they remained under the government of one Superior, and were thus enabled to assist one another and interchange their subjects. The Bishop of Angers recognized at once the wisdom of this proposition, and joined with the Bishops of Grenoble, Poitiers and Metz in petitioning the Pope to allow the various convents and those that might in future be founded from them to combine together as one united congregation under the government of Mother Mary of Euphrasia as Superior-General. The proposed change naturally encountered some opposition, but from the first it was evident that the idea was favorably regarded by the authorities in Rome, and at last all was finally settled by a brief of Pope Gregory XVI., dated July, 1835. The Holy Father established the convent at Angers as the mother house of the Institute, the Superior of that convent being General Superior over all the houses that should be founded from it. The existing refugees might elect to join the new congregation, and to submit to the General, or they were at liberty to remain in their isolation. By the command of the Holy See, the rules prescribed by Father Eudes are to be observed in all the houses, and the habit worn by the nuns is to remain the same, except that a blue cord is to replace the white girdle, and that the figure of our Lord as the Good Shepherd is to be impressed upon the silver heart suspended from the neck. The distinctive name of the congregation under the government of the General Superior is to be that of Our Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd.

It will be perceived from the tenor of this Brief that the congregation is not a new Order, but the extension and development of the one founded by Father Eudes, and, consequently, Mother Mary of St. Euphrasia would never allow the nuns to give her the title of foundress. No selfish motive of ambition or vanity had moved her to effect the change in the government of the Order; her sole object was to facilitate the development of the work throughout the world, and to infuse into it that vigor which unity can alone ensure. She herself often related the circumstances under which she made the application after consultation with the Bishop, and the following account is taken from the book called the Mirror of the Virtues of Mother Mary of St. Euphrasia:

"I felt strongly moved to do all in my power to obtain permission for the election of a General Superior. One day, during Vespers at the Magnificat, I felt urged more than ever to do so. After leaving the choir, I took refuge in my cell, and there, with a trembling hand, I began to write to the Cardinal Vicar at Rome, beginning thus: "Behold the hand maid of the Lord, be it done to me according to thy Word." I felt such alarm at the step I was taking that, hardly knowing what terms to use to express my submission, I ended thus: 'I am at your feet, and I desire only the greater glory of God. If the Sovereign Pontiff and your Eminence see obstacles to the appointment of a General Superior, I submit humbly to your decision.' Many contradictions followed this step, and some time afterward a very extraordinary thing happened to me. One night, hardly had I fallen asleep, when I seemed to behold a prelate who was unknown to me; he was dressed in the robes of a Cardinal, his countenance was gentle and holy, his whole appearance inspired respect and veneration. He said: 'Fear not, my danghter, your work will be approved; I am chosen by God to be its Protector.' He then disappeared, leaving me comforted and full of confidence. My astonishment was, indeed, great some years later, on my first visit to Rome, when I recognized at once in his Eminence Cardinal Odescalchi, the very man who had appeared to me! I related my dream to him. After serious reflection, he replied: "This is remarkable; I will tell you what happened to me also. For some time I had been anxiously looking for a congregation to take charge of houses of detention for women, and I constantly asked God to vouchsafe to listen to my prayer. Your letter came on the Annunciation, just after I had said Mass in St. Peter's to obtain this grace through our Lady's intercession.' "

The blessing of God, which had thus been remarkably accorded to the enterprise at the outset, has continued visibly with it ever since, for Mother Mary of St. Euphrasia, before her death, had been the means of founding one hundred and ten convents in various parts of the world, all bound together in the unity of the vigorous life under one common head. After a life of constant labor for the salvation of souls, God called her to himself on April 24, 1868. She died surrounded by her religious daughters and assisted by the prayers of thousands of penitent women, in the seventy-second year of her age. When the General Chapter met at Angers in June, 1866, for the election of the General Superior, the Provincials and Prioresses of the whole Order petitioned the Holy See to allow the cause for the beatification of Mother Mary of St. Euphrasia to be introduced in Rome. It was signed by twelve Provincials and by eighteen Prioresses from France, Belgium, Italy, Germany, India, Arabia, England and Ireland, and as many as nineteen from America and Canada.

Of the rules promulgated for the use of the Order, one of the most important and strictly enforced prescribes the nature of the confidence that is to exist between the penitents and the nuns; although the penitents may seek advice and assistance from the Mother in charge of them in all of their difficulties, they are forbidden to speak of their past life. Not only is the Mother strictly forbidden to inquire into the events of the life of any penitent or child in the house, but she is under a stringent obligation to suppress any such conversation. The main object of the religious, in their intercourse with the penitents, is to obliterate from their minds, as far as possible, the remembrance of the past, and to fill their minds and hearts with higher and holier thoughts, and for this reason, if no other existed, they would be anxious to lead them away from any conversation about the past.

At the present time the institution or community ruled over by the Sisters of the Order of the Good Shepherd at Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, occupies an area of twenty-five acres of land, upon which stands an immense brick building, the size of which has been regulated to the necessities of some two hundred and fifty individuals, of which it is at the present time composed. As a local institution, the House of the Good Shepherd has been associated with the religious and charitable work of Milwaukee and vicinity for over twenty years, eighteen or more of which have been spent on the site of the present home in the town of Wauwatosa, just west of Milwaukee city limits.

In this pleasing and altogether desirable spot are domiciled thirty-seven nuns, who, thus removed from the noise and turmoil of city life, are enabled undisturbed to carry on their work of charity and devotion. Of the condition surrounding this settlement, we perhaps cannot at this time speak to better effect than by quoting a recent article upon the subject in The Milwaukee Sentinel, which says:

"The first thing that impresses the visitor to the House of the Good Shepherd is the spotless cleanliness and the air of quiet and serenity that prevails; but as the visitor goes over the institution, admiration for the executive ability that keeps all working smoothly grows with every step.

"The work of the institution is twofold. There is an industrial school, where one hundred and thirty children, who are orphans or have irresponsible parents, are taken care of, and a reformatory where seventy girls and women are being reclaimed from evil lives."

A peculiar and interesting feature of this institution is the chapel, which is located on the first floor of the main building. The center of this edifice is occupied by the sanctuary, in which there is a double-faced altar, so arranged as to be immediately under a dome of stained glass. East of the sanctuary is an exterior chapel, arranged for the use and convenience of visitors. On the south side is the choir, occupied by the Magdalen Sisters, and on the north side that for the inmates of the reformatory. Above each of these runs a gallery, which is occupied by the children of the industrial school. On the west side of the sanctuary is the choir for the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, the same being separated from the main interior by a grill.

At the present time the spiritual interests of the community and inmates are administered by the Rev. Father Raphael, in his capacity as resident chaplain. Of the other interior technical arrangements of the institution, notice must also be called to the community room, a spacious apartment, lighted with numerous large windows and decorated with plants and shrines, the dormitories, the two largest of which contain thirty beds, school rooms, recreation rooms, work rooms, kindergarten, kitchen, refectory, infirmary, lavatories, and other apartments which go to complete the whole.

The ages of the inmates of the industrial school range from three to fifteen years, the education of the younger of these being looked after in the kindergarten department of the institution, which is perfectly equipped and very thoroughly conducted. The others devote half of their time each day to study, and the other half to work, the latter part being devoted to receiving instruction in sewing, cooking, or other domestic arts. Their education is, in fact, carried out and completed in a consistent and practical manner, after which, of course, their future life is absolutely at their own disposition. Some, therefore, may be found returning to the world, and becoming useful and respected members of society, while others, maintaining a paramount attachment for the association of their earlier years, seek solace and seclusion in a life of religion, many of them becoming nuns of the Order of the Magdalen Sisters.

There are at present fifteen Sisters of this Order at the House of the Good Shepherd; these religious take no part in the educational or reformatory work of the institution. In studying the daily routine followed in this community, we learn that the nuns rise at five in the morning, and the inmates an hour later. At 6:30 there is service in the chapel, which is followed by breakfast at 7, after which a slight recess is taken. At 8 a. m. the actual work of the day begins, while at 8:30 p. m. all of the inmates, with the exception of the nuns, who devote an extra hour to prayer, retire for the night. Twenty-nine of the nuns associated with this community are cloistered, never leaving the premises except in cases of eminent necessity. Besides these, there are eight who attend to the general business direction of affairs, and are consequently restrained by any such provision.

The institution is, to a considerable extent, self-supporting, although, of course, much is done to aid in its continuance by liberal donations. The Order of the Good Shepherd has certainly been of great benefit to this locality, and as such will ever be recognized by the people of Milwaukee and the State at large.

Little Sisters of the Poor, Milwaukee, Wis.

THE object of the Little Sisters of the Poor is to take care of destitute old people, nobody being admitted to the institution who is under sixty years of age. The Little Sisters came to Milwaukee on the second day of February, 1876, the late Rev. S. P. Lalumiere, S. J., with the approbation of the Most Rev. Archbishop Martin Henni, being instrumental in their coming. It was at his request, then, that the seven Sisters left the mother house in France, and took possession of two houses on Sycamore street which Father Lalumiere had previously rented and furnished for their use. In addition to suitable quarters for the Sisters, there was sufficient room left in those two houses for the accommodation of sixty-eight old people, but the number of applicants soon became so great that the Sisters began seriously to think of buying some property on which to erect a house better suited to their present and future needs. Here, again, Father Lalumiere was of great service to them, for it was he, with the help of the charitably disposed people of Milwaukee, who secured for them the property on the corner of Twentieth and Wells streets, on which stands their present commodious building. Part of this structure was erected in 1877, the corner-stone being laid on the 22d of October of that year. Within a few days of twelve months from that date, the Little Sisters, with their sixty-eight dependents, moved from Sycamore street to their present quarters, taking up their abode there. In 1884 the Sisters were able to build the chapel, as well as the second wing to the main structure, which made it possible for them to furnish accommodations for two hundred inmates, and of that number one hundred and ninety were in charge of the Sisters on January 1, 1897. The records of this institution furnish the facts that four hundred and forty inmates have died in the institution since its foundation, two hundred and thirty-five being men and two hundred and five women. The Home, though in charge of a Catholic Sisterhood, is non-sectarian, for it depends upon the charity of all, Catholic and non-Catholic, for its maintenance; all, in fact, are admitted, provided they have the necessary qualifications, which in this instance are poverty and old age.

Among the emigrants leaving the Old Continent of Europe for the New World, in 1868, were to be found several groups of Little Sisters of the Poor. The first settled at Brooklyn, in three houses adjoining one another, and received forty people. In 1894, the year in which these facts were first made public in a little book entitled "Work of the Little Sisters of the Poor," there were two homes in Brooklyn, caring for five hundred and twenty old people; two in New York, with five hundred and ten inmates; and one in Newark, with two hundred and ten inmates—that was the first group. But in America everything is done on a large scale, this being evidenced, as in one year seven houses were founded in Brooklyn, Cincinnati, New Orleans, Baltimore, St. Louis, Philadelphia and Louisville. The Little Family followed the emigrant routes, and, working toward the North, took root at Providence, where an enthusiastic admirer of the Little Sisters offered them a complete establishment. They also located in Boston, Charlestown and Somerville. It also established itself in Albany, Troy, and crossing the frontier, placed foot in Montreal. In the direction of the South, the Little Family established itself at Germantown, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, where the Senate gave them a welcome and $25,000, and where the Family received aged negroes. Then they went to Richmond, Savannah, and even to New Orleans, where there are two homes.

Cardinal Gibbons expressed his sympathy with the work in 1886 as follows: "The extension, so rapid and so extraordinary, of this institution, which has hardly half-a-century of existence, and still more the spirit of the Gospel which inspires it, which fills the heart and sustains the self-devotion of its members, are, in my eyes, evident signs of the approval of God. It is from the very heart of God, who is himself Charity, that the Little Sisters draw this practical, tender, and heroic love of the poor, which touches and edifies the cities of Baltimore and Rochester in my diocese. I consider that America is happy to have thus before its eyes the example of Catholic charity, always full of life and persuasiveness. Oh, how powerful with the heart of our Protestant countrymen is this living service of the Little Sisters of the Poor! What good it does to those who give! Its principal charm is its simplicity. This life of service to God's poor fails, in the case of the Sisters, to recall all that is implied therein of repugnance, sacrifice, of self-effacement, and all this because love has actually conquered all these."

Penetrating toward the far West, the Little Family went on to Pittsburg, and thence by Cleveland to Toledo, Detroit, Grand Rapids and Milwaukee, as far as the sister cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, separated only by the Mississippi. At Chicago three homes were founded; at Indianapolis, one; at Cincinnati, two, while foundations were also made at Louisville, and even Kansas City.

Little Sisters of the Poor, Milwaukee, Wis.

When the Little Sisters entered Cleveland, on the shores of Lake Erie, and arrived at their wooden house, where reigned the most complete absence of everything, two Germans, husband and wife, hastened to be the first benefactors, and so, article by article, the little house was garnished. And so this work of benevolence has grown and prospered, for seeing that old people of every nation, without distinction, were received, artists, both French, German, English and Italian, united to give a brilliant concert for the benefit of the Home. In fact, the house of the Little Sisters of the Poor reflected the aspect of the population, mainly composed of emigrants gathered from all the countries of the earth. And amongst these old people, in a country where fortunes are built up and crumble away so rapidly, how many have passed suddenly from affluence and comfort to the condition of destitute inmates of the Little Sisters' Homes! In these Homes, they speak all languages, which harmonize altogether with that universal language understood in all countries—the language of Charity.

Marquette College, Milwaukee, Wis.

A MEMORABLE event in the educational history of the great Northwest, and particularly of Milwaukee, was the laying of the corner-stone of this institution of learning on Sunday, August 16, 1880. Such a realization of their hopes and plans had been looked forward to by the Jesuits of Milwaukee for many years, and, although their long experience in educational matters warranted high expectations, still it is doubtful if even the most sanguine entertained hopes of the success that has crowned the undertaking. To-day, Marquette College in its aims and purposes, its attempts and achievements, stands a lasting monument to the unwearying zeal of the Jesuit Fathers. Of their minds, wholly and unselfishly devoted to the progress of Christianity and education, it was born, and by them it has been nurtured and raised to full maturity and unquestionable excellence. The years of heroic labor spent in behalf of the Church by that honored and saintly priest, Pere Marquette, have excited the admiration and stimulated the zeal of the present generation of Catholics. Clergy and laity alike vied with each other in their efforts to perpetuate the great undertaking to which this martyr's life was given, while such noble natures as the lamented and venerable Archbishop Henni and Father Lalumiere, rector of St. Gall's, reflected in their every act and effort the light of his shining example.

Marquette College, Milwaukee, Wis.

The site now occupied by Marquette College, on the corner of Tenth and State Streets, Milwaukee, has been owned by the Society of Jesus for many years. The building was completed at a cost of $30,000, that amount being supplied through the indefatigable labors of Archbishop Henni and the clergy of the Diocese. Thus was an ardous and goodly task completed, when the "literary institution" empowered by an act of the State Legislature, March 23, 1884, to grant such "literary honors and degrees as its trustees might deem proper," became, ipse facto, a leading educational institution of the Northwest.

Marquette College is now, as it has ever been, under the sole and exclusive control of members of the Society of Jesus who, as educators, aim to secure the gradual and just development both of mind and heart. They recognize moral training as an essential element of education, and spare no efforts to form their young charges to habits of virtue, while offering them every facility and aid to the highest mental culture. It is, in fact, their ambition to form men of deep thought, solid principles, virtuous habits and sound religious convictions, without which they deem education little better than worthless. The present Board of Trustees is composed of the Rev. Leopold Bushart, S. J., president and treasurer; Rev. James D. Foley, S. J., secretary, and Rev. John C. Burke, S. J., vice-president and prefect of studies.

Our Lady of Angels Academy, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS institution was established when the question of higher education was agitated in the leading circles of Milwaukee Catholic society. Parents realized the need of an academy where their daughters could take the College or Normal course, and, at the same time, enjoy the advantages of that Christian training without which culture is a meaningless term for time and eternity. Urgent appeals were made to supply the deeply felt want. These were generously answered by the Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary, who, assuming a liability of $30,000, purchased the home of Dr. Senn, a spacious, finely-finished residence, whose delightful location, shaded lawns, and tree-bordered walks, are admirably adapted for the purpose intended.

On September 13, 1892, Holy Angels Academy was dedicated by the Most Rev. Archbishop Katzer, assisted by Monsignor Zeininger and the Rev. Fathers Foley, Fardy, Putten, Burroughs, Keogh, Durnin, Naughtin, Fagan, McGill, Ryan, Ries, and others of the city clergy. The graceful allusion made by the Most Rev. Archbishop to the title of the institution rested for meaning on the future, and year after year its significance has become deeper and stronger. That "He hath given His angels charge" of the noble undertaking of the Sisters is now forcibly clear from the fact that, on the Feast of the Angels, October 2, 1897, after an unprecedented period of financial depression, a new building was begun to accommodate the increased number of pupils.

The annex will contain class, recitation, and lecture halls, an extensive laboratory, a library, gymnasium, and auditorium. The course of study includes everything necessary for a complete and systematic training in all the branches of a refined and practical education. The present academy will be a conservatory where every facility will be afforded for attaining the highest proficiency in music and art.

The work of the institution is broad in its scope, and practical in its results. To maintain it as such, and place Holy Angels side by side with other leading colleges, nothing will be left undone by the Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The Order of which the Community at Holy Angels is a branch, has its mother house at Dubuque, Iowa. Dublin is the parent city of the congregation. Its foundress, Mother Mary Frances Clarke, of saintly memory, opened the first house and school in 1831. Two years later, at the solicitation of some American ecclesiastics, the Community, five in number, devoted themselves to foreign mission work. The second foundation was made in Philadelphia, under the direction of the Very Rev. T. J. Donaghoe, who became Superior-General. From Philadelphia to Dubuque, from Dubuque, as a center, to the cities of Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, and California, the congregation has found its way. The original purpose of the Institute has not been changed. It has broadened and deepened with the demands and progressiveness of the times. Christian education in America is the basis of the Constitution and Rules of the Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary; and to this end the legislative and executive ability of the congregation are exclusively directed. As a teaching body, its reputation is second to none. To use the words of a learned prelate, whose absorbing thought is Catholic education: "The members of this congregation are well qualified to train the child educationally and religiously for the position she is destined to fill; to teach her all that will make her a shining light in home and social circles."

The Catholics of Milwaukee appreciate the Community's endeavors in the cause of higher education. The Sisters are grateful for the kindness and patronage they have received; and, now that their efforts are no longer borne down by the want of suitable accommodations, their work will show results in keeping with the aim, ability and experience of the Sisters of Charity of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Sacred Heart Sanitarium, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS hospital is the property of the School Sisters of St. Francis, who, besides teaching, consider the nursing of the sick as one of their religious duties. The building is a solid brick structure, three stories high, with basement of Bedford sandstone. It is commodious in all its parts, handsomely equipped and very pleasantly located in a spacious park, a little ways south of St. Joseph's Convent, about two blocks from the street cars. All patients, irrespective of religious belief, are received and attended to with the same care. The Sisters and men in attendance are trained nurses. The physician in charge is Dr. Hirschfeld, who has been at the head of a similar hospital in Germany and has studied the watercure system under the personal direction of the late Mgr. Kneipp at Woerrishofen, Bavaria. Mother Mary Alexia, suffering for many years from severe attacks of rheumatism, went to Woerrishofen, in 1892, where, by the use of Father Kneipp's watercure, she was entirely restored to health. She then thought, what a blessing it would be for thousands of patients in America, if in their own country they could have hospitals with watercure-applications similar to those in Woerrishofen and in so many other places in Europe. These thoughts in Mother Alexia's mind led to the resolution, after her return home, to establish, if possible, a watercure hospital in the land of her adoption. This, then, has been the origin of the Sacred Heart Sanitarium near St. Joseph's Convent in Greenfield Park. The building was erected in 1893 and dedicated the same year by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Zeininger, Vicar-General of the Archdiocese. Since then hundreds of patients have sought and found relief as inmates of the hospital. May God's blessing for the benefit of suffering mankind continue to rest on the noble undertaking!

St. Joseph's Convent, Mother-House and Novitiate of the School Sisters of St. Francis, Milwaukee, Wis.

AT present this Community numbers four hundred and eighty-six Sisters and forty-four candidates. Their particular vocation is that of teaching, in which they have become favorably known and appreciated throughout the country, conducting at the present time not less than eighty-seven parochial schools in seven States of the Union. When in 1872 the cruel May Laws were enacted and enforced by Germany against religious Orders and Congregations, Mother Mary Alexia selected America, the Land of Liberty, as the new field of labor for her Sisters. With the approbation of Archbishop J. M. Henni, their first convent and home in America was established in Wisconsin at New Cassel, Fond du Lac County, 1873, and dedicated in honor of St. Joseph. In 1874 the Sisters opened their first parochial school in this country for the children of St. Matthew's congregation at New Cassel. In 1880 an addition to the convent was built, but, the number of Sisters rapidly increasing and finding that New Cassel was not a satisfactory point at which to establish a mother-house, another location was sought and found at Winona, Minnesota, where with the consent of the late

St. Joseph's Convent and Sacred Heart Sanitarium, Milwaukee, Wis.

Bishop Grace of St. Paul St. Mary's Convent was erected and dedicated by Archbishop John Ireland, December 8, 1885. St. Mary's Convent, however, at Winona was not to be the permanent mother-house of the Community. By Divine Providence, the permanent home of the Sisters was destined to be in the same State and Archdiocese where their first one had been established. The late Archbishop M. Heiss, approving the erection of a mother-house in Milwaukee, advised as a site for the building the purchase of a certain property at the corner of Washington street and Greenfield avenue, at that time belonging to Mr. Joseph Knurr. The property known as Greenfield Park was bought, and the mother-house of the Sisters erected upon it in 1887. In January, 1888, Archbishop M. Heiss dedicated the building in honor of St. Joseph, and shortly after sent a document in the Latin language to the Sisters, officially therein declaring St. Joseph's Convent at Greenfield Park their permanent mother-house. Matters now progressed quite favorably until March 31, 1890, when the Community met with a dire disaster through the total destruction of the convent by fire. Moreover, this fearful event caused the death of Sister Mary Blanka, who, hemmed in by the flames on all sides, made a last despairing effort to save her life by leaping from one of the upper windows in the building. The injuries, however, caused to the poor Sister by this leap were of such a nature that she died on the following day. She passed away at the house of Mr. Joseph Knurr, well prepared and resigned to the will of God. As the fire broke out on the same day on which the remains of the deceased Archbishop Heiss were carried to the chapel vault of the Seminary at St. Francis, Cardinal Gibbons and Bishop Foley of Detroit, having been present at the burial, made a personal visit to the scene of the fire to offer their condolence to the Sisters. Sister Blanka received the blessing of the Cardinal and Bishop.

The affairs of the Community were now, of course, in a very deplorable state. The Sisters' confidence in God's help, however, remained unshaken and proved itself to be highly justified. For several weeks after the fire Mother M. Alexia and some of her Sisters enjoyed the kind hospitality of the Very Rev. L. Conrad, the benevolent pastor of Holy Trinity Church. As ever before, so now especially, Father Conrad, as well as all the members of his household, proved themselves noble benefactors of the Community. Other Sisters were taken in by sympathizing neighbors until later on two cottages of Mr. Joseph Knurr were rented to serve as temporary homes. The neighbors of the former convent, the people in its vicinity and the population of the city of Milwaukee in general, irrespective of religious principles, nobly rendered generous assistance. So did the city pastors and those in the country, in union with their congregations. The Most Rev. Archbishop Katzer, then Bishop of Green Bay, and the late Bishop Flasch, of La Crosse, permitted a general collection in their dioceses for the benefit of the Sisters. The world-renowned charity of the American people for those in great need was verified again on this occasion, and enabled the Community to begin the erection of new mother-house on the site of the former one. This structure, when completed, was dedicated by Archbishop Katzer in May, 1891, in honor of St. Joseph. It is particularly desired at this time to acknowledge here publicly that the Sisters are especially indebted to Mr. George Carroll for all his many and disinterested services so nobly rendered to them in their temporal difficulties. The Sisters avail themselves of this opportunity to express their deeply felt gratitude to all benefactors. Their daily petition to God implores His rich reward in time and in eternity for all assistance rendered to them.

St. Joseph's Hospital, Milwaukee, Wis.

IN the year 1879, four Franciscan Sisters arrived in Milwaukee from the Provincial Mother-house in St. Louis. Their principal work was to nurse the sick in their homes. For a dwelling, they rented a small house on Fourth and Walnut Streets; later they removed to Fourth St. and Reservoir Ave., where now stands St. Joseph's Hospital. On July 11, 1880, the Venerable Mother Bernarda bought the ground and dwelling then occupied by them, from Mr. John Meyer, for the sum of $3,000.00. On March 1, 1883, the contract for the construction of the Hospital was let, the amount expended for its erection being $31,-535.05. This building was blessed, on November 22 of the same year, by Vicar-General Mgr. L. Batz, and opened for the reception of patients at that time.

St. Joseph's Hospital, Milwaukee, Wis.

There is immediate room in the Hospital for the care and comfort of between forty and fifty, and it is estimated on a conservative basis that the number annually brought to St. Joseph's, and cared for there, will amount to not less than five hundred. During the year 1885-1886, a number of valuable improvements were made to the property in general. Steam heat was introduced into the building, a dead chamber was built, and a new kitchen erected. At about the same time, the property adjoining St. Joseph's, having an area of 25x150 feet, was also acquired, at an outlay of $1,900.00. Thus matters prospered with the institution, and in 1890 an additional $2,650.00 was invested in another piece of ground, making the entire area occupied by the building at that time 100x150 feet. But the value of St. Joseph's as a public institution, and the general good feeling shown towards its management, necessitated some further and more notable additions than those which had heretofore been attempted. So, during the year 1892, another building was erected, the same containing a wash-house, besides accommodation for the various machinery, as well as a boiler and heating apparatus. This building is a three-story structure, exclusive of the basement, in which there is a vegetable cellar, a boiler and engine room, pump, water tanks, and other appurtenances of a similar character. The first story, or ground floor of the building, is occupied by a spacious laundry, with washer, wringer, drying room, gas stove for ironing, as well as other necessary appliances for that particular department. On the same floor a very necessary and useful appendage of an institution of this character is the sewing room, a commodious apartment, which is fitted with everything that is necessary. The second story of the building contains sleeping apartments for the servants, as well as a smoking-room for convalescent patients. The third floor is particularly devoted to the storing of bedding, furniture, and other material wares, of which large quantities are in frequent requisition. This structure, complete, cost $14,289.91.

But still the affairs of St. Joseph's showed such a marked and rapid increase that additional provisions became an absolute necessity. So in 1894 still another building was added to the property, it being of the same height and character as the one previously erected. Each floor in this building is done off into commodious sleeping and living apartments, in addition to which there is a handsomely fitted and appointed operating room, some first-class private rooms, and trunk room. There is, also, a large bath room on each floor. In the basement, there is a large refrigerator, a most necessary and valuable acquisition. The building cost $11,000.

In 1897 an additional lot adjoining the property was bought for the sum of $3,375.00, upon which has been erected still another addition, so that the present capacity of the Hospital is one hundred beds, while the total area occupied by it is 125x150 feet.

At St. Joseph's the sick are received, irrespective of nationality or creed, the only provision being that those who are able to do so must pay for their nursing and board. The poor, however, receive the best of care and attention without money and without price.

St. Joseph's Hospital is under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Superioress of St. Louis, Missouri, the Sisters belonging to the Order of Franciscans. The General Mother-house is in Europe, at Salzkotten, near Paderborn. The first Superioress of St. Joseph's Hospital, at the time of its establishment up to 1886, was the Venerable Sister Mary Carola, who, however, was succeeded, during the same year, by the Venerable Sister Mary Hyacintha, until 1897. The present Superioress is the Venarable Sister Mary Vita, who is assisted by twenty-two Sisters of the Order, besides a number of servants.

The total number of patients, since the establishment of the Hospital up to January 1, 1897, was five thousand five hundred and ten, five hundred of whom were unable to pay for their care. The Hospital is in a very pleasant and healthy location, and is easily reached from any part of the city. Its beautiful chapel is attended by Capuchin Fathers.

St. Mary's Convent of the Society of the Divine Saviour, Milwaukee, Wis.

ST. MARY'S Convent of the Order of the Society of the Divine Saviour was established at 564 Second Avenue, Milwaukee, on July 4, 1895, the three Sisters who came there from the mother house at Rome doing so at the urgent request of Archbishop Katzer, who, while in Rome, called at the mother house of the Order, and laid before them this plan for the extension of their work in taking care of the sick in their own homes. After a lapse of eighteen months, the location of the convent was removed to 553 Second Avenue, where it has since remained. The success of the work accomplished by the Sisters located at Milwaukee has been most gratifying, and, in fact, such a demand was put upon their services that it became necessary to increase their number, so that on December 23, 1895, five more came to aid them in the work. During the month of July, 1896, three more were added to the community, while in May, 1897, seven others came.

The Order has recently opened a branch at St. Nazianz, Manitowoc County, and has also sent Sisters to Union Town, Whiteman County, Washington. It is expected that four more Sisters will come to the convent in a short time, as the scope of their undertakings is rapidly spreading throughout the country. It is also expected that the Milwaukee house will shortly become the mother house for this Order for North America. The superioress is Mother Superior Raphael Bohnheim.

The Society of the Divine Saviour, an Order which unites the active with the contemplative, was founded at Rome, Italy, by Father Jordan, on December 8, 1881. To quote an authority upon this subject, "The nature, scope and aim of the Society are of the highest and noblest kind, and the complete ideal of it as it existed in the mind of its founder embraces much that has not yet been put into practice in the short period of the Society's existence. All the more, perhaps, as the Society has worked against material difficulties, because most of its original members were very poor. Its primary object, then, tersely stated, is the glory of God, Mary's exaltation, and man's salvation."

The Second Order of the Society is intended for the service of men of every rank and condition, to whom it will teach the knowledge and the love of God, and to put them in the way of temporal prosperity and eternal felicity; and since in both home and foreign missions the aid of women is indispensably necessary to the weaker sex, the venerable founder of the Society has also instituted an Order for women. This Second Order was founded on December 8, 1888, and has its mother house at Tivoli, a suburban bishopric lying not many miles outside of Rome, but situated higher, for which reason it is claimed as healthier than the latter city. Although it is not yet ten years since this was founded, it numbers already about one hundred and fifteen members, mostly Germans, among whom there are some professional teachers.

The Second Order is governed by a superioress-general who holds the office under the supreme government of the general-superior, and founder of the Society of the Divine Savior. The existing superioress-general, the first who has held that office in the Order, is the Baroness Teresa von Wüllenweber, now known as Mary of the Apostles, whose family is native to the archdiocese of Cologne. The members of the Second Order, like those of the First Order, forsake all their private possessions, etc., take the three holy vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, at first for a period of three years only, at the expiration of which time they are admitted to take the perpetual vows; whereupon they devote themselves entirely to the salvation of their own souls and the practice of charity, and the performance of corporal and spiritual work of mercy, particularly towards those of their own sex, and they devote themselves especially to the department of education and the instruction of the young. In order to qualify for their future activity, the Sisters receive special instructions in their houses at Tivoli and Rome.

The Second Order is no less comprehensive than is the First Order; that is to say, it will go to work in all countries, and will receive subjects of every nationality. Besides the mother house at Tivoli, it has already foundations in Asia, North and South America, the East Indies, Italy, Switzerland, Germany and Hungary.

At the beginning of the Thirteenth century, St. Dominic and St. Francis, after having founded their First Order for men, and the Second for women, also founded a Third Order for persons of both sexes living in the world, for there were many who had a strong desire and longing to serve God more perfectly, but whose family circumstances made it impossible for them to enter a religious Order, or shut themselves up in a cloister.

A brief summary of the performance and workings of the Society is given as follows: 1st. The First Order offers to young men who wish to consecrate themselves entirely to the service of God as priests or lay preachers an opportunity of putting into execution their glorious project. 2d. The Second Order receives young women who have resolved to leave the world forever, in order to serve God and their neighbor in the cloister. 3d. The Third Order is intended for people of both sexes living in the world. 4th. The Literary Society will unite men of learning and culture, whether laymen or ecclesiastics, in the common cause of promoting the glory of God. 5th. The coöperators of both sexes support the Society and its holy undertakings by their prayers and alms. 6th. The Angelical Alliance is intended for children under fourteen years of age.

It may be said, further, in behalf of the Society, that from its very commencement it met with a cordial welcome from high ecclesiastical dignitaries. As a recognition of the worth, the Holy Father Leo XIII. bestowed upon its founder the Apostolic blessing just before he began the work, and later on he again sent his blessing to the newly formed Society. It has also received unstinted approbation of the learned German Cardinal Hergenroether, who is known as a scholar throughout the entire Catholic world, and also to His Eminence Cardinal Massaia, of the Capuchin Order, the Archbishop of Carthage, the Bishop of Luxemburg, the Cardinal Archbishop of Cologne (Cardinal Kremenz), and many other prominent ecclesiastics.

St. Mary's Hospital, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS valuable adjunct to the charitable institutions of Milwaukee was founded in the year 1856, when the city authorities donated three acres of land to the Community of the Sisters of Charity, upon which to erect a hospital. The original building, which was built at an expense of $18,000.00, was the result of numerous generous contributions which were made by enterprising individuals, most of whom have long since passed to their eternal reward.

The impetus originally given to the undertaking, and which doubtless resulted in the gift of the site, was largely evoked through the medium of the press, which had, in unstinted terms, called for general and public recognition of the Sisters of Charity, whose heroic and devoted attendance upon the crew and passengers of a plague-stricken vessel won for them the lasting gratitude and admiration of people the world over. For a number of weeks they kept up this intrepid battle, amidst scenes of pestilence and distress, which might well have crushed out the light of hope from many a one of stouter heart and stronger mould.

St. Mary's by-the-Lake was first established under the name of St. John's Infirmary, and as such rapidly extended its field of usefulness, giving aid and succor to the afflicted of all ranks and conditions of society. So this work of devotion, portrayed in the lives of its inceptors, and those who have since succeeded them, has grown and prospered. From a few beds the hospital has extended to its present grand proportions, until there are now a number of medical and surgical wards and charming, home-like private rooms, opening on broad corridors, which form a pleasant and safe promenade for convalescent patients. In that part of the structure fronting the south, is a surgical department, where is to be found everything pertaining to a thorough equipment in the art of surgery.

St. Mary's By-the-Lake Hospital, Milwaukee, Wis.

To summarize briefly, it may be said that the institute is perfect in every particular, and in the arrangements of the wards and private apartments, in heating and ventilating, and all of those arrangements which go to make up the detail of a perfectly organized institution, St. Mary's by-the-lake has but few equals the country over. In addition to this, the hospital is also provided with a capable and masterly staff of physicians.

The first hospital seems to have been founded at Jerusalem, by Saint Paula, a noble Roman lady, toward the end of the fourth century, and her example was soon followed by the pious, the powerful and the wealthy in other lands.

Thus we see it was a woman who first established homes for the sick, where they could be properly treated and nursed back to health and strength with loving care, or where their sufferings could be alleviated and their death relieved of many of its terrors.

We find, also, that it was a woman who first trained nurses and sent them out to care for the sick in their own homes, thus making more practical and general the temporal work of mercy so warmly commended and practiced by Christ and His apostles.

This lady was Madame Le Gras, who afterward became the foundress of the Sisters of Charity, under Saint Vincent de Paul.

Wherever the white bonnet of the Sister of Charity is seen, whether on the battlefield, in the hospital, in the hovels of the poor and afflicted, with the abandoned babe in her arms, or even now in the leper camps of Louisiana, you will there find a faithful nurse, thoroughly devoted to her work, and animated by the highest motives that can move the human heart. Her presence brings joy and sunshine wherever she moves; her kindly words and ministrations, the touch of her soft hand on the fevered brow of pain, are soothing and helpful beyond the power of medicine. Even death becomes peaceful and happy when the devoted Sister of Charity kneels in prayer by the bedside, to whisper words of hope and confidence into the dying Christian's ear.

St. Rose's Orphan Asylum for Girls, Milwaukee, Wis.

THE Sisters of Charity came to Milwaukee about fifty years ago, arriving on the 20th of August, 1846, which is the feast of St. Bernard. They were the first religious women to venture so far from civilization, and to them we undoubtedly owe a debt that can never be paid, since it is largely, if not entirely, due to their coming that the Catholic school system of the present day has assumed such flourishing proportions.

From the very moment of his coming to Milwaukee, it had been the cherished design of Bishop Henni to have a Community of the Sisters of Charity as co-workers in his extensive diocese, for he had known them in Cincinnati, had watched their movements, and appreciated, fully as much as anybody, the energy, zeal, and spirit of self-sacrifice and charity which they exhibited in their various undertakings. On January 1, 1845, Bishop Henni wrote a letter to the Superioress at Emmitsburg, Maryland, requesting her to send some Sisters to assist him in the charitable work connected with his charge. In those days, the transmission of the mails was necessarily very slow, and, to use another writer's words, "this letter was many weeks traveling to Emmitsburg, and the early spring flowers were peeping from their winter hiding places when the 'Valley Mail' one morning brought this quaint and pressing missive to the mother house." A year after the Bishop had sent this letter on its way, he received the joyful tidings that his petition had been favorably received, and that some Sisters would come to him in a short time. Assured and gratified by this promise, he then, early in June, deputed the Rev. Martin Kundig, who was stationed, at that time, in Franklin, Wisconsin, to go to Emmitsburg and conduct these Sisters to their future home in Milwaukee.

On the 15th of July, 1846, this little band, consisting of Sister Mary Simeon, Sister Mary Paul, and Sister Francis Agnes, guided by Father Kundig, started on what was at that time justly denominated a foreign mission. Then, distance had not been annihilated by steam or electricity, so that they were compelled to pass, by slow and laborious stages, from Emmitsburg to Baltimore, a distance of about eighty-five miles; then from Baltimore to Buffalo, principally by railroad, where they embarked on a sailing vessel. After a farther journey, covering a period of nearly five weeks, they finally arrived in Milwaukee, on Thursday, August 20, 1846, the landing being made at what was then known as Higby's Pier, which was located at the foot of Detroit street.

It is hardly necessary to refer to the pleasure their coming afforded to the venerable Bishop, who, after warmly welcoming them to Milwaukee, conducted them to their temporary home in a building at 595 Jefferson Street. The structure devoted to their use was a small frame house, one and a half stories high, which still ramains, although relegated to the rear of a much larger and more pretentious structure, and hidden, as originally known, by a veneer of brick. This piece of property was at that time owned by a Catholic gentleman, Mr. Frank Putnam, brother of the Rev. Father Putnam, at one time pastor of St. Peter's Church, who was one of Milwaukee's first converts. In these rather limited quarters, the Sisters found everything ready for their use, although the quantity, as well as the quality, of the arrangements were, as might be expected, necessarily limited.

After completing their primary arrangements, and becoming somewhat settled in their new quarters, on Monday, August 31, 1846, the Sisters took formal possession of the parochial school, in the basement of St. Peter's Church, which, until 1891, stood on Martin Street, but which has since been moved to its present location, in the northeast part of the city, where it is known as Saints Peter and Paul's Church. Prior to the arrival of the Sisters in Milwaukee, and in order to do something in the way of preparatory work, Bishop Henni collected together the children of the parish and opened a school, locating the girls in the basement of the church, while the boys occupied another building near by. These schools were placed in charge of a brother and sister, Murray by name, who got them fairly well started in the routine matters by the time that the Sisters arrived. Among the first of the scholars to attend this school were the Misses Ellen Lynch, Charlotte, Margaret, Matilda and Helen, daughters of Solomon Juneau, and Angeline and Mary, who were daughters of Peter Juneau.

Early in 1847 the Sisters moved to their home on Van Buren Street, which was bought by Bishop Henni for that purpose from the New York and Wisconsin Land Company. Of this building, the central portion, as it now appears, was occupied by the Sisters, the left wing, which was divided into two apartments, separated by folding doors, making two class rooms, into which were gathered all the children whose parents were able and willing to pay for their tuition. The northern, or other wing, was also divided into two parts, which were arranged as a chapel and dormitory. The latter department was made necessary, owing to the fact that the homes of many of the pupils were at a considerable distance from the school, so that it was necessary for them to board with the Sisters. This school, when opened, was designated "St. Joseph's Academy." This building was long known as Miss Kundig's house, and was later used as a residence by the Brothers. When the site of the St. Joseph's Academy was removed to Van Buren Street, the basement of Old. St. Peter's Church was not abandoned, but was used as quarters for a free school, which was opened for the accommodation of children whose parents either could not, or would not, pay the tuition fees required for admission to the Academy.

As to the Orphan Asylum, that virtually began its existence on the evening of May 9, 1848, at which time Bishop Henni brought an infant to the Sisters' house and gave it into their care, saying to Sister Simeon, "Sister, Christ and St. Vincent have sent you a new care, and I am their messenger." The subject of this message was a little girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Coffer, who had but lately arrived in Milwaukee from their home in Wexford, Ireland. A few days after coming to Milwaukee, the parents were stricken with the small-pox, and both succumbed, dying happily, however, having received the assurance of the Bishop that their baby would be well cared for. As a result of the general epidemic which followed, numerous other instances of a similar character occurred, the little children in almost every instance being turned over to the Sisters of Charity. As a result of this extra charge put upon them, the Sisters soon found their Academy too small confronted with the task of caring for two distinctly different institutions, a school which was barely self-supporting, and an Orphans' Asylum, which had to be maintained entirely from charity. It was a difficult task to contend with, and at times the result of the undertaking seemed to tremble in the balance, for, while Bishop Henni was thoroughly in sympathy with the undertaking, and lent to it every assistance in his power, his own financial condition was such as to make it impos-

St. Rose's Orphan Asylum, Milwaukee, Wis.

to accommodate the requirements of the scholars and orphans, so a one-story frame building was erected on a lot where the present Boys' School now stands. Here a select Boys' School was conducted, the name of "St. Joseph's Academy" gradually giving place to that of the "Cathedral School."

It was not long before the increase in attendance made it necessary for a still further enlargement of the building, and so an addition was built on, making it one story higher. The Sisters now found themselves sible for him to aid it in a material way. However, his indomitable will and perseverance did much towards establishing the undertaking on a firm and lasting basis, and, in spite of the many difficulties pertaining to such a task, he, in 1852, began the erection of the Orphan Asylum on Jackson street, next to the Cathedral, on the site where the Girls' Graded School now stands, while at the same time he started to build a similar structure on the south side of the Cathedral, to be used for his episcopal residence. It was a gigantic undertaking, and one which might have made the most persevering and enthusiastic falter in attempting, but it was carried to a satisfactory and successful issue, as it is now to be witnessed in the two substantial and handsome structures which adorn the Cathedral on either side, and which stand as perpetual memorials of his wisdom and enterprise.

At about this time, the Bishop visited Europe, Mexico and Cuba, soliciting funds in each of these countries to enable him to continue his work, and carry it to its completion. As soon as the building of the Orphans' Asylum was completed, the Sisters, with their charges, moved into it, but the school was still maintained on Van Buren street, the Academical Course being given in a building which was designated "The Brown House," while the free school was conducted in the Sisters' old dwelling.

Rev. J. J. Ryan, Chaplain.

To still further and more formally establish this enterprise, collections were taken up at Christmas and Easter, at all of the churches, for the benefit of the orphans. Fairs, festivals and picnics were also held on numerous occasions, and in fact continued for a considerable period to be the chief means of support for that institution. Much enthusiasm prevailed on such occasions, as may be gathered from the results of the first fair, which was held in June, 1853, at Gardner's Hall, on East Water street, which lasted for three days, and netted nearly $900.00. These enterprises were generally conducted under the administration of zealous and interested laymen, to whose efforts much of the good accomplished is due. Among those who thus actively engaged in the work were, Messrs. John Furlong, Dr. Johnson, Timothy O'Brien, Edward O'Neil, Andrew Mullen, Anthony and John Dahlman, Frank Davelin, John Jennings, Garret Fitzgerald, Solomon Juneau, Joshua Hathaway, Dr. and Mrs. Hewitt, Frank Putnam, Mrs. Elizabeth Larabee, the Misses Julia and Kate Kevin, Margaret and Ellen Milmoe, and many others, among whom were a number who lost their lives on the fated "Lady Elgin," September 8, 1860.

But in spite of this successful and energetic work, done in behalf of the institution, the Sisters were often hard pressed for means with which to procure the very necessaries of life. Still, although hard pressed, they were not deserted, for there were a number who came voluntarily forward, and donated liberally from their personal means for the benefit of the institution. Among these were Mr. John Furlong, Dr. Johnson, and Mr. Collins, whose generosity was particularly noticeable. An additional strain was put upon the Asylum at this time, on account of the civil war, which was the means of depriving many children of their parents. It was also a time made memorable in the history of the Sisterhood from the fact that in 1864 the Order became associated with numerous others in their work of caring for the wounded on the battlefields of the South. And so the demands upon them grew, the number of orphans increasing so rapidly that ere long it became an absolute necessity to make arrangements for better accommodations. Towards this enterprise, the city of Milwaukee donated three acres of land, located at North Point, where a suitable two-story brick building was erected. This building became the new home of the smaller girls, those over ten years of age remaining at the old asylum next to the Cathedral. A few years later, a three-story brick addition was added to the southern part of the Asylum at North Point, which was completed in 1887, and dedicated by Archbishop Heiss on May 6 of the following year. This building, when complete, cost $40,000.00.

At this period, as well as for some time following, the spiritual wants of the Asylum, as well as those of St. Mary's Hospital, were administered by the Reverend Clergy of St. John's Cathedral. In 1886 the Rev. E. J. Blackwell was appointed chaplain. He was succeeded in that office by the Rev. Father Ryan. In 1895 a substantial brick residence was built on the southwestern part of the Asylum grounds, and fitted up as a residence for the chaplain. Divine services are held alternately in the chapel of the Orphan Asylum and at St. Mary's Hospital. At the present time, St. Rose's Orphan Asylum is furnishing shelter and education for one hundred and ten orphans, who are in charge of eight Sisters.

In speaking of the varied experience of this institution, of the hardships its progenitors have undergone, and the success accruing to it, which have, to a great extent, been made possible through the generosity of the Catholic laity, it would be an unwarrantable oversight to omit the fact that, of the many valuable contributions made to this work, the sum of $20,000.00 was given by Mr. Edward O'Neil.

St. Vincent's Infant Asylum, Milwaukee, Wis.

THIS institution was founded June, 1877, by the Sisters of Charity, whose mother house is at Emmitsburg, Maryland. The asylum was first located at 407 Virginia street on the south side. A frame house of nine or ten rooms having been rented, three Sisters with nine infants in charge took possession, and there they remained until March 27, 1879. At that time the property at the corner of Greenfield and Third avenues was purchased, upon which the eastern part of the present building was erected. This wing or section they occupied until the number of children had increased so as to render the house entirely inadequate to the demands put upon it, and it became imperative on the Sisters, in consideration of the health of the babies, to enlarge the building and furnish it with modern sanitary appliances, so that the welfare of the inmates might be properly subserved. The new addition was begun in July, 1890, and ready for occupancy in April of the following year. The asylum as it now stands is furnished with all modern improvements adapted for an institution of this kind. At the present time, there are one hundred and thirty infants in charge of nine Sisters. A kindergarten is connected with the asylum, and the little ones remain with the Sisters, unless adopted, till they are seven years of age, when the girls are sent to St. Rose's Orphan Asylum and the boys to St. Aemilianus' Asylum at St. Francis.

St. Vincent's Infant Asylum, Milwaukee, Wis.

Holy Family Convent, Alverno, Wis.

THE community of the Franciscan Sisters of the Holy Family was established November 9, 1869, at which time four novices received the habit of the Third Order of St. Francis at the hands of the Rev. Joseph Fessler, pastor of St. Boniface Church, Manitowoc.

To these four Sisters, one of whom, Sister M. Odelia, was appointed superioress of the convent, is due the establishment of an organization whose far-reaching influence in all pertaining to the advancement of the Church, has been widely felt. Patient, zealous and indefatigable in the work they had undertaken to perform, these noble women set about a task which naught but an overpowering love for Mother Church and for their fellow-men could have induced them to attempt. Nor was it alone a matter of ignorance, superstition or indifference with which they were called upon to contend, for in those early days of the organization, with its works of benefaction still unheralded, its deeds of mercy unknown of man, dire, pinching poverty stalked about its every endeavor, dimming the luster of each well-meant effort, and menacing the prospects of every cherished plan. But in spite of all its unfavorable surroundings, the Order grew and thrived; slowly at first, it is true, yet with a healthful and positive assurance that it would live to succeed.

Soon the building first occupied by them becoming too small for their purposes, a new one was planned, the corner-stone of which was laid in 1870. The site selected for the new convent was particularly advantageous, being on the brow of a hill overlooking Silver Lake, which lies some four miles west of Manitowoc. One wing of the building was completed and ready for occupancy in 1871, so in September of that year the Sisters moved into their new home. For some time after its completion, the convent was accorded the title of "Silver Lake," owing to its close proximity to the lake of that name, but later this was changed to Alverno, and as such was duly incorporated.

New impetus was given to the work, and strength to the colony, in 1875, when the convent was opened as a place of refuge to a small Franciscan community from Germany, who were compelled to flee from the persecutions of the "Cultur-Kampf."

On September 1, 1881, the convent was struck by lightning, the entire structure thereby becoming a total loss. The blow was a severe one to the community, whose entire possessions were thus ruthlessly swept away in a few hours by the devouring flames. But the years devoted by those zealous Sisters, so self-sacrificing and loyal to the cause of Christ, were not to be without their reward. From all quarters, people came to their rescue, so that within a year from the time of the catastrophe a new and even more desirable building had been erected, to take the place of the one destroyed. Thus did the workings of an inscrutable Providence turn what seemed to be an irretrievable disaster into a welcome and lasting triumph.

In 1883 the community experienced another severe loss in the death of Mother Pancratia, a dearly beloved and highly esteemed member of the Order, and two years later the Rev. George Fessler, who had succeeded his reverend brother as pastor, also passed away.

In spite of such distressing though inevitable drawbacks, the Sisters pursued with unabated zeal the offices of their holy calling, conducting parochial schools, nursing the sick, and training their own members for a life of religious and material activity. Gradually, in proportion to their increase in numbers, the field of activity also expanded, until to-day the influence of their labor is felt throughout the land. This necessarily created a demand for enlarged quarters, so that, in 1889, another building was added to the convent, principally for the purpose of securing a more commodious chapel. This addition was completed in 1890, and on May 20 of that year it was officially dedicated by the Vicar General, Mgr. A. Zeininger.

At present, under the direction of the Venerable Mother Alexia, an able and worthy superioress, the community is making remarkable progress. It consists of about three hundred members, the greater number being employed as teachers. These teachers have charge of forty-eight parochial schools, in which they instruct about five thousand and five hundred pupils. The resident chaplain of the convent is the Rev. Norb. Dieringer.

Holy Family Convent, Alverno, Wis.

Congregation of the Sisters of St. Agnes, Fond du Lac, Wis.

THE birthplace of what was, until 1870, a society of young women, established in 1846, by the Rev. Caspar Rehrl, one of Wisconsin's pioneer missionary priests, was at Barton, Washington County, Wisconsin. Difficulties having arisen which threatened to disband the little society, a fate which had previously befallen it on similar occasions, the Very Rev. Martin Kundig, Vicar-General and Administrator of the Diocese of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, Congregation of Sisters of St. Agnes, Fond du Lac, Wis.

Mother House of Sisters of St. Agnes.

St. Agnes Hospital and Sanitarium.

Ven. Mother M. Agnes.

First Convent of Sisters of St. Agnes.

Interior View of St. Agnes Convent Chapel.

during the absence of the Right Rev. Bishop Henni in Europe, gave orders for the removal of the community to Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, he himself becoming its director and protector till the return of the Bishop. The first canonical election was held July 24, 1870, under the presidency of the Very Rev. Administrator, and at that time Mother Mary Agnes Hazotte was elected Superioress-General, a position which she has held up to the present date, having been reëlected at five successive General Chapters of the congregation. On August 1, 1870, in obedience to the command of her ecclesiastical superior, she, with her little band of faithful Sisters, removed to Fond du Lac, and took up her abode in a house acquired by purchase on the 8th of June previously. One of the rooms in this building was fitted up as a chapel, in which, occasionally, the city clergy read Mass, until a chaplain was appointed in the following year. A regular Novitiate was now established, which had not heretofore been the case, so that the congregation of the Sisters of St. Agnes very properly dates its permanent foundation from the time of its establishment in Fond du Lac, on August 1, 1870.

Upon his return from Rome, in the latter part of the year 1870, the Right Rev. J. M. Henni not only sanctioned the steps taken by his Very Rev. Administrator, but also approved the rules which, in the intervening time, had been compiled for the congregation by the Very Rev. Francis Haas, Commissary-General of the Capuchin Order in the United States. His Lordship at the same time appointed the latter director and protector of the new-born congregation, and he ever remained its enlightened counselor and guide until his happy death, which occurred on the Feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, June 21, 1895. The congregation justly reveres the memory of this great man as one of its most devoted and ardent supporters.

The first convent, a two-story frame dwelling, to which several additions had been made since its purchase, becoming too small to accommodate the steadily increasing number of members, plans and arrangements were made for the erection of a mother house. Here a new difficulty was encountered: the grounds first purchased, consisting of only twelve city lots, failed to afford sufficient room for the purpose intended, and, as a matter of both prudence and necessity, three and a half acres adjoining thereto were purchased on April 18, 1877. The corner-stone of the new convent was laid on May 27, following, and on the 3rd of November, of the same year, the Sisters took possession of their new home.

Almighty God so visibly blessed and favored the little congregation, that a decree of approbation was issued by the present reigning Pontiff, Leo XIII., approving and confirming both the Institute and the Constitutions.

Now, again, the heretofore crowded chapel quarters necessitated the building of a convent chapel, the completion and dedication of which, on January 21, 1888, the Patronal Feast of the congregation, was a very joyful event for the community. The chapel is built in the Gothic style of architecture, and when decorated will be one of the finest in the State.

On November 3, 1892, the Institute was incorporated by an act of the State Legislature, under the title of "The Congregation of St. Agnes, of Fond du Lac, Wisconsin," and empowered to confer all such literary and scientific honors and degrees as are usually granted and conferred by similar institutions.

In 1893 the property adjoining the convent grounds on the east, comprising ten acres, was purchased, although at the time the Sisters had not the remotest idea to what purpose they were to be devoted in the near future. But there was a method in this seemingly peculiar action which became readily understood, when, two years later, St. Agnes' Hospital and Sanitarium was erected thereon. This building was solemnly dedicated by the Most Rev. F. X. Katzer, D.D., on June 23, 1896, and the first patient was admitted a week later. The structure is built in the colonial style of architecture, and is pronounced one of the most thoroughly equipped in the West.

The paramount object of the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Agnes is the Christian education of youth. This most laudable idea and proposed undertaking was still further promulgated by the early establishment at the mother-house of a training school for the teachers of the Congregation. Of the work undertaken by the Sisters, it may be said that they conduct one training school one musical academy, one hospital, and sixteen parochial schools in the archdiocese of Milwaukee; three parochial schools in the archdiocese of Chicago; two parochial schools and one house for emigrants in the archdiocese of New York; five parochial schools in the diocese of Green Bay; three parochial schools in the diocese of Marquette; seven parochial schools in the diocese of Fort Wayne; three parochial schools in the diocese of Concordia; two parochial schools in the diocese of Pittsburg, and one parochial school in the diocese of Cleveland, making a total of forty-two parochial schools, one training school, one music academy, one hospital and sanitarium, and one house for emigrants. At the present time the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Agnes numbers altogether two hundred and twenty professed religious, seventeen novices, and twenty-four postulants.

Servite Monastery of Mt. St. Philip, Granville Center, Wis.

THE Servite Order was founded in the year 1233 by seven Florentine noblemen, now known and venerated as the Seven Holy Founders, for the special purpose of propagating devotion towards Our Lady of Sorrows, the Queen of Martyrs. This new religious family had to share the common lot of all religious institutions. From 1240, the year of its definitive foundation, the Servites were compelled to strive hard for an existence, and it was only in 1304 that Pope Benedict XI. issued the bull which gave to the Order a canonical existence. From that time it began to prosper and was spread all over the European countries, especially by the great propagator, St. Philip Benizi, the immediate successor of the holy founders. In the year 1870 a few Servite fathers were sent by their Superiors to establish the Order in the New World. They first settled in Menasha, Wis., but on account of the many obstacles presented they left, establishing themselves in Chicago. There, too, they found many difficulties to contend with; still, with persevering zeal, aided by Divine grace, they succeeded in founding the Monastery and Church of Our Lady of Sorrows and the Church of the Assumption. In the course of time the number of friars increased and a larger novitiate had to be established. It was at this particular time that the fathers were enabled to accomplish their project through the liberality of Mr. Peter Klehr, of Granville Center, who donated to the Order the land, 156 acres, upon which now stands the Monastery of Mount St. Philip. Having obtained the necessary permission from the Most. Rev. Archbishop of Milwaukee, the foundation of the new building was laid in 1892 and the building completed during the following year, a colony of Servite fathers taking possession of the same on August 28.

Servite Novitiate, Granville Center, Wis.

The first Superior and Master of Novices was the Rev. Father M. Leplae, who had held the same office in the monastery at Chicago for many years. His work in the beginning was arduous in the extreme, being for some considerable period a continual struggle for mere existence; but owing to his untiring and zealous efforts he at least had the well-merited satisfaction of seeing all of his labors crowned with success. Just at this time, however, he was transferred to Chicago, being needed there to assist the fathers in taking care of the parish. His successor as Prior and Master of Novices was the Rev. Father J. Dourche, who had the honor of acquiring his studies under the well-known Monsignor, now Cardinal Satolli. The actual number of the Order at the monastery at present is twenty-three, including postulants and lay brothers. The monastery, a solid stone structure of three stories and basement, is situated on a little hill, about ten miles from Milwaukee, on the Northwestern Railway. The building is surrounded by a dense growth of woodland, making it an ideal spot for candidates preparing themselves by contemplation and study for the priesthood. The first clerical students to be ordained from this house were the Rev. Fathers Benitius Heil, now of Chicago, and Angelus Pritzl, who remained at the monastery to assist the Superior in his manifold duties.

Very Rev. J. Dourche, Superior and Master of Novices.

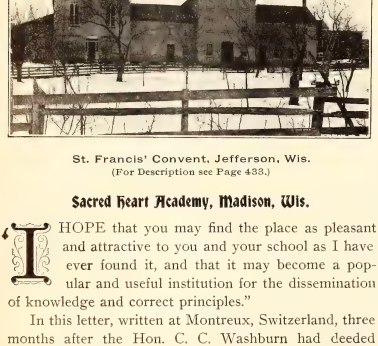
St. Joseph's Convent of the Sisters of Mercy, Janesville, Wis.

ST. JOSEPH'S Convent was established at Janesville by the Sisters of Mercy on March 4, 1873, two years prior to which time the first Sisters of the Order came to that place from Davenport, Iowa. In the beginning they occupied a rented property, but somewhat later erected the present convent, which has since been their home. The inmates, at the present time, consist of Mother Agnes, Superioress, twenty-one professed Sisters, two novices and two postulants.

St. Francis' Convent, Jefferson, Wis.



St. Francis' Convent, Jefferson, Wis.
(For Description see Page 433.)

Sacred Heart Academy, Madison, Wis.

"I HOPE that you may find the place as pleasant and attractive to you and your school as I have ever found it, and that it may become a popular and useful institution for the dissemination of knowledge and correct principles."

In this letter, written at Montreux, Switzerland, three months after the Hon. C. C. Washburn had deeded Edgewood Villa to the Dominican Sisters of Sinsinawa, Wis., we clearly see the object he had in view when dedicating it to the hallowed cause of education. So the old home, rich in historic interest, venerable in its age and tradition, fell to an Order which has stamped it with the seal of a double consecration—Religion and Science. During the governorship of its owner, it was the scene of many gay festivities; for to these its broad verandas and high-ceilinged rooms lent a peculiar air of open hospitality. Tradition says that it was a facsimile of an old house in Philadelphia. It was built in 1855 as a summer resort for the family of John W. Ashmead, a prominent lawyer of that city. However, he did not realize his cherished dream of locating in the West, so it passed to his son, who occupied it only a short time, when, wearied with the hardships of pioneer life, he disposed of it in the spring of 1857 to Samuel W. Marshall. This transfer marks an epoch in the history of the old home, for to Mr. Marshall is due the credit of giving it an artistic setting. Thick clumps of trees, vine-covered arbors and rose-mantled trellises threw into bolder relief its location on a pretty knoll of ground overlooking Lake Wingra.

While Edgewood was developing under the fostering care of its owner, the country at large was torn with civil strife. The repeal of the Missouri Compromise in 1854 called out the bitterest hostility on the part of the Whigs and Free-soilers of Wisconsin. When the Republican party was formed, Washburn endorsed its principles and championed the cause of the slave. The suggestion of his honored name for Congress met with general approval throughout the old Second District and he was tendered the candidacy. His popularity was such that his election followed his nomination. It was he and Mr. Tappan of New Hampshire who joined in a minority report and opposed any modification of the constitution. His words on this occasion are forceful and pertinent: "If this Union must be dissolved, whether by peaceable secession or through fire and blood and civil war, we shall have the consolation of knowing that when the conflict is over those who survive it will be what they never have been—inhabitants of a free country."

After serving six years in Congress, he declined another election. The Civil War soon followed. He was commissioned colonel of the Second Wisconsin Cavalry, October 10, 1861. Through successive gradations he was raised to the rank of major-general. When peace was restored he was elected to the Fortieth Congress and took his seat March 4, 1867. On the first Monday of January, 1872, he was inaugurated governor of Wisconsin. This same year he purchased Edgewood from Samuel Marshall, and made it his home during the two terms he served as the highest official of the State. On it he expended time and money so that when it passed into the hands of the Sisters (May 24, 1881) it was replete in all that constitutes a perfect gift.

In a letter dated August 25, 1881, he said: "I shall probably remain in Europe during the ensuing winter and hope that by spring my health will be fully restored that I may be able to return to America and shall take an early opportunity to call on you at Edgewood soon after my return." He came back to America, but not with the restored health and spirits he had vainly sought. His disease baffled the best medical skill of Europe and America. As a last resort he sought the healing springs of Arkansas. From thence he wrote to Edgewood on March 25, 1882: "I am much pleased to hear that you are progressing so well at Edgewood and that your school promises to be popular and useful. The place is beautiful and I never had a doubt but that you would make a success of it and that it would be no dishonor to me."

These words of cheer came as a parting benediction. On May 14, 1882, the word passed from lip to lip that the gentle soul, esteemed and loved, had quit its earthly temple and all that was mortal of the Hon. C. C. Washburn was sleeping the sleep of the just. So the school, established in September, 1881, was thrown on its own resources and forced to struggle against odds. But this it did, and bravely, until it had outgrown the limits of the old home. The contract for a magnificent new building was let on June 10, 1893. The financial crisis which followed, together with a disastrous fire which broke out in the Washburn building November 16, 1893, stopped the progress of the work, nor was it resumed until the spring of 1894.

Sacred Heart Academy, Madison, Wis.

The new academy is built of white pressed brick with native lime-stone trimmings. It is four stories high, facing northwest, and commanding a fine view of the picturesque hills and undulating plains of the lake country. Here, on September 4, 1894, school was opened in the new academy. From its doors hundreds will go forth to bear testimony to the truth and potency contained in the application to Edgewood of the poet's lines:

"A small ship launched upon an unknown sea,
A small seed planted from an unknown tree,
Such is this strange, new gift to you and me.
Whither the vessel goeth,
And how the tree up-groweth,
God only knoweth.
But sail the ship and plant the seed,
What's done in faith is done indeed."

St. Regina's Convent, Madison, Wis.

THE mission of St. Regina, at Madison, Wisconsin, was established by seven Sisters from Sinsinawa Mound, on August 17, 1871. The names of these Sisters were: Reginald, Ceslas, Colasancta, Villana, Perpetua and Alexia.

The convent property had been purchased some time previously, through the agency of Dr. Hobbins, from the owners, who resided in England. At first it was believed that the convent would be named in honor of St. Raphael, but it was finally decided to call it St. Regina, which name it still bears.

A cordial greeting was accorded the Sisters on their arrival at Madison, the occasion being made one of great rejoicing. The building on Henry street, which is now used as a school, was the place first occupied as a home by the Dominican Sisters. The coming of these good people proved of unbounded benefit to the community in general, as under their wise and careful administration the school throve, and prospered to such a degree that within a month it became necessary to obtain the assistance of additional teachers. Even this proved far from being an easy task, as the railway facilities between Madison and Sinsinawa Mound were at that time of so poor a character as to make them almost worthless. The surer, if slower, means of transportation was therefore adopted, the good Sisters being transported to their destination by team, an undertaking which occupied the best part of two days. Now, as everybody knows, the same journey is but the matter of a few hours.

St. Regina's Convent, Madison, Wis.

In many particulars the school has, like all others, experienced its periods of success and depression, yet through all of its twenty-six years of existence has never deviated one iota from its line of duty or purpose in exalting the Catholic youth of America to a better and a higher plane. St. Regina, it must be remembered, was for several years an academy, and, in fact, continued its academic department until the opening of Edgewood, occupied by these departments, as well as the time of the teachers, are taxed to their utmost capacity.

In the ordinary school work, also, a high standard has ever been in view, as a result of which the children of a former generation of pupils are to be found assimilating a generous education under the same direction and conditions as were observed by their parents before them. In this institution it has also been so arranged that children who remain through a full course and pass a satisfactory examination are admitted to the City High School without further question, and it is a common occurrence each year to witness the transfer of a large from which time its teaching staff has given all of its attention to the parochial school.

Holy Family Hospital, Manitowoc, Wis.

As the school continued to grow and more room was needed, Father Pettit purchased the property on Fairchild street, now used for school purposes, and the number of teachers was again increased until now nine Sisters are busy in caring for the school. Interesting features pertaining to this school are the Art and Music Departments, each having a large number of pupils, which are maintained in addition to the regular curriculum. The two departments have always been in great demand, owing largely to the very strict and thorough course of instruction adhered to. As a result of this, the quarters number of scholars from the parochial to the High School.

Of the many good Sisters who from time to time have had charge of St. Regina's Academy, or St. Raphael's School, a few have passed from this earthly tabernacle to their great and lasting reward. But the influence of their devoted efforts still remains, and like a lasting benediction o'ershadows with kindly memories the hearts of men and women who once as children learned through their gentle lives and admonitions the Way of Life. The present Superior of St. Regina's is Mother Mary Baptist, O. S. D.

Holy Family Hospital, Manitowoc, Wis.

THE preceding illustration will serve to furnish a somewhat correct idea of the new and thoroughly modern hospital and sanitarium which is soon to be built for the Sisters of St. Francis, at Manitowoc, Wisconsin. The plans for the structure were drawn by architect C. H. Tengen, and the site selected is that formerly occupied by Gerpheide's Park, a most suitable and attractive location. The arrangement of the details pertaining to the erection of this structure is regarded as most complete, and as a result, a very handsome and satisfactory building is expected—one, in fact, which will do ample and lasting credit to the Order and architect as well as a pleasing and welcome addition to the city's public structures. This building will occupy an area 166 by 80 feet and be three stories high. The first story will be entirely of Sturgeon Bay cut stone, and the second and third stories of brick trimmed and elaborated with ornaments formed and carved from Bedford rock; the entire roof will be of black slate. The front of the hospital will face to the east, and the wings on either side of the main structure will be connected with it by promenade halls and balconies. Besides the kitchen and a dining room for the Sisters, the basement will contain a water-cure establishment, turkish, steam, cold water and other baths, for both ladies and gentlemen, cooling rooms, toilet rooms, smoking and waiting rooms. The main floor will be occupied by two parlors, the pharmacy, office, male ward, smoking and toilet rooms, private rooms for male patients, dining room, living rooms for the Sisters and patients and a large promenade hall. On the second floor there will be private family rooms, a female ward, linen and toilet rooms, private rooms for lady patients, ladies' dining room, bed rooms for the Sisters and a chapel. The third story will contain a large and a small operating room, the latter for chronic patients; the walls and floors in both of these rooms will be of white tile. These operating rooms will have direct communication with others suitably arranged for chloroforming, medical rooms, toilet rooms for the physicians, a room for surgical investigations, bed rooms for the Sisters and rooms for the nurses. Two wide stairways will lead from the basement to the third story, each floor being also made easy of access by means of two roomy and convenient elevators, run by electricity. The plumbing used will be of the best and most modern character, so that from a sanitary point of view, this hospital will be unsurpassed by any similar institution in the State. The building will be warmed throughout by a direct and indirect steam heating system; the boiler house, which will also contain the bakery and laundry, will be located fifty feet away from the main building. The ventilation of the building has also been given unusual consideration, the result being that there will be a perfect and complete change of air throughout the structure each minute—this means forty cubic feet of fresh air for each patient at frequent intervals as stated. Another excellent feature about the building is the almost entire immunity from fire afforded to occupants by means of a series of easily accessible fire-escapes arranged along the west wall of the building.

Capuchin Order in Wisconsin.

PREVIOUS to 1856 the Order of Capuchins did not exist in the United States, but, like other ancient Orders of the Church, it had sent its contingent of missionaries to this country. Wisconsin is especially indebted to the Belgian and Holland provinces of Minor Capuchins for many of its pioneer priests.

In 1856 two secular priests of Switzerland, Gregory Haas and John Anthony Frey, induced by the reports sent by Bishop Henni to Switzerland, his native country, prepared to leave their home and go to aid the zealous Missionary Bishop in administering to the spiritual wants of the German Catholics in his extensive Diocese.

To make their work more effective and lasting, they concluded to establish a religious order in this Diocese, and, being most familiar with the Order of Capuchins, so popular in their own country, it naturally became their ambition to transplant it to this. They came, therefore, to Milwaukee, on or about September 12, 1856, reporting to Bishop Henni, who at once assigned Father Haas to the pastorate at Kenosha, and the Rev. Father Frey to that of St. Mary's Church, Milwaukee.

A few months later, the Bishop having approved of their design to establish an Order, they obtained possession of the little log church at St. Nicholas, now Mt. Calvary, in Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin.

The corner-stone of the monastery was laid by the late Archbishop M. Heiss, at that time Rector of the Salesianum, near Milwaukee, in June, 1857. At the same time, yielding to repeated petitions of the two zealous priests, the General of the Order sent to this country the Rev. Anthony Maria Gachet, of the Helvetian Swiss Province, to invest the postulants and instruct them in the usages and practices of religious life.

On December 2, 1857, they received the habit, the Rev. Gregory Haas assuming the name of Francis, and the Rev. John A. Frey that of Bonaventure. At the same time a layman was also invested as brother Aegidius. Father Anthony Maria was appointed, at this time, first Superior of the community, but on May 19, 1859, he left Calvary and assumed charge of the Indian Mission at Keshena, Shawano County, Wisconsin. Later he went to the East Indian Missions, returning thence to Switzerland, where he died in 1890.

Following the departure of Father Maria, came a period fraught with severest trials and almost insurmountable difficulties, which threatened the very life of this struggling community. However, through the tireless exertions of Father Francis, who had been placed in charge by his predecessor, these dangers were met and effectually subdued. Father Francis was then appointed Superior by General, the Most Rev. P. Nicholas S. Joanne, and the title of Guardian accorded him by letters dated September 25, 1860, and January 2, 1861.

From this time the number of postulants began slowly to increase. A school was opened in 1861, which on August 4, 1864, was inaugurated by the General as a college, under the patronage of St. Lawrence of Brundusium. This college now has one hundred and twenty students, including fourteen scholastics of the Order. On August 4, 1864, the Guardianate of Calvary was made a Commissariate, Father Francis obtaining the rights of a Provincial Vicar.

In 1865 Father Bonaventure came to Milwaukee to acquire a site on which to build a Clericate or House of Studies, for the Clerics of the Order, but the difficulties proved such that the erection of the church and monastery was for a time postponed after the necessary grounds had been secured. At the request of Cardinal John McCloskey, Father Bonaventure then went to New York for the purpose of erecting a monastery and church in that city, and as a result of these efforts the cornerstone of the Church of Our Lady of Sorrows was laid March 31, 1867, in Pitt Street, New York City.

Mount Calvary College, Mount Calvary, Wis.

On December 26, 1868, the church and convent at Calvary were almost totally destroyed by fire. But that which to others might have become an insurmountable disaster only proved an incentive for a renewed outlay of energy on the part of Father Francis, who at once commenced the erection of a new monastery, which he completed and entered August 26, 1869. The following year the college was also reopened.

Rev. J. Franciscus Haas.

One of the Founders of the Capuchin Order in Wisconsin.

THE Rev. Franciscus Haas was born at Matzerlen, Canton Solothurn, Switzerland, November 25, 1826. He was ordained priest December 28, 1851, and for a few years following he was officially connected with the Diocese of Basel. In company with the Rev. Bonaventure Frey he came to America in 1856, to establish the Capuchin Order in this country. Arriving at New York, September 2, 1856, they at once started for Milwaukee, where Bishop Henni received them gladly. The Rev. Father Haas first became pastor of the congregation at Kenosha, but stayed only a few weeks, and in order the better to execute his plans took charge of the small log church at St. Nicolaus, the present Mt. Calvary. In June, 1857, the Rev. Michael Heiss, Rector of the Salesianum at that time, laid the foundation stone for the first wing of the new convent. On December 2, 1857, both young priests accepted the habit of the Order from the Rev. P. J. Antonius Gachet, who came to this place to instruct the new monks in their duties. In April, 1859, Father Antonius left this convent and Father Franciscus became Superior of it. During the first ten years of his administration he had to undergo many hardships and sacrifices. In 1861 Father Franciscus built a church to the convent and during the following year a southern wing was added to it; in the same year the opening of the college took place. Everything looked favorable for the future when, on December 26, 1868, all the buildings were destroyed by fire. Through the great perseverance and almost superhuman efforts of Father Franciscus, the convent was rebuilt in the following year, and a year later the college was also reconstructed. At the request of the late Cardinal McCloskey, Father Franciscus sent Father Bonaventure to New York to establish a convent and erect a new church. During the same year Father Ivo was sent to Milwaukee to erect a convent. In 1870 Father Franciscus, at the special request of Cardinal McCloskey, went to New York to take charge of the St. John Baptist congregation, which was raised in moral and financial respect; this he executed with the best results. June 24, 1877, Bishop Krautbauer called him back and entrusted him with the charge of St. Joseph's congregation at Appleton, whilst Father Bonaventure was entrusted with the erection of a convent at that place. For twenty years Father Franciscus was Superior of the convent, first as Guardian till August 4, 1864, then as Commissarius from 1864 to November 5, 1875, and as Custos till October, 1879. He declined a reëlection and became Superior in the convent at Fond du Lac and afterwards at Appleton, till he was elected Provincial on October 15, 1885. In 1887 he went to Rome in the interest and cause of his

Rev. J. Franciscus Haas.

Order, where he stayed until 1892, at which time he returned to America. Soon after returning to this country, he again became a victim to a malady from which he had suffered at intervals for a number of years. This time, to the lasting regret of those with whom he had been associated; it proved fatal, his death occurring June 21, the feast of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. His remains were interred at Mt. Calvary. Father Franciscus was one of the first pioneer missionaries of Wisconsin, and a great factor in promoting the Catholic faith. Through his exemplary life he was esteemed by everybody.

Collegium Laurentianum at Mt. Calvary, Wis.

THE establishment of this college took place during Bishop Henni's first decade. On September 6, 1856, the Revs. Franciscus Haas and Bonaventura Frey arrived in Milwaukee and offered their services to Bishop Henni, who gladly welcomed them to the diocese. Previous to this time, the Rev. Father Haas had ministered a spiritual charge in the Diocese of Basel, Switzerland, from which place he obtained his dismissal in order that he might introduce the Capuchin Order in America. After coming to Wisconsin and having had charge of the parish at Kenosha for several months, he was transferred to the pastorate of a small congregation at Mount Calvary. The following year the corner-stone of the convent was laid by the Rev. Michael Heiss, afterwards Archbishop of Milwaukee.

Rev. Bonaventura Frey.
One of the Founders of the Capuchin Order in Wisconsin.

On December 2, 1857, Fathers Haas, Frey and a lay brother made their solemn vows and were admitted to the Order by the Rev. P. Antonius Maria Gachet, who also instructed them in the duties of the Order. When Father Gachet took the Indian Mission at Keshena, Wis., Father Franciscus became Superior of the convent. During the next ten years Father Franciscus had many hardships to contend with, not the least of which was the desertion and lukewarmness of many to whom he looked confidently for aid and assistance, but who did much towards inspiring the success of the undertaking by their openly avowed belief in its ultimate failure. Nevertheless, he renewed his efforts and in 1861 the small log church was replaced by a new and larger building, and in the following year the Laurentianum was erected as a college for candidates for the priesthood.

In a short time, the college had sixty students, and the members of the convent increased in number as the conditions generally grew more favorable. There was, however, still more trouble in store for this struggling little community. On the night of December 25, 1868, the buildings were entirely destroyed by fire, but although this catastrophe proved almost overwhelming, through the tireless efforts of Father Franciscus the members of his Order had a new home on August 26th of the following year, and twelve months later affairs were in a proper condition for the students to continue their studies. Then prosperity came apace and new and improved buildings were erected. The year 1881 saw the completion of a solid and practical structure which was built according to plans and specifications of Architect Schickel of New York, provided with all of the latest and most modern improvements. The location also is superb, being the summit of a moderate hill, and thus affording a splendid view over the romantic surrounding neighborhood.

In 1885 a chapel for the exclusive use of the students was erected in connection with the college. St. Joseph's Hall was built in 1872. Over one hundred students are at present at the college.

St. Catherine's Convent, Racine, Wis.

History of Foundation.

THIS institution for the education of Catholic young ladies was founded in 1862 by Mother M. Benedicta Bauer and Sister M. Thomasina Ginker, of Ratisbonne, Bavaria. They were members of the Dominican community of the "Convent of Holy Cross," founded in Ratisbonne in the year 1237, only sixteen years after the death of the illustrious founder of the order, St. Dominic.

Mother Benedicta had been prioress of this convent for a number of years, but wishing to undertake missionary labor in America, she, with Mother Thomasina, by permission of their superiors and ordinary, Bishop

Ignatius Senestry, left Ratisbonne September 22, 1858, and came to Williamsburg, N. Y., where Mother Benedicta had a few years previously, while superior of the Convent of Holy Cross, established a mother house which has grown to be a very prosperous community. They remained here some months, and after visiting their co-religionists at Somerset, Ohio, accepted the invitation of Bishop Henni, to establish a mother house in the Diocese, now Archdiocese, of Milwaukee.

They were sent to Green Bay in 1861, where they purchased two lots now occupied by the Cathedral and episcopal residence. They brought with them two postulants, who were received into the order, one of these being the present superioress, Mother M. Hyacintha.

In Green Bay they took charge of St. Mary's parochial school and conducted a small select school and music class. Finding the future prospects of Green Bay rather discouraging, Bishop Henni advised the Sisters, who had meanwhile increased their number to six, to locate at Racine, where the now flourishing community has been ever since.

At Racine they took charge of St. Patrick's, St. Joseph's, and afterwards St. Mary's parochial schools. For a short time the little community had a home in a private dwelling house opposite St. Patrick's Church, until they succeeded in obtaining four lots and a two-story building on Twelfth street, South Side.

In the spring of 1864 an addition, thirty-three by seventy feet, was erected, running west from the first building. It was built of brick and had four stories, including basement. The young Sisters, among them the present assistant, Sister M. Cecilia, did all of the lathing in this wing to lessen the expenses. A chapel was fitted up on the fourth floor.

In September, 1864, a day and boarding school was opened. This was the small beginning of the present St. Catherine's Academy, whose growth has been slow, but steady and solid. In 1865 a chapel, running east of the main building, was erected; it was dedicated on Rosary Sunday, 1865, in honor of St. Dominic.

Period of Trials.

Trials and afflictions threatened, more than once, to annihilate the struggling community. Mother Benedicta was taken sick in May, 1865, with cancer of the stomach; she lingered through this painful illness till October 13th, when she breathed her last, fortified by the rites of the Church, at the age of sixty-three. She had the happiness of living long enough to see the new chapel dedicated. She was a woman of noble character, highly educated and a fine musician, a veritable piano and organ virtuoso. Her career in America had been full of hardships and privations, but her indomitable energy overcame all difficulties, and she knew not the word fail.

At the time of her death there was considerable indebtedness and little or nothing with which to liquidate it. The community now numbered twelve Sisters and had charge of St. Mary's and St. Patrick's schools in Racine; St. Mary's, Port Washington, and St. Norbert's, Roxbury, Wisconsin.

After Mother Benedicta's death Mother Thomasina was appointed prioress by Bishop Henni. She was a noble and heroic woman, willing to undergo any amount of hardship, and truly sacrificed her life for the good cause. Besides attending to her onerous duties as prioress, she also had charge of St. Mary's school, where she had taught for three years. She was seized with typhoid fever, contracted while nursing a young novice, who had brought the disease into the house from the mission in Port Washington. This novice, Sister Petrina, died August 15, 1866. Mother Thomasina's strength having been exhausted by her attendance on Sister Petrina, the fever at once took a firm hold, and she succumbed to the disease after an illness of two weeks, at the early age of thirty-three, having been prioress only eleven months.

It would be difficult to describe the condition of the poor Sisterhood at the time of Mother Thomasina's death. Six members were down sick with typhoid fever; there were no funds, consequently no credit, which can be illustrated by one instance: A package was brought by the express to the convent one day, but as the charges of delivery—twenty-five cents—could not be found in the house, the parcel was taken back to the express office, until the sum was procured for its release. In fact, the community was on the point of dissolution, but the all-seeing eye of God watched over the struggling community, and, sustained by His grace, they remained faithful under their heavy crosses and trials.

November 2, 1866, Sister M. Raymunda Graf, of Ratisbonne, who had joined her companions, Mother Thomasina and Benedicta, in 1863 died of consumption. Her death was certainly hastened by grief at their early death. Thus the founders of St. Catherine's Academy passed away within the short space of three years from the time of first foundation, and left the young Sisters to their own resources, totally inexperienced in all business transactions and the wiles of the world.

During Mother Thomasina's administration two and one-half lots had been added to the property.

Appointment of New Prioress.

Since the required number of Sisters necessary for a formal election of prioress was lacking, the Rt. Rev.

Bishop Henni appointed Sister M. Hyacintha Oberbrunner, and Sister M. Cecilia Fox, aged respectively twenty-five and eighteen years, prioress and sub-prioress. They still hold their offices, having been formally elected in 1883, and reëlected in 1889, and 1895, the number of Sisters necessary for an election being complete.

In this time of financial distress, the good and kind Bishop Henni, who had always been a true friend and counselor, recommended the struggling community to the generosity of the late King Louis I. of Bavaria, who greatly relieved the distress by liberal donations. But trials of a more serious nature visited the much-tried Sisterhood; one of the Sisters, thinking the convent could not flourish under the many difficulties besetting it, left, and caused the withdrawal by their parents and pastor of five novices and some promising postulants. This was a terrible blow to the house, and the remaining few becoming disheartened, were again on the point of dissolution, but the all-merciful God sent help when all hope seemed gone.

St. Catherine's Academy, Racine, Wis.

On the urgent appeal of the late Archbishop Heiss, then rector of St. Francis' Seminary, and the late Rev. F. X. Weinhart, who had always been warm friends of the much-afflicted Sisterhood, Bishop Henni at once sent the Rev. J. A. Birkhaeuser to take charge of the convent as resident chaplain. He came in March, 1868, and remained as stationary chaplain until March, 1870, when he was appointed pastor of St. Mary's Church; he attended the convent, however, as the regular Father Confessor. He is the author of "Birkhaeuser's Church History," used in most of our seminaries as well as in Great Britain.

The Rev. Patrick Seibold, an elderly, infirm clergyman, was then sent by Bishop Henni as resident chaplain, his functions being to read Mass and administer Holy Communion to the community. He led the saintly life of a recluse, and remained from March, 1870, until April 23, 1884, when he died of old age and infirmity.

Father Birkhaeuser was appointed professor at St. Francis' Seminary in 1873. From there he attended the convent as regular confessor, coming weekly in sunshine or rain, for eleven years. After Father Seibold's death he again became resident chaplain, which position he still holds. Under his direction, with Mother Hyacintha's wise and prudent management, the precarious condition of the community improved.

In 1869 an addition, 70 by 33 feet, was built, extending south of the old building. In 1874 another addition, 82 by 33 feet, was built, extending south, in the same direction as the building of 1869. During the erection of this addition an incident occurred which caused a sudden interruption, and the building could not be completed until the next spring.

Involved in a Lawsuit.

About July, 1874, the community received the startling intelligence that the will of the late Mother Thomasina was to be contested on the grounds of illegality. Her relatives, the Ginker family, in Bavaria, laid claim to the property, which was held by the community at the time of Mother Thomasina's death. Mother Thomasina, ignorant of the laws of the country, had bequeathed the property to Sister M. Hyacintha and Sister M. Cecilia, to be held "in trust" by them for St. Catherine's Academy, and for no other purposes.

A lawsuit was brought by these relatives against the community, and in two instances, in the Circuit and the Supreme Courts, was decided in favor of the plaintiffs, on the ground that Sisters M. Hyacintha and Cecilia could not hold the property "in trust" for St. Catherine's Academy, as this institution had never been incorporated; consequently, it was not known as a corporate body, and no property could be held or willed "in trust" for the same, as worded in Mother Thomasina's will, which had been drawn up by an inexperienced attorney.

After the two decisions against the defendants, they decided to engage Messrs. Fish and Lee instead of Messrs. Dyer and Dixon, ex-chief justice of the supreme court, who had heretofore conducted the suit. Messrs. Fish and Lee asked for a new trial, taking up the case on a different basis. They alleged that, as the property had accumulated and increased in value by the joint labors of the entire community, Mother Thomasina, not aware of the fact, had, consequently, no right to make any such will or testament. Against this charge the opposing party saw they could lay no legal claim, and, therefore, the day on which the case was to be tried, offered to settle, which offer was accepted by the community.

The Sisters had on several previous occasions offered to compromise with the Ginker party for $1,500, but they would accept nothing short of $7,000. Now, however, the presumptive heirs were glad to accept the first offer of $1,500. The Sisters had to pay the costs of court, which, with lawyers' fees and settlement, amounted to $4,000. The community being short of funds at the time, Messrs. Fish and Lee at once forwarded the amount of settlement to Messrs. Van Buskirk and Ritchie, lawyers for the Ginker family.

The lawsuit lasted three years, a time of probation and anxiety, yet, thank God, the trouble was borne by the much-tried community with true Christian resignation, and the holy bonds of sisterly affection were thereby much strengthened. From this time forward God's blessing seemed to rest on the convent, as the improvements made in quick succession would indicate.

The old chapel, erected in 1865, no longer adequate to accommodate the fast increasing Sisterhood, was torn down to make room for a more commodious edifice. The corner-stone of the new chapel was laid on Pentecost, June 1, 1884, and the first services were held on the Patron Feast of St. Joseph, April 28, 1885. It was solemnly consecrated by Archbishop Heiss on the 16th of July, 1885, Feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, under the title of "Our Lady of the Holy Rosary." In 1885 an extensive wing was added to the academy.

South View of St. Catherine's Academy, Racine, Wis.

Among the benefactors of the community special mention must be made of the Rev. Michael Bauer, brother of the late Mother Benedicta Bauer, who was a fast friend of the house from the time of its foundation until his death, which occurred in 1879; and Father Inama, of Roxbury, Wisconsin who donated a farm of one hundred acres on which has been erected a commodious edifice for Sisters and boarding pupils.

The community now numbers one hundred and seventy, and besides conducting an academy and all the parochial schools of Racine, they have charge of many schools in this and other states.

The mother house and novitiate are located here and were affiliated to the "Third Order of St. Dominic" by letter of the late Master General Joseph Marie Sanvieto, July 12, 1877.

The limited accommodations of St. Catherine's Academy in the early years of its struggle for existence necessarily limited its educational scope, but with the growth of the community the academy has also developed, and done good, solid work. The addition of the extensive wing erected in 1885 increased the accommodation for boarders. The academy now has all the modern improvements; it is heated by steam, well furnished with baths, and lighted by gas. The institution is situated in the most beautiful part of Racine, which, on account of its delightful, almost peninsular location, is called the Belle City. It has pleasant and extensive recreation grounds with a view of Lake Michigan, into which the city extends for a distance of five miles. The delightful climate of Racine is well known to seekers of a health resort, and medical statistics show that Racine has the lowest death rate of any city of like population in the Union, making a most healthful location for the academy, which is easy of access, as the electric railways from all depots pass the institution.

Aim and Purpose.

In 1874 St. Catherine's Academy was chartered with full powers for conferring degrees. Its aim is to give a thoroughly solid education, fitting young ladies for any position in life, and above all for true Christian womanhood. Education in the hands of a truly Christian woman is a scepter that rules the greatest dominion on earth; without Christianity education proves a siren to thousands, alluring them on to certain destruction.

"Ceaseless growth toward God," this is the ideal; this is the law of human life proposed and sanctioned alike by religion, philosophy, and poetry. "Dulcissima vita sentire in dies se fieri meliorem." This ceaseless growth toward God has ever been the aim of the Sisters of St. Dominic, faculty of St. Catherine's, in educating the young ladies under their charge. The educational sphere of St. Catherine's Academy may be limited and hampered by social and religious environment, but is like a circle in the ocean, steadily and surely increasing.

Departments.

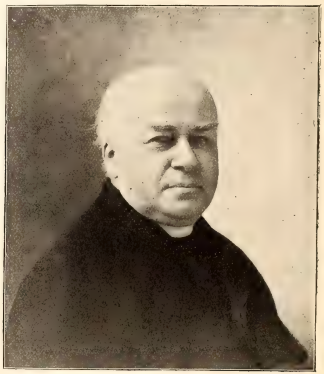
Primary and Preparatory Departments: These departments are designed for students who are too young to enter the academic department.

Academic Department: This course requires four years; it embraces every advantage for the thorough and refined education suited to young ladies of the present day to prepare them for any changes wrought by the fickleness of fortune, so that should circumstances demand it they would be able to earn an independent living. Students who complete this course will receive a diploma.

Normal Department: At the urgent request of some of the friends and patrons a normal course was established in 1888, with the most gratifying results. The religious orders are taxed to their utmost to supply teachers for the parochial schools, but, withal, there still remains a great dearth of teaching force, and it is, therefore, to meet this want that the Sisters have established a normal department. Two courses have been adopted:

I. An elementary course of two years.

II. An advanced course of two additional years.



Rev. J. A. Birkhaeuser, Chaplain.

The elementary course is to prepare teachers in the shortest possible time for either parochial or public school.

The advanced course is for those who had the leisure and desire for a higher culture.

Students who complete the elementary course receive a certificate; those completing the advanced course receive a diploma.

Although music is an optional study, still the Sisters would advise its pursuit by every young lady, pursuing either course, as organists are always in demand in the parochial schools; for this reason special attention will be paid to church music.

Commercial Department: This course requires but one year, provided the student is proficient in the preparatory studies. It aims to prepare pupils to earn their living as accountants or bookkeepers. Many young ladies are filling these lucrative positions.

English Literature Department: Some parents prefer to have their daughters devote less time to the sciences and mathematics than to general literature, for which purpose this department has been established. The time required is two years.

Art Department: This work requires two years, and includes drawing in pencil and crayon, pastel, water color, and oil painting, also use of the air brush.

Department of Music: Two courses have been adopted in this department. This course is specially adapted for those who wish to become organists, but cannot devote longer time to the study of music, the efficient corps of teachers having had the advantage of a complete course of instruction direct from the fountain source.

II. Graduating: Upon completing this course the pupil will receive a diploma.

Each course requires three years, though pupils with talent and close application may complete the course in a shorter time.

Societies, Religious: The Children of Mary, composed of all the pupils who have made their first communion; the Children of Holy Angels composed of the pupils under twelve years of age; the Living Rosary, to which all of the pupils may belong.

Literary: St. Catherine's, composed of pupils of the advanced classes, no others being eligible to membership.

Music: St. Cecilia's, to which all the music pupils are admitted.

St. Nicholas' Hospital, Sheboygan, Wis.

THE original founder of this branch of the great Order of the Seraphic St. Francis, was the late Bishop John George Mueller, of the diocese of Muenster, Germany. The mother house of this new community, called the Black Franciscan Order, was established in the year 1854 at St. Maurice, a suburb of Muenster, and the Rule of St. Francis, as approved by Pope Leo X. in 1519, was adopted for its guidance. The first director was the above said Rt. Rev. J. G. Mueller, who died in 1864. His successor was the Very Rev. Theodore Ross, who is still director-general of the community. Sisters of this Order first came to the United States in 1875. On October 15, of that year, twenty of them, with Mother Angelica as first superioress of this country, left the Fatherland, arriving at Alton, Illinois, on November 6, having previously been received by Bishop Baltes into the diocese of Alton.

The mother house of the American Province was started in Springfield, Illinois. The first director of the hospital there (St. John's) was Father Levi, pastor of SS. Peter and Paul's Church in Springfield. Its director at the present time is the Rev. L. Hinsen, while Sister Paula is superioress. St. Nicholas' Hospital at Sheboygan is one of the seventeen branch houses of this Community.

This hospital was opened on May 9, 1890, with Sister Alfonza as superioress. At the present time Sister Attala is at the head of this institution, being assisted by seven other Sisters. St. Nicholas Hospital maintains accommodations for from thirty-five to forty patients, and owing to the good and efficient work done there, is liberally patronized. A great deal of credit for the establishment of this hospital is due to the Rev. Nicholas Thill, former rector of Holy Name Church, and after whom the institution is named, and the Honorable Thomas M. Blackstock of Sheboygan, although it must, of course, be remembered that all of the citizens of that place, irrespective of religious belief, lent a helping hand and gave their warm support toward the enterprise.

There is a small chapel connected with this Hospital, of which the Rev. Father D. F. Thill, rector of Holy Name Church, has charge.

Since its establishment, St. Nicholas' Hospital cared for about two hundred patients annually, or fourteen hundred in all, not including the large number of sick persons who were nursed in their own homes. The Hospital is like its mother house, not a sectarian institution, but Catholic, where all sick persons, irrespective of their religious opinions, can obtain the best care and attention. The charges, also, are very reasonable, varying from four to seven dollars a week, while patients in destitute circumstances are received and cared for without any charges being made whatever. As a slight evidence of the value placed upon their services, the Sisters of St. Nicholas' Hospital receive annually six hundred dollars from the city of Sheboygan for two beds reserved for city patients, a similar amount to that given Lakeside Hospital.

Convent of St. Clara, Sinsinawa Mound, Wis.

ST. CLARA Convent of the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Dominic, was founded in 1846 at Sinsinawa Mound, Wisconsin, by the Very Rev. Samuel Charles Mazzuchelli, a native of Milan, who entered the Dominican Order at Faenza, Italy.

The records of the daily life of this saintly and zealous pioneer among the missionary priests, when given to the world, will reveal countless deeds of that wonderful enlightened heroism that we are accustomed to associate with the names of martyrs, but which his childlike simplicity forbade to be recognized during his holy lifetime.

His broad, far-seeing, progressive spirit, combined with his wonderful austerity and sanctity of life, made him the true apostle of the Northwest. He spent many years evangelizing the Indian tribes of Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa, with no brother priest nearer than St. Louis. He built twenty-five or more churches between St. Paul and St. Louis; among these, the churches of St. Raphael, in Dubuque, Iowa, and of St. Michael, at Galena, Illinois, in 1835, having been appointed pastor of both towns. Dubuque was afterward created a bishopric, in a great measure through his influence. He built a school house with each church, for his burning zeal impelled him always to secure, first, the safety of the little children of his flock.

All this was done amid appalling hardships and privations. He founded a college at Sinsinawa Mound in 1846, of which he was first president, and almost immediately after, he founded a community of the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Dominic at the same place. This community was removed, after a short time, to Benton, Wisconsin, whence, however, they returned to Sinsinawa Mound in 1867. In 1852 the school at Benton was chartered as St. Clara's Academy, having been then in existence for five years. Parochial schools were also taught by these Sisters at the many parishes and missions where Father Mazzuchelli was laboring. In the infancy of the community, there were five members, of whom three are yet living. There are now five hundred members in all.

There have been thirty-nine institutions founded from this mother house in the archdioceses of Milwaukee, St. Paul, Chicago and Baltimore, and the dioceses of Green Bay, Peoria, Omaha, Kansas City, and Denver. Academies are also attached to several of these establishments, and parochial schools are taught in connection with all save two. The head of this congregation, whose title is "The Congregation of the Most Holy Rosary," is Sister Emily Power, Mother-General of the congregation, who has held the government by election of the Sisters since 1857. Her administration has been one of rare ability, wisdom and charity, as evinced by the spirit of the Sisters whom she has trained, while her brilliant and solid intellectual attainments, her broad and generous views on educational questions, her keen and vital interest in whatever concerns genuine educational progress, all marked her as a true disciple of Father Mazzuchelli, who gave his own spirit to the institute which he had founded.

As an example of this progressive, yet truly Dominican spirit, we mention the fact that the usual annual institute for teachers at Sinsinawa during the summer of 1897, was conducted by Dr. Maurice Francis Egan, of Washington University, with additional courses in experimental psychology and Biblical science, by Dr. Shields and Dr. Danehy, respectively, of St. Thomas Seminary, St. Paul. A course of training in methods for primary teachers was also carried on by one of the most accomplished experts in the Northwest.

The academy of St. Clara is yearly increasing in prosperity, as well as in its reputation for giving a thorough, practical training to its pupils. It is thoroughly well-equipped as to modern improvements in its buildings, everything pertaining to healthful and comfortable arrangements being of the newest and most effective character. Not very long ago, it was found necessary to enlarge the buildings devoted to school purposes, by an addition of an extensive structure, which has just been erected. This includes an enlargement of the chapel to double its former size, a similar treatment having been given to the convent dwelling.

In 1881 the Master-General of the Order, Father Larroca, visited the convent, accompanied by the Right Rev. Father Carberry, O. P., Bishop of Hamilton, Ontario. In September, 1893, Cardinal Gibbons visited the convent, accompanied by Archbishops Riordan, Chapelle, Hennessey, Kain, Redwood; Bishop Horstmann, Ryan, O'Farrell, McGovern, Scanlan, Gallagher; Mgrs. Gadd, of London, and Nugent, of Liverpool, with many of the reverend clergy.

The present chaplain of the convent, the Rev. Raymond Volz, O. P., succeeded the Very Rev. A. O. Walker, whose ill-health made it incumbent on him to seek a most needed rest.

The Order of St. Dominic, also called the "Order of Friar-Preachers," "The Militia of Jesus Christ," "The Order of Penance," "The Order of Truth," by the various pontiffs who fostered its growth, was formed in the early part of the thirteenth century.

There were three great branches, or Orders, as was usual in the formation of the great religious families, the great Order of Priests and Preachers, the Second Order of Contemplatives, and the Third Order. The Second was composed of women only; the last might comprise both sexes—women who embraced an active life in communities, and those of either sex desiring to lead a more perfect life in the world.

The founder of the Order was a young Castilian of high birth and royal connections, Dominic de Gusman. In his mingled official and religious capacity, as companion to his Bishop, commissioned as ambassador to France concerning some State alliance, the young Spanish priest-noble, seeing with his own eyes the dreadful havoc among souls caused by the Albigensian or Manichean heresy in France, heard a call from Heaven to give himself for the suffering souls on earth. One of the rules of the Albigensian preachers was an affectation of exterior austerity, covering the most hideous immoralities as part of their religion. The Spanish De Gusman saw that the exterior pomp surrounding the upper clergy of the day, according to the customs of the times, was used as a pretext by the heretics to deceive the common people, and prejudice them against their own spiritual guides. His great soul conceived the plan of forming a band of missionaries who should add to the highest intellectual training the poverty of life of the early apostles, and he succeeded in his designs. His Friars at first were Mendicant Friars, and their holiness and immense learning and power of preaching won the elite of the body of learned professors and students of people considered him as a wizard, while Bishop of Ratisbonne, worked like a simple priest to save souls, yet could find time for his scientific experiments, and for teaching in the schools. His yet greater pupil, the young Count of Aquin, in Sicily, a cousin of the Emperor Frederick II., is renowned throughout the world as Saint Thomas Aquinas, "The Angel of the Schools," author of the "Summa."

The Dominicans held chairs in all the great universities of Europe, and were the teachers of the learned world until the attack, which was generally made on all religious orders, crippled their efforts and silenced them in a degree with the rest.

St. Clara's Academy, Sinsinawa Mound, Wis.

the greatest universities of Europe to join their ranks. Dominic's spiritual children carried off the honors of the universities, and then went through the Continent, preaching to the people with the double prestige of great learning and great sanctity, to aid their cause. He himself and his first six companions had entered the University of Paris as students, and had drawn therefrom all that the great school could give them. Dr. Reginald, of Orleans, the pride of all France, was among the first to join the ranks of the new Friars, and thousands followed him.

Albertus Magnus, the scientist, natural historian, and botanist, so thoroughly versed in physics that the simple

At Salamanca the young Doctor Diego de Deza saved the cause of Columbus, as the latter repeatedly asserted, in his gratitude reminding Queen Isabella, in his last letter to her, of what both owed to his powerful and learned friend, Don Diego de Deza. The Dominican, in his capacity of Confessor and trusted counselor to the Queen, had opportunities of audience, which he used untiringly to obtain a favorable hearing for the explorer.

The Order speedily spread throughout the world, from Russia to the Philippine Islands, and these foundations still flourish. The Order was specially the leading one for good in England and Ireland at the period of the Reformation, and so won the special notice of Elizabeth, who flattered herself that she had banished the hated white habit from her dominions. It remained for the Italian Government of our own day, hating and suspecting the Order, particularly for its learning and influence, to deprive it, for the most part, of the very foundations made by St. Dominic himself, at Santa Sabina, Santa Sopra, Minerva, and the Sisters' Convent at Santa Sabina. The Dominicans still remain there, but watched, crippled and restricted, as only zealous hate can do.

It is worthy of note that the Sisterhood was established first, even before the great Order, or that of the priests. The crying need for this was the pitiable condition of the young daughters of the French nobility, whom Dominic found wandering like stray animals in bands, their parents having been murdered in the systematic massacres by the Albigensians. The Saint, in 1209, founded a convent at Prouille, in France, at the foot of the Pyrenees, and there placed these daughters of the nobles to be protected and educated. This convent still exists, and contains a flourishing community. The great Order he founded in Rome, in 1215, six years before his early death in 1221.

The Dominicans came to America as missionaries with Columbus, and in the early days many sealed their testimony to the faith with their blood. The Sisters were established in South America in the early days of the discovery. St. Rose, of Lima, was their brightest luminary.

In the United States, the Dominican Sisterhood was founded about sixty-five years ago in Kentucky, under the auspices of the holy and zealous band of Friars-Preachers whom Bishop Fenwick brought to the New World. The Sisters have founded many houses throughout the South. The Northern congregation, which forms the subject of this sketch, is a distinct foundation, however, although each and all follow one rule of that Order which enjoys the happiness of ever and everywhere being simply and entirely Dominican.

Sacred Heart College, Watertown, Wis.

THE Sacred Heart College, at Watertown, Wisconsin, was established about twenty-six years ago (1872), and two years later received its charter from the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, the same having associated with it the customary University privileges.

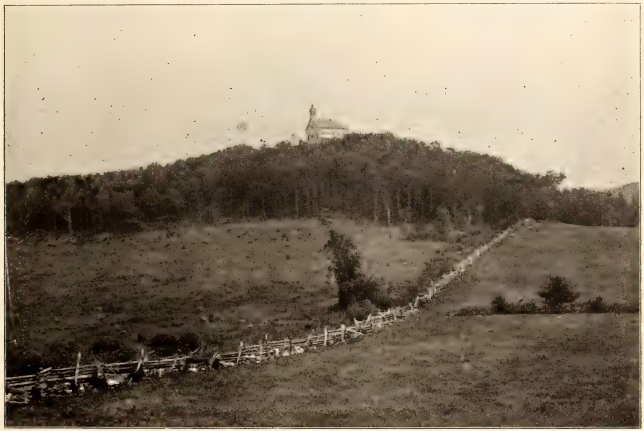
This institution is under the immediate control and management of the members of the congregation of the Holy Cross, who made it a practice of devoting their entire lives to the Christian education of youth.

The University is located on an elevated stretch of ground, on the western verge of the city of Watertown, and at a very short and convenient distance from the two great railway systems which pass through that city.

A few years from the time of its inception, so successful had this institution of learning become, that the modest building that had at first been erected, and was deemed of sufficient proportion to furnish all necessary accommodations for some time to come, was forced to give way to one altogether larger and more substantial. Once begun, however, in spite of the greatest precaution taken at the time of its erection, it proved inadequate to the demand put upon it, and so the present magnificent structure was erected some seven or eight years ago. This building, into which all the best and latest improvements, conducive to health, comfort and convenience, have been introduced, is four stories high, and occupies an area of 125x85 feet, thus affording ample room for spacious, well-lighted, and well-ventilated study halls and dormitories, besides the other departments necessary to an establishment of this character. The grounds upon which the University stands are extensive, affording ample space for outdoor sports so necessary to the health and happiness of the young, while the surrounding country, with its hills and groves, presents those natural attractions of varied and pleasing scenery which invite to frequent rural excursions, delighting the mind, while improving physical strength. The curriculum observed at Sacred Heart College comprises the study in art, science and commercial branches, including the languages, besides all that is requisite for a thorough and finished education. The religious convictions of non-Catholic students are in nowise interfered with. Speaking of this institution, a well-known and thoroughly reliable publication says: "As a result of fair and painstaking search, we do not hesitate to select this admirable institution, and to freely and unreservedly endorse it to every reader who seeks the best and highest, and who would secure the greatest returns upon his investment; for this excellent establishment has undoubtedly solved the important question of maximum returns combined with minimum of cost. Moreover, it is ably managed and thorough in its methods and equipment; in fact, all that could be asked or desired; hence, we do not hesitate to commend it in unqualified terms. We have no greater interest in this institution that in any other of its kind, but having, by unbiased investigation, assured ourselves of its superiority and worth, we consider it a duty to our subscribers to make such supreme merit more widely known."

Holy Hill, Wisconsin.

THIS noted center of religious fervor, which has gained, not only a national, but a world-wide reputation as a harbor and refuge for those whose abiding faith is placed in the Mother of God as an all-powerful and beneficent mediator, is situated about forty miles northwest of the City of Milwaukee, in Washington County. The hill embraces about forty acres of land according to government survey, and is described as the southwest quarter of the northeast quarter of Section 14, in township No. 9, north (Erin) and in Range No. 18, east of the principal meridian. The mountainous range, of which this hill forms a part, covers a distance of fully two hundred miles, extending in a southwesterly direction from the northern extremity of Door County to Madison, near where it ends at the head of a chain of beautiful lakes.



Bird's-eye View of Holy Hill.

Many of the larger and more imposing of the hills in this continuous range are to be found in Washington County, especially in the towns of Erin, Richfield, Polk and Hartford, where the line is more marked and the hills are higher, more numerous and more picturesque. Grander and more noticeable than any of its contemporaries in this group stands Holy Hill, its lofty peak rising to a height of two hundred and eighty-nine feet above its base; eight hundred and twenty-seven feet above the surface level of Lake Michigan, and fourteen hundred and nine feet above the level of the sea—the highest point of land in Eastern Wisconsin. The hill is located in the southeast quarter of the forty acres, and, approached from any direction, presents to the eye a graceful and symmetrical outline. Its sides, from base to summit, are crowned with a generous forest growth, which, protected from vandal hands by parochial injunction, retains all of its natural and original beauty. The view from the top of this eminence is magnificent and inspiring, the beautiful and ever-changing panorama being circumscribed only by the limits of vision. Look which way you will, there appears an almost endless vista of gentle elevations, fertile valleys and sparkling lakes, while here and there, like watchful guardians, the spires of numerous churches rear upward towards the sky.

The first entry of land in Erin was made on November 27, 1847, after which time the influx of settlers was so rapid that within two years nearly every available acre in the township had been preëmpted. It was not, however, until 1855 that the Rev. Francis Paulhuber, local priest of the neighborhood, entered the tract comprising Holy Hill with the intent of permanently establishing the title by deed to the Archdiocese of Milwaukee. In furtherance of this plan, the land was entered from government May 1, 1855, but although it is known on good authority that a deed to the Bishop of the Archdiocese was executed by him before the late John M. Gans, a notary public, there is nothing shown of record to that effect. Much trouble arose from this oversight, the land, in consequence, being regarded as private property and taxed accordingly. Some months later it was sold for taxes to Martin L. Cutler, who received a deed from Washington County on August 13, 1856. The land then remained in the possession of Cutler until March 9, 1868, when it was again transferred to the county, which in turn deeded it to the Trustees of St. Mary's Chapel, in the Town of Erin. This latter deed was dated and placed on record November 5, 1868. The last transfer made of this property was on May 26, 1876, when Romanus Goetz, John Pick and Bertram Schwartz, Trustees of St. Mary's Chapel, issued a quit-claim deed to the Most Rev. John Martin Henni, Archbishop of the Milwaukee Archdiocese of Wisconsin. This was recorded on June 24 of the same year.

A year after purchasing the hill, Father Paulhuber returned to his native town of Salzburg, Austria, where he died some years later. In 1857 the Rev. J. B. Haslbauer became pastor of the Richfield parishes, one of his first official acts being to erect a Cross on the summit of Holy Hill. The Cross, which was hewed from white oak, was five by seven inches in thickness and when erected stood fifteen feet above the ground. It was solemnly blessed by Father Haslbauer in June, 1858, when he came over from St. Augustine's Church for that purpose. To this Cross was attached a strong box for the deposit of such offerings as pilgrims and visitors might see fit to give. This, although originally intended only as a repository for small donations, proved a source of considerable revenue. For nearly forty years the old Cross has stood an emblem of the sufferings of our Saviour, and though seared and worn by Time's ungentle hand, it still remains a cherished and venerated monument of His priceless gift for mankind.

Showing Road and Surroundings of Hill from Hartford.

Father Haslbauer attended the parishes in Richfield until 1861, when he was succeeded by the Rev. George Strickner, who, like his predecessor, was also appointed custodian of the Hill property. At about this time was conceived the idea of erecting a chapel on the summit of the Hill. To this undertaking Father Strickner lent both his sanction and support, and work on the building was begun in the summer of 1862. The work was necessarily slow and laborious, for, although the building in contemplation was but a small one, nearly all of the material had to be carried up the steep and rugged hillside. This consumed the greater portion of the following winter, and it was not until May 24, 1863, that the building was completed and blessed by Father Strickner. The chapel covered a space 16 feet square and was built of smoothly hewn logs. It was raised Good Friday, 1863, people coming from all the country round to assist in the work. This little chapel fronted to the west and stood on a solid stone foundation. The walls on the outside were ten feet in height, while on the inside there was eight feet of clear space between the floor and ceiling. The inside contained a rude but neatly covered altar and the walls were adorned with numerous pictures and charts illustrative and commemorative of events in the history of the Christian religion. Some benches, a brass vessel for holding holy water, and a box for offerings completed the interior outfit of the chapel. The Rev. Geo. Strickner continued as pastor of the Richfield parishes until 1870. The next pastor whose custodianship bore any significance to the increasing prominence of the Hill was the Rev. Ferdinand Raess, who was in charge of the parishes and hill property from May, 1875, to the fall of 1883. Intuitively, as it were, he foresaw the glowing future as earnestly predicted by Father Paulhuber a score of years before, and therefore exerted himself to the utmost to further and verify its absolute fruition. Thus he encouraged and made generous contributions to the many noticeable and lasting improvements which now adorn those sacred precincts. It was also during his custodianship that the roadway leading from below was graded and made passable, the first of the stations planted, and the chapel removed to make room for the grand and more appropriate edifice which now adorns the summit of the Hill.

To the completion of the improvements made during these years Father Raess applied himself with unabated ardor, and though many of them were costly, requiring the outlay of a large amount of money, he was, through his own persistence and the generosity of others, enabled to successfully accomplish the undertaking. That all of this demanded a vast amount of physical as well as mental exertion is evident, for in addition to almost continuous journeyings in search of the necessary aid for the completion of his cherished plans, he had also to minister to the spiritual wants of two separate congregations.

First Station.

An important and attractive feature was added to the Hill during the year 1878, when the Way of the Cross was established and the first of the stations planted by the pathway which leads in its circuitous route to the summit of the Hill. This work was also accomplished under the administration of Father Raess, although it is not positively asserted that the idea originated with him, but is rather believed to have emanated from the Rev. Dominicus, a Capuchin Father.

When the first stations were erected in 1878, a new pathway was laid out and graded. This route deviated considerably from the old one, traversing the high ground and meeting the original path where the Ninth Station now stands. The stations are fourteen in number, and are placed at regular intervals from the entrance at the base of the Hill to the church at the top. The length of the pilgrimage is just eighteen hundred and sixty-two feet, the last station being at an altitude of two hundred and sixty feet above the gateway. The entire journey is made through a dense forest, which imparts a profound and unchanging gloom throughout the way.

For more than a decade of years the original stations served their purpose well. Being made of pine, however, a material not calculated to withstand the severe changes of weather in such an exposed position for any considerable length of time, they became worn to such an extent that it was deemed necessary to supplant them with something of a more durable nature. In the summer of 1889, and during the custodianship of Father Zimmer, a new set of stations were begun and completed. The new stations are built of brick and are two feet and four inches in width, four feet and two inches long, and seven feet and six inches high. The frames, which form receptacles for the Scriptural representations, are of hard wood. The representations, made in New York City, are zinc casts, in bas-relief, and beautiful and life-like in design. The total cost of the fourteen stations complete was $1,046.55. On May 24, 1890, being the Titular Feast of St. Mary's Church on Holy Hill, the new Stations of the Cross were blessed by the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Augustine Zeininger of Milwaukee. It was a notable occasion, the day and occasion bringing together an assemblage of fully four thousand people, the largest number which up to that time had ever met on Holy Hill.

Third Station.

Of all religious denominations known to mankind, none have so rigidly adhered to the ritual observances and customs established by their Church as the Catholics. One of the most beautiful and impressive ceremonies of this Church, which has remained sacredly unaltered through its many years of existence, is the Way of the Cross, which emblemizes the sentence, sufferings, death and burial of the Saviour. Here, in semblance, the same scenes in which he played so divine and heroic a part are reproduced, the same prayers are offered, and Stabat Mater sung as when first composed.

Each station represents some particular event that transpired from the time when Christ was sentenced before Pilate until his body was taken from the Cross and sepulchered.

As regards the various inscriptions with their interpretations, meditations enjoined upon pilgrims and the Stabat Mater and general explanation of the stations and their uses, an unquestionable authority says: "Among those devotional exercises which have for their object meditation on the Passion, Cross and Death of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, sovereign remedy for the conversion of sinners, for the veneration of the trepid, and for the sanctification of the just, one of the chief has ever been the exercises of the Way of Calvary called via crucis. This devotional exercise has continued in an unbroken tradition from the time of the Crucifixion, when Christ ascended into Heaven, and it originated first in Jerusalem among the Christians who dwelt there. Out of veneration for those sacred spots which were sanctified by the sufferings of our Divine Redeemer, even from the primitive time of Christianity, as we learn from St. Jerome, "Christians were wont to visit the holy places in crowds; and there were gatherings of all persons," he says, "even from the farthest corners of the earth, to visit those holy places," and "which continued down to his own times."

From Jerusalem this devout exercise was introduced into Europe by various pious and holy persons who had traveled to the Holy Land to satisfy their devotion. Amongst others, we read of the blessed Alvarez, of the Order of Friar Preachers, who, after he returned to his own Convent of St. Dominic in Cordova, built several little chapels in which, after the way of separate stations, he had painted the principal events which took place on our Lord's way to Mount Calvary.

In later years observants of the Order of St. Francis, as soon as the foundation of their Order was established, introduced them into the Holy Land; and more especially from the year 1342, when they had their house in Jerusalem established, and had the custody of the sacred places; then, both in Italy and elsewhere, in fact, throughout the whole Catholic world, began to spread the devotion of the via crucis.

Fourth Station.

This they effected by erecting in their own churches fourteen separate stations, in visiting which, it was said, "the faithful, like the devout pilgrims who go in person to visit the holy places in Jerusalem, do themselves also make this journey in spirit, whilst they meditate on all that our Lord Jesus Christ vouchsafed to suffer for our eternal salvation at those holy places in the last hours of His life."

Of the stations at Holy Hill, Number One faces to the north. The picture at this station represents Christ surrounded by soldiers, receiving his sentence. In the background Pilate is to be observed in the act of washing his hands, significant that he frees himself from the responsibility of the cruel condemnation. The Second Station fronts west, and has four figures in the picture; it represents Jesus bearing the Cross. The Third Station represents Christ falling beneath the weight of the cross. The surroundings of Station Four are exceedingly gloomy, the forest growth at this point being extremely dense. At this station is represented the meeting of Jesus with His mother, the face of the Saviour being covered with blood. East of Station Five lies a deep valley in which stands the parsonage dining-hall and sleeping apartments for the pilgrims, while an upward glance to the southeast obtains a view of the church roof, steeple and gilded cross. Here the Saviour is discovered, bowed beneath the weight of His burden which Simon is attempting to aid Him in carrying. Directly across from the Sixth Station the ground slopes abruptly down, while far below, in almost perpendicular line, are to be seen the roofs of the parsonage and Pilgrims' Hall. Upward and to the southeast one may also obtain an almost unobstructed view of the church. The scenery from this point of vantage is particularly grand and impressive. The meeting of Jesus and Veronica is represented at this station, Jesus laden with the cross being the central object, while Veronica bows in front offering him a cloth with which to wipe the blood and sweat from his brow. At Station Seven Jesus, again overcome with his burden, has fallen to the ground. At the point where Station Eight is located the forest growth entirely obscures the church from sight, but eastward leaves a perfect view of the parsonage in the valley beneath. Between this and the next station, a pathway leading up from the parsonage is seen on the left. This was the original means of reaching the summit from below, but now, owing to the steepness of the route, it is used only by those having business at the parsonage. At this station, Jesus is represented giving advice to the women of Jerusalem. The next station, which faces east, is situated in a most romantic spot close to and a little southeast of the spot where the "Shrine by the Wayside" and the old station once stood. A little further north is an old pathway which at one time provided a shorter route to the church. Those who have driven this far invariably leave their carriages behind, making the balance of the journey on foot, the road to the church from that point being exceedingly steep. At this station Jesus falls for the third time, and Simon is again discovered in the act of helping him to lift the Cross. To the west of the path, which leads to the Tenth Station, the bank descends abruptly to a depth of over a hundred feet, lending additional strength to the wild and natural ruggedness of the surroundings. This picture represents soldiers in the act of stripping Jesus of his clothing and drenching him with water. Station Eleven is in a most commanding position, from whence, looking towards the southwest, a first glimpse of the outlying country is to be obtained. The picture here represents soldiers in the act of nailing Jesus to the Cross. The Twelfth Station is surrounded by a magnificent growth of young timber, while to the rear are to be found some fine oaks and poplars, and a little to the east some excellent specimens of white birch. This is the most lonely spot to be found along the whole pilgrimage, the solitude and gloom being absolutely intense. The picture here represents the death of Jesus upon the Cross. From the next station it is but a short distance to the church, which is in plain view. The picture at this point represents the lifeless body of Jesus being taken down from the Cross. The view obtained from where the Fourteenth Station is situated is beautiful beyond expression, an endless and changeful panorama meeting the eye at every turn. New beauties are revealed at each glance until the very heavens seem to sparkle in myriad reflections of Nature's priceless gems. At this last station of the pilgrimage the story of a sublime and measureless love which passeth all understanding, and of the greatest tragedy this world has ever known, finds fitting sequel in the sepulcher of Jesus.

Ninth Station.

Fourteenth Station.

As the reputation of the Hill grew apace and its patronage increased, it soon became evident that the little log chapel was altogether inadequate to the demands made upon it. Especially was this the case on certain days and occasions when thousands would assemble to participate in the services held. Realizing the immediate needs of means to provide necessary and proper accommodations for these worshipers, Father Raess immediately set about the erection of a new and larger church, in which undertaking he not only received the hearty approval of Archbishop Henni, but also much substantial aid from the Diocese. Plans were drawn for a suitable edifice and early in the spring of 1879 the work began in earnest. This building has an extreme length of seventy feet and is forty-six feet in width. In addition to its mean length is an extension for the altar and there is also an annex at the extreme northeast corner for a sacristy, eighteen feet square. The walls of the building are of solid brick and twenty feet high to the eaves, and, as a means of additional security, they are anchored to a massive stone foundation. The roof of the building is steep, and above it rises the steeple, surmounted by a gilt cross, which is some sixty-eight feet above the water table. Each of the corner and side walls is doubly strengthened with heavy brick buttresses extending from the stone foundation to the cornice. The windows, which are of handsomely ornamented stained glass, are fourteen in number. The corner-stone, which was laid in June, is located in the southwest corner, about three feet from the ground, and bears the inscription, "Erected 1879." The water table, window and door sills, copings and buttresses are of limestone. The work on this building, though naturally slow and laborious, was at length completed, and on September 8, 1881, in the presence of a vast assemblage, the church was

"Hermit of the Hill," near which his log hut was built some fifteen years previously. This parsonage, which is quite an imposing structure, was completed in 1880. The building which is three stories in height, covers an area of 28 by 26 feet. The first story, built entirely of stone, is used for a dining room, kitchen, pantry and cellar. The second and third stories are of frame, the former being provided with a spacious parlor, study, bedroom and closet, and the upper one divided off into sleeping apartments. A wide veranda is on a level with the second story, and extends across the entire front of the building. Father Raess moved to the parsonage in October, 1880, and resided there continuously until solemnly blessed by the Most Rev. Archbishop Heiss, under the patronage of "St. Maria Auxilium Christianorum," or "St. Mary Help of Christians."

Priests' House.

As soon as the work on the new church was well under way, Father Raess moved from St. Hubert's parish in Richfield and took up his residence in the old Swiss cottage owned by Roman Goetz, which brought him much nearer to the work in which he was then engaged. It was at this time that he planned the erection of a parsonage, the spot selected for its site being to the north in a deep ravine which runs above the foot of the Hill. This spot is very secluded and romantic, and supposed to be the identical one chosen by the September, 1883, at which time he relinquished his custodianship of the Hill. In retiring from this field of labor in which he had accomplished such great and lasting good, Father Raess bore with him the confidence and respect of the entire community.

Of his earlier life we learn that he was born at Glarus, Canton Glarus, Switzerland, January, 31, 1831. Obtaining his earlier education in the gymnasium presided over by the Benedictine Fathers of Desentes, at Greim, he entered the Episcopal seminary at Chur, where he completed his course, graduated in philosophy and theology and was ordained priest by Bishop "Von Carl," August 3, 1856. He came to America in 1867, and at once assumed the duties as pastor of a parish at Ellenville, N. Y., where he remained until 1871. He next went to Covington, Ky., where he officiated until 1873, after which he was placed in charge of a congregation at Manitowoc, Wis. He was then appointed to the parishes of St. Hubert and St. Augustine, assuming those duties on April 9, 1875. Relinquishing this charge in September, 1883, he for the following five years performed the duties of pastor in different localities, and was on July 3, 1888, appointed to the pastorate at New Berlin, Waukesha County, Wisconsin. From there he was transferred to Kieler, Grant County, in 1891, from where he removed to Le Roy, Wisconsin, in the summer of 1896.

After the departure of Father Raess, Father Nicholas M. Zimmer succeeded to the custodianship of Holy Hill. Like his predecessor, Father Zimmer ministered to the spiritual wants of the congregations of St. Kilian's in Hartford, and St. Patrick's in Erin, besides devoting a considerable portion of his time to the Hill and its general improvements. When Father Zimmer first took charge of the church property in 1883, the interior of the church was but scantily furnished, but now, due almost entirely to his zealous and persistent efforts, its church equipments, furniture, paintings, statuary and ornamentations compare favorably with those of the most stately edifices in Wisconsin. Upon entering the body of the church, the first thing to attract the eye is the beautiful frescoing which adorns the whole interior. This work which was completed in the spring of 1892, is a marvel of elegance and artistic design. The principal features, however, are the three new and beautiful altars which were erected by Father Zimmer at a cost of $1,100. These altars are of Gothic design and in beauty as well as finish represent the highest order of workmanship. The two side altars are about one half less in size than the center one, which is over twenty feet in height. Each of the side altars is an exact duplicate of the other with the exception of its furnishings and ornamentations, the one to the east, on the right hand side, containing a statue of St. Ann, with Mary, the Blessed Virgin, as her child, whom she instructs for Heaven, while the one to the left is dedicated to St. Joseph, whose statue also appears in its center. The main altar, which is extremely beautiful, stands well back from the railing of the sanctum. It is a really magnificent and imposing piece of work, its lofty spires and delicate and graceful minarets looming high up within the shadows of the dome. The gilded cross at its apex rises beyond the architraves until lost among the entablatures of the numerous and graceful arches. The center of this altar, which is dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, Help of Christians, is ornamented with a large and beautiful statue of the Virgin and Child Jesus. This statue was made at Munich, Germany, and was imported to the United States in 1876, when it was placed on exhibition at Philadelphia during the Centennial Exposition. It was finally sold to a resident of Wisconsin, who presented it to Holy Hill. Both the high altar and sacristy contain many rare and beautiful articles of worship, every one being the gift of some liberal or pious-minded person. Among these gifts might be mentioned a costly monstrance, a ciborium, Chapel—Showing Clergy and Pilgrims after High Mass.

Case of Crutches and Canes.

a safe or coffer, six Gothic candlesticks, a set of dalmatics, surplices, three albs, and vestments of different colors. There are also many other rare and beautiful objects distributed around the building, of which, however, at this time it is unnecessary to speak. In former years there were rudely constructed benches in the nave of the church which had to give place to new seats artistically in harmony with the whole interior. Of the many minor improvements contributed to Holy Hill, through the personal exertions of Father Zimmer, the bell-tower is probably most noticeable. Prior to 1885, a fund was raised to purchase a bell for the church, and on its arrival at the Hill, during the summer of that year, it was deemed best to build a special belfry for its accommodation. Accordingly, a substantial tower was erected at a point southeast from the church. This tower is fourteen feet square at the base from where it tapers slightly towards the top, its extreme height, including the cross by which it is surmounted, being thirty-five feet. The weight of the bell is twelve hundred pounds.

Fac-simile of Grotto at Holy Hill.

The Rev. Nicholas M. Zimmer, who not only continued the work so zealously performed by Father Raess, but is personally responsible for many of the most notable improvements, is the oldest son of John and Catherine (Friedrich) Zimmer, who emigrated from Germany in 1847. Soon after coming to America, they purchased a farm near Menomonee Falls, Waukesha County, Wis., where Nicholas M. was born January 10, 1848. Father Zimmer received his earlier education in the parochial school at Fussville, and afterwards attended for two terms a public school which was near his own home. At fourteen years of age he entered St. Francis' Seminary at Milwaukee, where he began and completed his course of classical and ecclesiastical studies. He was ordained to the priesthood by the Rt. Rev. John Martin Henni, on December 17, 1870, saying his first Mass on Christmas Day of the same year, at Fussville, in the same church where he was baptized, had received his first Holy Communion and was Confirmed. On January 1, 1871, Father Zimmer was appointed as assistant priest to the Rev. Father Conrad of Holy Trinity Church, Milwaukee, where he remained until the May following, when he was placed in charge of St. John's congregation at Paris, Kenosha County. In June, 1872, he was appointed pastor of St. Joseph's parish at Grafton, Ozaukee County, but within six months was transferred to St. Alphonsus' Church at New Muenster, where he remained until May, 1874. He was next pastor of St. Francis' Church at Lake Geneva, Walworth County, which was an Irish congregation with a German out mission. He remained at that charge until October 8, 1883, when he took charge of St. Kilian's congregation at Hartford, St. Patrick's, in Town of Erin, and became custodian of Holy Hill. He held these positions until December, 1893, when he was succeeded by the Rev. John A. Bertram, and took charge of St. Peter's congregation at Beaver Dam. Neighboring priests as well as clergymen residing at a great distance from the holy shrine had assisted the custodians of Holy Hill on the feast days, in the confessional, in the pulpit and at the altar, which will also be done in the future. When the Rev. J. A. Bertram became successor to the Rev. N. M. Zimmer, as pastor of St. Kilian's and St. Patrick's, he also took charge of Holy Hill in union with the Rev. Peter Pape, Pastor of St. Hubertus and St. Augustine's congregations, who was succeeded in April, 1895, by the Rev. Wm. Bruecker. Especially two very practicable improvements have been made by them for the accommodation of the numerous pilgrims. In the first place, two large canvasses were procured to be fastened along the south and west sides of the church to serve as protection against rain and hot sunshine when the interior of the church cannot contain the great number of pilgrims. Secondly, a two-storied Pilgrims' Hall has been erected near the parsonage provided with dining tables, cots and bedding. At present about four hundred pilgrims can find fairly comfortable night rest at four different places.

Besides the regular feast days which are celebrated each summer on Holy Hill, there are other days set aside for pilgrimages and excursions. The annual season for religious observance begins in May, on the twenty-fourth day of which month the Titular Feast of this Church—Mary Help of Christians—is observed. The second Feast is that of the Visitation, which is held on the second day of July. The Feast of the Assumption, commemorative of the bodily assumption of Mary into Heaven, is celebrated on the fifteenth day of August, and that of the Nativity, which celebrates the birth of the Virgin, is held on September 8. The Feast of the Holy Rosary, which invariably comes on the first Sunday in October, is, for convenience sake, celebrated on the Tuesday following that Sunday.

A notable addition to the interest and attractiveness of Holy Hill was made during the year 1897, when a handsome and attractive "Grotto of Lourdes" was built at a point immediately southeast of the church, the same containing beautiful statues of Our Lady of Lourdes and of Bernadette, to whom the Blessed Virgin appeared in the year 1858, near Lourdes, France, which place has since become a noted shrine on account of the many miracles which occurred there through the intercession of the Blessed Virgin. The Grotto at Holy Hill is quite a faithful copy of the original "Grotto of Lourdes." Even the miraculous fountain has been imitated, furnishing to the pilgrims the accommodation of a generous water supply at the summit of the hill. The fourteen stations of the Way of the Cross have likewise been repaired extensively. A kitchen has also been added to the buildings belonging to the Holy Hill property, located east of the eighth station, where a family, besides taking care of the property, also furnishes the pilgrims with meals and lodgings. It is expected that pilgrims will patronize this Holy Hill Hotel, since its managers pay rent into the treasury of Holy Hill in proportion to their income.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART X.

Catholic Institutions—Diocese of Green Bay.

Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Refuge, Green Bay.

THIS religious Order was first established on St. Catherine's day, November 25, 1641, its founder being the venerable servant of God, John Eudes, of Caen, France. Its principal object was to labor for the salvation of souls among the female sex, by protecting young girls and reforming those who had the misfortune to fall into a life of sin and disorder. The saintly Bishop of Buffalo, New York, John Timon, of holy memory, visiting France in the year 1855 and being charmed with the noble work, requested the Sisters to come to America and labor in his diocese. Headed by the venerable and beloved Mother Mary of St. Jerome Tournex, five good Sisters left their native land, to devote their lives to their holy vocation in America. The first house was established in Buffalo, New York, from whence, in course of time, they founded different ones. It was in the year 1882, that Mother Mary Jerome came with six Sisters from Toronto, Canada, to establish her last foundation in Green Bay, Wisconsin. Here she labored continuously, sparing herself in nothing, until her strength was exhausted amidst untold trials and difficulties which surrounded her. Her saintly death occurred on the 26th of September, 1884, the loss being deeply felt by the Sisters, to whom she had been a most exemplary model of a life of self-immolation, devotedness and zeal for the glory of God, for the salvation of souls and the extension and perfection of the Order. The establishment of this house was accomplished with the utmost difficulty, the obstacles and trials with which its advancement was met at the beginning being almost insurmountable; but, by the united efforts of its members, these troubles were finally overcome and the community has prospered to such an extent that the little cottages first rented by the Order on Madison Street have been supplanted by the present pretentious and commodious Monastery. Here the Religious still observe their rules in their primitive strictness, as they were given them by their venerable founder. They are cloistered and never leave their convent after their profession, except when they make new foundations, each of their houses being independent of the others. The present Monastery is built according to the rules of the Order, which enables the Sisters to carry on their work in the manner deemed most suitable. It is divided into different apartments, each being separated by its own stairways, so as to avoid all communications between the different classes of inmates. It contains a class for reform, where the wayward and unfortunate girl will be brought to the condition of virtue and moral strength, and thereby become a useful member of society. There is also a class of preservation, where young girls from the age of thirteen and fourteen years up to twenty-five years of age are received, to be protected and kept away from dangers to which they might otherwise be exposed. These are taught all kinds of house-work, such as laundry work, baking, sewing, etc.; besides this, they are also instructed during certain hours of the day in the branches of an ordinary education. In addition to these, a class for the benefit and instruction of the little children of poor parents is also kept. Besides this, there is a class for boarders, where children are received upon special arrangements, particular attention being given to preparing them for their first Holy Communion. The Monastery also contains an apartment for old ladies, where their last days are made happy by the loving care bestowed upon them by the good and gentle Sisters.

Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Refuge, Green Bay.

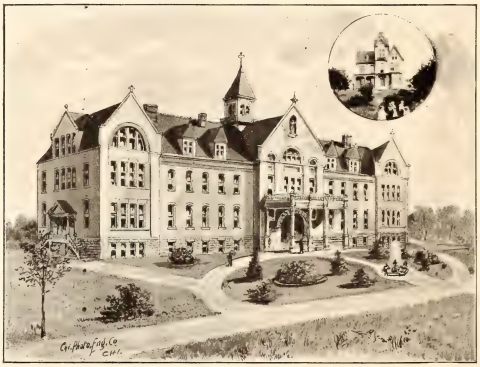
The Monastery chapel is in the middle of the building, where it has been tastefully arranged and laid out in the shape of a cross. By this arrangement, the center is made available for the choir of the Religious, while the side wings are used as chapels for the inmates. The Monastery has all of the advantages of religious service, being supplied with its own chaplain, who is at the present time represented by the Rev. Francis Toplack, formerly of St. Paul, Minnesota.

No restrictions are enforced as regards the religious denomination or creed to which those applying for admission to the Refuge may belong, it only being required of them that they conform strictly to the rules and practices of the house. There are at present over one hundred inmates in the institution. During the past year, eight of these have received Holy Baptism; four adults have been received into the Church; twenty-six have received their First Communion and were confirmed; in fact, the work of the Order is fast progressing, as it should do, for the institution is certainly one of the most useful and beneficial to mankind.

St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, Green Bay, Wis.

DURING the episcopate of the Right Rev. Joseph Melcher, who was the first Bishop of Green Bay, the Ursuline Nuns, of St. Louis, Missouri, opened an academy for young ladies in this city, in a building purchased for the purpose, and situated on the corner of Crooks street and Webster avenue. In 1877, owing to the small attendance and hard times, the Sisters left, and the building was purchased by the Right Rev. F. X. Krautbauer, second Bishop of Green Bay, and on June 29, 1877, opened as an Orphan Asylum, with Sisters from Notre Dame Convent, Milwaukee, in charge, and the Venerable Sister M. Melania, who is still the Superior, at their head. This faithful mother of orphans relates that early in the year 1879, there being still quite a debt on the building and means of support needed, one day two orphans applied for admission to the Asylum, saying they wished to live and die there, they being full orphans, aged respectfully sixty-five and sixty-three years. The elder, Miss Gertrude Zens, died February 24, 1879, and her brother, Nicholas, on April 24, some two months later, leaving enough funds to the institution to almost clear the entire indebtedness on the place. Another curious incident in connection with the early history of the Asylum, is the fact that the first three boys admitted to it were half-breed Indians.



St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, Green Bay, Wis.

The Very Rev. N. Kersten, now of St. Francis, Wisconsin, and formerly Vicar-General of Green Bay, was for fifteen years director of the St. Joseph Orphan Asylum, and to his able management is undoubtedly owing its subsequent success. While the Most Rev. F. X. Katzer was Bishop of Green Bay, Father Kersten purchased what was known as the Shaylor farm, in the town of Allouez, about two miles from the center of the city, containing about twenty-eight acres of land, and with a beautiful residence, which, during the years 1893 and 1894, served as a home for the "babies" among the orphans, the old Asylum having grown too small for the accommodation of all the children. Shortly after the arrival of the present Bishop, the Right Rev. S. G. Messmer, a meeting of the diocesan clergy was called by the Bishop to consider ways and means to erect a new asylum to accommodate the ever-increasing number of children. At this meeting a unanimous resolution was passed to build in 1893, and a generous subscription was at once started. The building, however, was not undertaken until the spring of 1894, when the Very Rev. J. J. Fox, the present Vicar-General, was given charge of the Orphan Asylum. Plans were drawn by Architect H. Messmer, of Milwaukee, and the contract let to W. E. Reynolds, of Green Bay. The result of the undertaking was a beautiful home on the most charming spot in Brown County, on the banks of the Fox River, nearly midway between the cities of Green Bay and De Pere. This is also close to the historic spot where Pere Marquette landed, and where, in later years (1816), was located Fort Smith, afterwards transferred across the river and named Fort Howard. The building has an area of 50x170 feet, with a wing 35x80 feet, the whole structure being two stories in height aside from the basement and attic. Complete, the building furnishes ample accommodations for two hundred children. There are at present about one hundred and sixty orphans at the Asylum. Enough cannot be said in praise of the priests and people of the diocese for the generous manner in which they responded to the appeal for contributions to erect this new home. Several bequests have also been received, and thus this noble work of charity, ever the pride of the Catholic Church, goes on. During the nineteen years of its existence, St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum has sheltered six hundred and eighty-two homeless children, saving them, soul and body, where otherwise they might have been irretrievably lost.

In 1894 Bishop Messmer purchased thirteen acres of land adjoining the Asylum property on the south side, and lately (1896) Father Fox bought twenty-five acres on the north side, thus giving to the Asylum quite a farm of most valuable land. It is most assuredly the devout wish of every true Catholic that this establishment, so benevolent of plan and purpose, may, under the protection of its patron saint, continue to do good and multiply its benefactions an hundred fold.

Convent of the Holy Cross, Bay Settlement, Wis.

ACCORDING to the records of that institution, the Convent of Holy Cross, at Bay Settlement, Wisconsin, was established in 1857 by Fathers of the Holy Cross of the congregation by that name from the mother house of St. Agatha, in North Brabant, Holland. At that time the members of this community were the Very Rev. Father Daems, O. S. C., Superior; the Rev. W. De Yonge, O. S. C.; the Rev. Father Nuits, O. S. C.; the Rev. A. Aarts, O. S. C., and the Rev. E. W. Verhoeff, O. S. C., who, having up to that time administered to the spiritual wants of the Catholics in Little Chute now entered the Convent as members of the community.

Ten years prior to this time, on the 29th of May, the Rev. Theodore J. Van den Broek, who since 1834 had labored continuously among the Indians at the Bay Settlement, and erected and dedicated a church to St. John Nepomuc at that place in 1839, returned to Holland, his native country, where he published at Amsterdam a pamphlet, setting forth a few of the many advantages Wisconsin held out to industrious immigrants. As a result of this effort on his part, many of his countrymen were induced to come to this State, the first three ship loads sailing from the ports of Holland in 1848. In company with these people, Father Van den Broek returned to the field of his former labors. There also came with him at that time another priest, the Rev. Father Godhard, who had decided to devote the rest of his life and energy to missionary work in the Northwest. All of the people who were thus piloted to the new world by Father Van den Broek settled at Little Chute, or at points contiguous to that place. It was in the month of September of that same year, that the Rev. W. De Yonge and Father Hubert Nuits also came to this country, with a view to establishing themselves among their countrymen at Little Chute. When Father Van den Broek died in November, 1853, it was decided by the remaining priests to transfer their residence to Manitowoc Rapids. In order to do this, it was necessary to obtain the consent of the Superior of the Order, and for that purpose Father De Yonge returned to Holland in 1854, where he made the necessary arrangements. Some time during the following year, he returned to America, accompanied by the Rev. W. C. Verhoeff. During the absence of Father De Yonge in Europe, Bishop Henni appointed the Rev.

Father Daems as rector of the congregation at Little Chute. This was a most satisfactory decision on the part of the Bishop, as the Rev. Father, thoroughly understanding many different languages, was thus enabled to be of great service to the diocese of Milwaukee. Soon after the return of Father De Yonge to Little Chute, he was recalled by his Superior to Holland, but Bishop Henni, who had found in him an efficient and tireless worker and great aid, wrote to the Superior, requesting that Father Daems be substituted. This was done, Father Daems returning to America in 1856, when he brought with him the Rev. Father Aarts. In the following year, 1857, having purchased one hundred and three acres of land at Lime Stone Ridge, near the Bay Settlement, in behalf of the community, Father Daems founded the Convent of the Holy Cross at Bay Settlement. The property thus purchased by him he had secured from the Rev. H. D. Bonduel, who had erected a church and parsonage on the property some twelve years previously. The arrangement made for its transfer was in the way of a pension, the community allowing Father Bonduel a yearly pension of $200 during his lifetime. The warranty deed conveying this property in perpetuum, and recorded on February 9, 1856, is as follows: This Indenture, made the 9th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1857, between John Martin Henni, Bishop of Milwaukee, in the State of Wisconsin, party of the first part, and Edward Daems, of Bay Settlement, the County of Brown, and State aforesaid, party of the second part, Witnesseth: That the said party of the first part, for and in consideration of (form of the United States) one dollar, to him paid by the said party of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, has given, granted, bargained, sold and conveyed, and by these presents doth give, grant, bargain, sell and convey unto the said Edward Daems, his heirs and assigns forever, all the right, title and interest of the said party of the first part, of, in and to that certain piece or parcel of land, situated, lying and being in the town of Bay Settlement, in the county of Brown aforesaid, and on what is known as the "Limestone Ridge," and bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a certain black oak tree standing on the west side of the public highway, in the line bounding the north side of land now or formerly of John Baptist Laplante, where said line crosses the highway; thence north 30 degrees east along the west side of said highway to a point three (3) chains and fifteen (15) links; thence due west six (6) chains and thirty (30) links to a post; thence south 38 degrees west, three (3) chains and fifteen (15) links to a post on said line; thence due east six (6) chains and thirty (30) links to the point of beginning; containing two square acres of land; one square acre of land lying directly opposite on the east side of said public highway, and bounded on the north by land now or heretofore owned by said Laplante, on the west by said highway, and on the south and east by land now or heretofore of J. F. Bonduel, said piece of land being by measurement three chains and fifty links on each of its sides. Said premises are the same that F. J. Bonduel conveyed to the Rt. Rev. Paul Le Fevre, Bishop of Detroit, and to his successor in office, by his deed, dated the 29th day of July, A. D. 1843, and recorded at the office of the register of deeds for said Brown County, in volume M. of deeds, upon pages 416 and 417.

Together with all the rights, privileges, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or in any wise appertaining, and all the estate, right, title, interest, claim or demand whatsoever, of the said party of the first part, either in possession or expectancy of, to the above bargained premises and their hereditaments and appurtenances. To have and to hold the said premises, as above described, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, unto the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns forever. And the said party of the first part for himself and his heirs, executors and administrators doth covenant, grant, bargain and agree to and with the said party of the second part and his heirs and assigns, that the above bargained premises in the peaceable and quiet possession of the said party of the second part and his heirs and assigns against all and every person or persons lawfully claiming the whole or any part thereof, by, through or under the said party of the first part, his heirs or assigns, will forever warrant and defend, and against no other person or persons, anything therein contained to the contrary notwithstanding, provided, however, that the said party of the second part shall reside and continue to reside upon said premises, and that he shall maintain a Catholic church upon said premises, and that, if he fail so to do and if he reside there on said premises, hereby granted and all the right and estate hereby conveyed, shall revert and return to the said party of the first part, his heirs and assigns, with the obligation, however, upon the party of the first part, such sum or sums of money, as shall be equivalent in value to the improvements made thereon by said party of the second part and thereon remaining at the time of such return and reversion.

In testimony whereof, the said party of the first part hath hereunto set his hand and seal the day and year first above written.

(Seal) JOHN M. HENNI,
Ep. Milwaukee.

Signed, sealed and delivered in presence of George Riordan. JOHN H. BROWNSON.

State of Wisconsin, } ss.
Milwaukee County. }

On this ninth day of February, A. D. 1857, personally came before me the above named John M. Henni, to me known to be the person who executed the foregoing instrument, and acknowledged that he executed the same truly and voluntarily for the uses and purposes therein mentioned.

JOHN H. BROWNSON,
Notary Public, Milwaukee County, Wisconsin.

Respecting the subsequent experiences of this Order at the Bay Settlement, it may be said, that some of the Holy Cross Fathers died there while in the performance of their duties, while others returned to their old home in Europe; and, finally, Father Daems was left alone for a number of years attending the parish of Bay Settlement, during which period he was, for a while, Administrator of Green Bay Diocese. After his death the property belonging to the Order reverted to the Rt. Rev. Bishop of the diocese.

St. Francis Convent, Bay Settlement, Wis.

THIS Sisterhood was founded in the fall of the year 1867, by the Rev. E. F. Daems, O. S. C., for the purpose of enlarging the sphere of education among the Catholic families and parishes of the country. These Sisters have taught the parochial school in Bay Settlement, from the time of its establishment in February, 1868 until the present time.

St. Francis' Convent, Bay Settlement, Wis.

But the Sisters have other calls upon their time and consideration, as being members of the Third Order of St. Francis, it is part of their vocation to attend to any of the many other charitable and religious works which may be brought to their knowledge. Thus the sick and unfortunate have as much of a claim upon their consideration as the little ones, to whose education a large share of their time is devoted. At the present, there are twenty-one professed Sisters, four novices and one postulant. They conduct schools in six parishes in the diocese of Green Bay.

Menomonee Institute, Keshena, Wis.

THE congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph was founded by the Rev. Father John Medaille, of the Society of Jesus. The first house of the congregation was established at Le Puy, in Velay, France, on the 15th of October, 1650, and canonically erected by Mgr. de Maupas, Bishop of Le Puy, on the 10th of March, 1651. The Institute spread rapidly, and soon had establishments in the dioceses of Le Puy, Clement, Viviers, Uses, Lyons and others.

The all-destructive Revolution of 1792 dispersed the Institute. Divine Providence willed, however, that some of the houses should escape the fury of the storm. Amid the mountain fastnesses of Forez and Velay, the Ecclesiastical Superiors of the diocese of Lyons found the survivors of the persecution when they set to work to repair its ravages. Mother St. John Fontbonne, who had courageously confessed the faith, and whom the fall of Robespierre alone saved from the guillotine, reëstablished the Order in 1807.

In 1834 the Right Rev. Joseph Rosati, Bishop of St. Louis, being on a visit to France to obtain co-laborers in his vast missionary field, stopped at the mother house of the congregation in Lyons and earnestly entreated Mother St. John to send a colony of her daughters to America. As a result of this invitation, on January 17, 1836, six Sisters of the Order sailed from Havre, and after a long and perilous voyage reached New Orleans, from whence they ascended the Mississippi. They arrived at St. Louis on the 25th of March, 1836, and established the first house of the congregation in North America at Carondelet, a small town five miles distant from St. Louis.

At present the congregation has houses in France, Italy, England, Denmark, Russia, Scandinavia, India, and South America. In North America it has numerous convents in Missouri, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, West Virginia, Massachusetts, Vermont, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Illinois, Indiana, Menomonee Institute, Keshena, Wis.

Menomonee Indian Chiefs.

Catholic Mission, Keshena. Part of St. Joseph's Indian Industrial School, Keshena. Part of Indian Grave Yard in rear.

First Catholic Church Erected on the Stockbridge Reservation, in Shawano County, in 1894; Dedicated Nov. 22, 1894.

Managers and Pupils of St. Joseph's Indian Industrial School, Keshena. Catholic Mission of Little Oconto.

Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan, Colorado, California, Minnesota, South Dakota, and Arizona; also in the dioceses of Toronto, Hamilton and London, Canada.

The first foundation of the Order in Wisconsin was made in the autumn of 1881, when the Rev. Zephyrin Engelhardt, O. S. F., then pastor of the Sacred Heart parish, at Shawano, opened a Catholic school in that place. At his request, four Sisters came from the mother house at Carondelet, to take charge of the same. This school has prospered, and the Sisters now have all the Catholic children of the place under their care. Instructions are imparted in both English and German. A high school department and music class are also connected with the school.

Two years later, in the fall of 1883, the Franciscan Fathers invited the Sisters to take charge of the Industrial School they had erected for the Indian children at Keshena, Shawano County. On the 21st of November, three Sisters arrived and entered upon their arduous mission among the Menomonees. The following year two more were added to their number, and in 1885, on the opening of the sewing department, the services of another became necessary, and a sixth Sister was added to the force.

For fourteen years the Sisters have labored faithfully among the children of the Pines. In the beginning there were many privations to endure, many difficulties to encounter, but the remembrance of Him for whom they labored sustained and consoled them, and to-day they can contemplate with joy and gratitude the success which has crowned their efforts. Nothing has been left undone by the zealous priests and Sisters to make the children of St. Joseph's Industrial School true Christians. Many are an honor to their pastors and teachers, and can compete favorably with children of more civilized races.

Visitors to the School speak in the highest terms of the work accomplished by the pupils in the sewing-room, kitchen and laundry. The class work also deserves much credit when one remembers the natural repugnance of the Indian for mental exertion. Vocal and instrumental music are taught to those children who show a special aptitude for them. During the year 1897, seven Sisters were engaged in the instruction of the pupils of St. Joseph's Indian Industrial School at Keshena.

Menomonee Hospital at Keshena.

January 1, 1886, the Sisters of this Order took charge of the Menomonee Hospital on the Keshena Reservation. Here the number of patients received and cared for annually averages about one hundred. Within the past eleven years, the Sisters have been able to effect much good among the sick and afflicted, and that most Indians appreciate the kindness and care bestowed upon them is proved by their desire to be taken to the Sisters as soon as illness of any description attacks them. Even many Indians not yet converted to Christianity go gladly to the Hospital and place themselves under the Sisters' charge. While ministering to their bodily ills, the Sisters have many opportunities of doing good to their souls, and in this manner many sincere conversions have been wrought, many souls have been brought back to the observance of God's law or prepared for their journey to Eternity.

Sisters' School at Oconto.

On the feast of St. Joseph, March 19, 1887, seven Sisters of St. Joseph, at the invitation of the Rev. F. Vaillant, pastor of St. Peter's parish at Oconto, opened a school for the children of that parish. This school has been very successful, and is in a most flourishing condition.

St. John's School at Green Bay.

On August 28, 1893, six Sisters of St. Joseph with headquarters at St. Louis, Missouri, went to Green Bay and took charge of St. John's School, which is located on Jefferson and Milwaukee streets. For three years they occupied a private residence on Jefferson street. In the summer of 1896, the Reverend Mother Agatha, Superioress-General of the Order, purchased the property on the corner of Madison and Milwaukee streets, and on the Feast of St. Michael, September 29th, the Sisters took possession of their new home. In the spring of 1897 many repairs and improvements were made, the chapel was remodeled, and on the 2d of July the Right Rev. Bishop Messmer dedicated it to St. Joseph and celebrated Holy Mass in the presence of the members of the community and of the Sister Visitatrix of the Order. In September, 1897, the Sisters opened an Academy for Girls at their convent.

St. Mary's Institute, Marinette, Wis.

ST. MARY'S INSTITUTE, Marinette, a select boarding school for young ladies and little girls, is one of the leading educational institutions of Wisconsin, and is conducted by the School Sisters of Notre Dame. In the spring of 1876, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Krautbauer, seeing the necessity of a Catholic School in Marinette, conferred with the late lamented Mother Caroline, and the result was the purchase of the land, the house upon which was built by the Rev. P. Pernin after the destruction of the church by fire in 1871 and which was used as a temporary church. September of the same year witnessed the arrival of the pioneer band, three Sisters and a candidate, with Sister M. Leopoldina as local Superior. Rev. Father Chebul, a zealous missionary, pastor of the church, was the first chaplain. Six boarding and eighty day pupils formed the nucleus of the present thriving Academy and Parish School combined.

The first building, an unpretentious frame structure, witnessed the many struggles that so often characterize new foundations. As time passed and the school had acquired a most creditable reputation, the old building was found inadequate to accommodate the constantly increasing number of pupils. Plans were drawn, and in 1890 the corner-stone of the present handsome building was laid, the Rev. J. J. Fox having in 1883 become pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church. At the completion of the new building, it was deemed advisable, and also made possible by the accommodations, to separate the boarding pupils from the Parish School pupils. This was effected, and the Academy at the present date has its own staff of efficient teachers in the Elementary and Higher Grades, Languages, Music, Art and Domestic Economy. At no time in the history of the school has the attendance been so great or the prospects more encouraging than at the present. The Academy is taxed to its utmost capacity, and it will probably be a matter of but limited time before a large addition will be built. The Rev. T. Richard is the esteemed chaplain and Sister M. Gonzalva, local Superior.

St. Mary's Institute, Marinette, Wis.

At a meeting held in Marinette in June of the present year for the purpose of organizing an "Alumni," about forty of the old graduates responded to the call. The Rev. Father Fox, the first and ever-cherished chaplain, and the Rev. Father Richard, the present esteemed pastor, presided. Among the many who have received their education at "St. Mary's," and who are now popular and respected members of society, true to the principles of their Alma Mater, we briefly mention: Mrs. Mary Carney Moran, Mrs. Lillie Johnson Despins, Mrs. Nellie Tobin Bohan, Mrs. May Frost Bloom, Mrs. Knauf Raiche; Misses M. Fenton, C. Kellerman, L. Ringwood, T. Cannon, M. Ross, E. S. and M. Quinlan of the Twin Cities; Misses K., H. and M. Dorschell of Chilton, G. Armstrong of Beaver Dam; E. Schroeder of Milwaukee; Lorine Knauf of Chilton; Catharine Vos of Muskegon, Mich., and Catharine Lavin of Milwaukee.

Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Oshkosh, Wis.

OF this institution, the "Headlight," a souvenir publication issued in behalf of the city of Oshkosh in 1896, says:

"The alleviation of the distress of humanity commands the profoundest respect of the people, and those who devote their lives to the nursing of the sick, without expectation of reward or recompense, certainly deserve at least kindly consideration and help. This brotherhood is noted for the piety of its votaries and its unselfish devotion to the cause of humanity. They have become expert nurses, and spend their lives in binding up the wounds of the injured, and nursing the sick back to health. The Oshkosh branch of the brotherhood has a splendid hospital, which was erected in 1884. The building, which has accommodation for one hundred patients, is situated in the midst of a beautiful lawn, surrounded by noble trees, and is one of the many beauty spots of the city. Bernard Wilmerding is director, and Dr. M. E. Corbett is attending physician."

St. Mary's Hospital, Oshkosh, Wis.

SINCE its establishment at Oshkosh, St. Mary's Hospital has become one of the notable institutions of that city. This hospital is in charge of the Sisters of the Sorrowful Mother, while the medical staff associated with it is composed of a number of the best-known and most highly regarded resident physicians and surgeons. So successful has this institution been, that a new building was erected in 1894 with accommodations for fifty beds, and being equipped throughout with all of the most modern and approved appliances for the care and comfort of the sick and injured.

St. Mary's Hospital, Oshkosh, Wis.

Rev. Adam Seeber, Chaplain.

Commissariate General of Polish Franciscan Fathers, Pulaski, Wis.

IT was on January 17th, 1887, that Mr. J. J. Hof donated to the Most Rev. Frederick Xavier Katzer, then Bishop of Green Bay, several acres of land, as the site for the erection of a Franciscan Convent for Polish members of the Order. This matter had been under consideration prior to the time of this gift, it having been properly laid before the Most Rev. Pere Bernadinus, who forthwith sent his consent to the undertaking, in a letter dated at Rome, and bearing the date of February 12, of the same year. In addition to this, the Holy Congregation of Regulation and Discipline, at Rome, endowed the new community with all of the rights and privileges rendered to this Order by the Popes, in a letter dated April 19, following.

The first priests who were sent to assume charge of this monastery by the Superior General of the Order, were the Revs. Peres Erasmus Saboinski and Stanislaus Jeka.

Convent of the Secular Sisters of St. Francis, Robinsonville, Wis.

OF this institution we have been furnished with the following data: The chapel was built in the year 1880, and the convent in the year 1885. Those in charge are known as Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis, of whom there are three. Boys attending the convent school, twenty; girls, fifteen.

St. Aloysius' Institute, Sevastopol, Wis.

ST. Aloysius' Institute was erected in 1892, by the Rt. Rev. S. G. Messmer, with personal funds. The Right Rev. Bishop's intention in building the "Institute" was to give Catholic educational facilities to the children at those missions north of Sturgeon Bay, and for any other mission where the distance was too great from Catholic schools.

St. Aloysius' Institute, Sevastopol, Wis.

As a result of this wise and benevolent arrangement of the Bishop, parents may send their children to be prepared for their First Communion and Confirmation at the least possible expense. The Institute, which can accommodate about forty boarders, is located in the neighborhood of seven miles northeast from Sturgeon Bay, in the town of Sevastopol. The location is fine and the building spacious, containing commodious dormitories, play-rooms, and large sewing-class rooms, fully equipped, giving ample accommodation to the children of the parish, also, who attend there. This part of the country has bright prospects, there being still a large area of exceptionally valuable and unoccupied lands for settlement, while the early construction of a railroad around the island is being earnestly agitated by men of capital who have the welfare and prosperity of the locality at heart. Thus the future of the Institute is promising.

Brief as the time since its erection, the Institute has proved the source of countless blessings to the many children who have received Christian training within its walls, and who otherwise would never have had that happiness. Thus in time the labor and sacrifice of the zealous Bishop will bear worthy fruit.

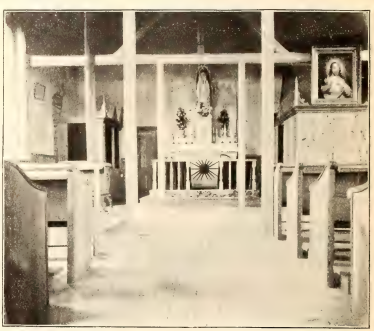
Children are received any time within the scholastic year for instruction, the latter being given in French or German, as well as English when deemed necessary. From the time of its opening, in January, 1893, until August, 1896, the Benedictine Sisters were in charge, but since the latter date the administration of the Institute has been in the hands of the Sisters of the Franciscan Order.

Oneida Catholic Mission of St. Mary's.

Attended from Freedom, Wis.

THE Oneida Indians, one of the five nations, were first visited by the missionary fathers in the year 1657, when Fathers Chaumonot and Menard, S. J., made a short stay at their village, then located in that portion of the United States now known as the state of New York. It was ten years later that Father Bruyas, S. J., started the mission of St. Francis Xavier among them, and with whom he was replaced by Father Milet in 1671, when he was appointed Superior of all the Iroquois missions. Father Milet, with one or two short interruptions, worked faithfully among these people, and was with them even later than 1694, during which years Frontenac accomplished a notable victory over the Oneidas. When, still later, the Puritans suppressed the Catholics, rendering any missionary work by that denomination among these Indians impossible, many of the Iroquois removed to Canada and among them a large number of the Christian Oneidas. Many years later the tide of European immigration drove the Oneidas towards the West, and finally the Government of the United States gave them, in exchange for a portion of their holdings in New York, a tract of land near the bay, afterwards designated Green Bay. This grant, or rather exchange, was made in the year 1815, shortly after which the Oneidas removed to their new home.

Of late years a number of the Oneidas have expressed a desire to embrace Christianity as it was taught to their forefathers two hundred years ago. The first of these converts was baptized in 1884, by Father Lau, then of Greenville. Five years later, the Franciscan Fathers of Keshena baptized seven children of the tribe, and shortly after some adults came of their own accord and requested Father P. Lochman, of Freedom, to instruct them in the Catholic religion. On February 4, 1890, eight adults were solemnly admitted into the fold of the Catholic Church, by the Right Rev. Bishop



Interior of Immaculate Conception Chapel at Oneida.

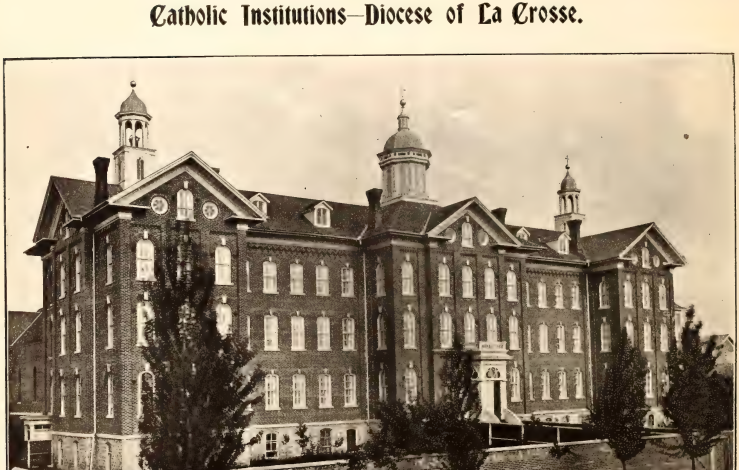
Katzer of Green Bay, and during the same year six more were baptized at Sagola and six at Keshena. After this favorable demonstration an effort was made towards the erection of a little church, but the government, for some reason or other, objected to the plan. At length, however, Mr. Eli Skennendoah donated a piece of land for church and cemetery purposes, and Bishop Katzer and Father Lochman took it upon themselves to build a church without further soliciting government aid. So on October 25, 1891, the framework had been so far completed that the chapel was blessed and given over to divine service. To this building Father Hens, now of Chilton, Wis., donated a beautiful statue of the Immaculate Conception, and afterwards, also, the stations of the Way of the Cross. Father Selbach succeeded Father Lochman and has ever since done his best to promote the growth and interests of the little flock.

Bishop Messmer took great interest in the Oneida missions, visiting them repeatedly, and donating a bell and a beautiful painting to the chapel. Meanwhile the building was veneered and other necessary improvements and additions were made. Father Selbach's exertions in behalf of these people resulted in the appointment of an assistant priest, but as the funds procurable were inadequate for his maintenance, the furtherance of the effort had for a while to be abandoned. Up to the present time, eighty-one Oneidas have been baptized and received into the Catholic church. Of these seventy-five are at present living.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART XI.

Catholic Institutions—Diocese of La Crosse.



St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent. Mother House and Novitiate of Franciscan Sisters, La Crosse, Wis.

Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration.

SHORTLY after Easter in the year 1849 a small community, consisting of two priests with three Brothers and seven Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis, came to Wisconsin. The name of the older priest was A. Keppler and of the younger one Math. Steiger. They came provided with the best recommendations from the Diocese of Augsburg, Bavaria, and their intention was to establish a home in the Diocese of Milwaukee, there to coöperate in promoting the Catholic religion in Wisconsin. Their greatest difficulty seemed to be in devising a method by which the best possible results might be obtained, thus subserving to the greatest advantage the purpose for which they had come so far. Bishop John Martin Henni, who, having spent over a year in Europe in the interest of his Diocese, had returned to America at the same time, did not go immediately to Milwaukee, being first compelled to tarry at Baltimore, there to take part in the Council, which continued in session from the fourth to the fifth Sunday after Easter. Bishop Henni returned to Milwaukee on Pentecost, and during the time intervening this little band of strangers remained at Franklin, Milwaukee county, as guests of the Rev. Martin Kundig, at that time Rector of the congregation there. Bishop Henni, however, believing the place unsuitable for the purposes intended, expressed a desire that they choose some other location. Soon after, upon his recommendation, they bought thirty-five acres of land South of Milwaukee, where for the time being they lived in the log houses which they found already upon the property. As soon as practicable they began the erection of a small Convent, which was finished in the fall of the year of their arrival. The building, a one-story frame affair, built square, was surrounded by a small yard, in the center of which was located a well. Later on a chapel and a residence for the priests and lay brothers were also built. As the community had no income whatsoever and the thirty-five acres were not sufficient to afford them proper sustenance, one of the number, Father Steiger, an excellent and zealous priest, attended Holy Cross congregation near Port Washington and afterwards St. Mathias congregation on the Beloit road, which place he visited on foot from the little Convent. Father Keppler also assisted in these missionary labors by taking charge of the congregation at New Coeln, where he resided most of the time. Thus, for a while the little community was threatened with disintegration, more especially when the cholera scourge, in the fall of 1851, caused the death of both priests, who died undaunted, noble victims in the cause of their suffering fellows. Without a guide the remaining members of the little community found themselves in great perplexity and, but for the watchful solicitude of the Bishop, it is hard to tell what might have become of them. Wisely, however, they followed his advice, and remained at the Convent, where they received weekly visits from one or another of the priests located in Milwaukee. In this condition matters stood until November, 1852, when the Rev. Father Heiss returned from his trip to Europe. He then resigned as rector of St. Mary's congregation, became Secretary of the Bishop and attended at the same time the little community. When the Priests' Seminary was erected at St. Francis in 1856, the Sisters found an abundance of work in the household of this institution, and when the St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum was transferred from Milwaukee to the same place it was given in their charge. In 1860, some dissensions arising among them, the Sister Superior with six other Sisters and novices left the place. This was quite a blow to the interests of the Seminary, but the few remaining undertook and succeeeded in accomplishing the work as heretofore without additional aid. With the assistance of the Seminary, a new Convent was built, of which Sister Mary Antonia Herb from Tiffin, Ohio, was soon elected Superior, which position she maintained until the time of her death, which occurred in 1882.

Rear View of Convent Showing Chapel of Adoration, La Crosse, Wis.

St. Clara's Convent. Branch House of St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent, La Crosse, Wis.

At all times the Mother Superior had three objects in view: (1) The founding of a mother-house that should be entirely independent of the Seminary. (2) The opening of a field of usefulness for the Sisters of the Order, as teachers and nurses, and (3) the introduction of the Perpetual Adoration. In this she obtained the hearty coöperation of the Rev. Father Heiss, who was sincerely interested in the welfare of the organization. In futherance of this plan then, the Rev. M. Heiss went to Roxbury, in Sauk county, where Father Inama had already tried to establish a Convent of his Order, and failed. But he, too, after thoroughly investigating the situation, concluded that the place was not adapted to the purposes. So they looked elsewhere, and finally, on the advice of the Bishop, bought a considerable tract of land at Jefferson, Wis., on the hill near St. Lawrence's Church. In October, 1864 then, in spite of considerable opposition on the part of the local priest, they took possession of the property and began preparations for the establishment of a school, in which undertaking they were greatly aided by the Rev. K. C. Flasch, then professor at the Seminary, who had, on advice of physicians, retired from duty for a time on account of failing health. Though he was obliged to return to the Seminary, he ever after remained a true friend of the community. The Mother Superior was also successful in securing the services of Father Obermueller as spiritual director of the Convent, who, on the 24th of December, 1865, celebrated Mass at St. Laurentius Church for the first time. A new Convent was erected on this property in 1865, and on February 2 of that year eighteen novices took the veil.

In the meantime the small community had increased so as to necessitate the enlargement of the Convent. An additional wing and a spacious chapel were begun and completed in 1868. But now, since eight years of experience had fully proved that Jefferson was not a favorable location for the mother-house, an opportunity to find a more suitable site was much desired. This opportunity was afforded by the erection of the Diocese of La Crosse in 1868, and the appointment of the Rev. M. Heiss as its first Bishop. The congregation of the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis had until now existed under the authority of the Diocesan Bishop of Milwaukee, but in the year 1870 the Rt. Rev. M. Heiss, by letter from Rome, where he was attending the Vatican Council, informed Mother M. Antonia that he had obtained the requisite permission that the mother-house and novitiate be transferred to La Crosse, Wis., under the title and patronage of St. Rose de Viterbo. The Mother Superior, on receipt of this letter, immediately took measures toward erecting a new mother-house and novitiate in La Crosse. Accordingly a piece of land on Market, between Ninth and Tenth streets (seventeen lots), was bought for $1,700. For this purchase and the contemplated building there was a fund of only $2,700, but Mother Antonia's courage did not fail her. In June, 1870, the foundation was begun, and August 21 of the same year the corner-stone was laid. To remove the mother-house was no small task; for, no sooner did the undertaking become known, when from all sides opposition arose; however, Mother Antonia always found in the Rt. Rev. Heiss a strong support, a true friend and co-worker, and thus, in spite of bitter antagonism, even on the part of those from whom encouragement might have been expected, the building progressed rapidly. Owing to financial circumstances, the entire structure as designed in the plan could not be completed at that time, but the main part was completed in the spring of 1871, and the Sisters, then numbering one hundred and seven, took possession of the mother-house on June 11 of the same year. With them went the Rev. F. X. Obermueller, who, resigning his position as pastor of St. Lawrence Church in Jefferson, Wis., came to La Crosse, Wis., where he remained as first chaplain of St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent until his death, which occurred June 12, 1886. On the Feast of the Assumption in 1871, the Rt. Rev. M. Heiss conducted the ceremonies of the first reception and religious profession in the new Convent, a room furnished for the purpose serving for a chapel. An addition extending from east to west on the north side of the main building, and a spacious chapel built St. Ann's Orphan Home. Branch House of St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent, La Crosse, Wis.

St. Rose de Viterbo's Normal School, La Crosse, Wis.

View of Convent Garden Showing Part of Normal School and Hospital, La Crosse, Wis.

in cruciform, Roman style, were begun in 1872. The new chapel was solemnly dedicated by the Rt. Rev. M. Heiss in 1874, under the title of "Mary of the Angels."

To lessen the expense of the buildings the Sisters themselves did all the lathing and the painting of the interior woodwork. When this new addition was nearly completed a fire broke out in the basement during the night of August 11, 1873. How it originated could never be ascertained. The whole structure was in imminent danger of being destroyed, for there were at the time no waterworks in that part of the city, but by well-nigh emptying the cisterns on the premises the fire was fortunately extinguished before great damage had been done. Two years later the south wing was added to the main building. In the meantime as it had always been the ardent desire of the Rt. Rev. M. Heiss and of the Mother Superior that the Sisters lead a more conventual and retired life, Mother Antonia demanded that the Sisters no longer perform certain services heretofore rendered in the Seminary. The discontent caused by this ordinance soon assumed the aspect of a formal dissatisfaction, which in the spring of 1873 resulted in the secession of thirty-six of the Sisters. Nevertheless, the community prospered and God's blessing visibly rested upon it. Soon sufficient means were acquired to facilitate the introduction of the Perpetual Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament in the mother-house. For this purpose an appropriate little chapel, dedicated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, was built, and the adoration began August 1, 1878. From that day to the present hour the same has beeen continued uninterruptedly, day and night. Meanwhile provision had been made also for the orphans of the Diocese of La Crosse. In the Diocesan St. Michael's Orphan Home the Sisters have been rendering gratuitous services since 1875, as well as later in the Girls' Home. That same year a Home for Girls was begun in Sparta, Wis., by the Sisters, and in 1878 the orphan girle, who in the meantime had been kept at St. Michael's, La Crosse, took possession of it. In the fall of 1890 the Girls' Orphan Home was again removed to La Crosse, where the Sisters had erected for them a more spacious edifice at their own expense, under the patronage of St. Ann, on Market street. In the midst of bright prospects and prosperous circumstances under which the community was advancing, Mother M. Antonia was unexpectedly called from her field of labor by a sudden death, January 26, 1882.

Interior of Chapel of "Mary of Angels," St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent, La Crosse, Wis.

Mother Antonia, First Superior of St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent, La Crosse, Wis.

Mother Ludovica Keller, the present Superioress, was elected her successor in office. During her administration the community has been incorporated, and the branch house, St. Francis Hospital, built and opened in December, 1883. Three years later the little Chapel of Adoration was replaced by a larger one, the dedication of which took place June 10, 1886. On the second day after the dedication, June 12, the Rev. F. X. Obermueller departed this life—a sad bereavement, indeed, for the community. Father Obermueller had the happiness of seeing his most ardent wish fulfilled, the completion and dedication of this Chapel. He was born

Group of Orphan Girls, St. Ann's Orphan Asylum, La Crosse, Wis.

October 6, 1810, at Schwarzenberg, Diocese Brixen. He came to America in 1844, and was ordained to the priesthood June 11, 1876. His remains lie in the vault at the Catholic cemetery chapel, in La Crosse. The Rev. H. J. Kruse, former professor at St. Francis, Wis., was next appointed chaplain of the mother-house, and arrived there July 7, 1886. On March 26 of the following year he was attacked by apoplexy of the brain. After long and patient suffering he died May 29, 1887. During the late Father Kruse's illness, the Rev. H. Reinhart, his intimate friend, acted as chaplain, continuing to do so until his return to the Seminary, August 29, 1887. After this, for nearly a year, the Rt. Rev. K. C. Flasch, Bishop of La Crosse, assumed the office of chaplain of the community until May 26, 1888, the present chaplain, the Rev. K. G. Beyer, appointed by his Lordship, arrived at the mother-house. In 1890 the branch house, St. Joseph's Convent, on Sixth street, Milwaukee, was built, and in 1893 St. Clara's Convent, on Caledonia street, North La Crosse. In the spring of 1890 the community was again visited with a severe affliction—the death of its saintly founder, the Most Rev. M. Heiss, Archbishop of Milwaukee, Wis. His Grace had in December, 1889, retired to St. Francis Hospital, La Crosse, in order to recuperate his much-affected health. Here, after a lingering illness, he died March 26, 1890. Time had not yet begun to heal the wound, when another equally keen blow struck the community by the early death of its great benefactor and true friend, the Rt. Rev. K. C. Flasch, Bishop of La Crosse. In him the last of the faithful, untiring, zealous laborers for the early welfare of the community passed away. The steady growth of the community again necessitated the enlargement of the Convent, consequently a building, used principally for the education of the teaching members of the community, was erected on Market street in 1892.

Thus the work, begun with such undaunted confidence in God, stands to-day in full vigor. At present (1897), the community counts three hundred and five members, who, besides the Sisters stationed in the mother-house, the hospital, and the two orphan homes, are active in seven branch houses and forty-four parochial schools.

St. Ann's Orphan Asylum, La Crosse, Wis.

ST. ANN'S Orphan Asylum for Girls, at La Crosse, is a commodious brick building, located opposite the St. Francis Hospital on Market street. It was erected in 1889, and on September 20th of that year the orphan girls attending it, then numbering thirty-nine, were transferred from Sparta to the present building, which is large enough and sufficiently furnished for the accommodation of one hundred and twenty-five children. Previous to the date given, and subsequent to 1878, a similar institution was located at Sparta, where the orphans were cared for. Children are received at this institution between the ages of two and twelve years, and up to the year 1898 four hundred and thirty-three girls had been received into the institution. This being entirely a work of charity, the inmates naturally look for their support to the generous contributions of the diocese, which, thus far, have been a lasting credit to the same. In addition to this, of course, in the case of a surviving parent who is able to do so, the children also receive support from that direction. At the present time (January 1, 1898), there are seventy-five girls in St. Ann's Asylum, who range in age from three to fifteen years, the average age, however, at the present time, being less than seven years. While attending this institution, the children receive a thorough religious, as well as educational, training, and are, moreover, taught what in later life will be most useful in their support—sewing, knitting, washing, ironing, cooking, and general housekeeping. Eight Sisters are employed in this work of instruction at St. Ann's Orphan Asylum, of whom Sister M. Raphael is the present Superior.

View of St. Francis' Hospital Showing West Wing on Tenth Street, La Crosse, Wis.

St. Francis' Hospital, La Crosse, Wis.

THE St. Francis Hospital was erected by the Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration in 1883. Long before the undertaking became feasible, the good Sisters of this Order had recognized the necessity of a hospital in the city, and to that end, as early as 1883, acquired the property on which the present St. Francis Hospital now stands. The original building erected on this site, which, by the way, is now the central part of the entire structure, which fronts on Market street, was built during the same year, and the Government Marine Hospital for La Crosse established in one of its wards soon after. Although the value of such an institution was immediately recognized by the people of La Crosse, its growth, owing to the restricted means of the Community, was naturally slow, but so popular did the Sisters make it, and so satisfactory was the work accomplished by them, that the patronage soon exceeded the possibilities of the establishment, so that in 1886, three years after its erection, it was necessary to enlarge the old building, to which an addition on the west side was then built. This addition was a great improvement to the property, overshadowing in the matter of its appearance, and particularly in its interior furnishings and fixtures, which were entirely up to date, the original structure. The increasing facilities thus afforded made it possible for the accomplishment of even better work than that which had theretofore been done, and, as a consequence, the Hospital became better known and appreciated. In 1891 the business of the house had assumed such proportions that still another addition became a necessity, and the building was still further enlarged by what is at the present time known as the Chapel addition. From this time on, year by year, improvements have been added to the property, until at the present time it is one of the most substantial, thoroughly equipped and served institutions of its character in the country.

Corner in Operating Room, St. Francis Hospital, La Crosse, Wis.

Particular stress may here, in all fairness, be laid on the peculiarly effective condition of the surgical department connected with this hospital, to which a great amount of consideration has been given to facilitate such work, and better enables surgeons to more easily carry out the details pertaining to modern surgery. An addition to the west wing was built during the year 1896, which, as a matter of solidity, convenience and completeness, is considered by those best able to judge as equal to any similar department to be found.

The building as now completed occupies two sides of the square between Tenth and Eleventh streets, running 174 feet on the former, being 45 feet in depth and having a frontage on Market street of 200 feet. The entire building is three stories in height, exclusive of the basement. The interior contains forty-four private rooms and eight wards, which, altogether, furnish accommodations for one hundred and twenty patients. The chapel occupies the east end of the building on Market street. Its interior is finished in oak, and contains galleries in the rear for the convenience of the patients on the different floors of the building. Immediately back of the chapel, on the ground floor, are the apartments occupied by the resident chaplain. The basement of the old, or central, part of the building, contains the kitchen, dining-room for the servants, as well as a large steam sterilizer, laundry, boilers, electric motors, store-rooms, cold storage, etc. On the first floor of the hospital are a number of private rooms for the patients, the office of the secretary, and large study hall for the nurses. The pharmacy, twelve private rooms and four wards of a similar character are on the third floor, which are occupied respectively by aged men and women, many of whom are in indigent circumstances, and have no visible means of support. The working portion of the hospital is located in the extension fronting Tenth street. This section has a capacity for accommodating sixty patients, and in its arrangements and appointments is as perfect as scientific understanding of the necessities involved could possibly make it. The halls in this portion are wide, the rooms spacious, well lighted and sunny. Separate ventilating shafts give perfect and independent ventilation to each room, while the Johnson system of temperature regulation assures an even and suitable temperature at all times. Every room is provided with an electric call button, whereby communication is readily obtained with nurses' room on each respective floor. In addition to this, and for the convenience of the night nurse, all rooms of the three floors are connected with the main indicator in the head nurse's room on the second floor. Each floor is also provided with a telephone, by means of which communication can readily be held with the different floors, the office, pharmacy, kitchen and city. Bath and toilet rooms for the patients are provided on each floor, while in the basement a suite of rooms is fitted up for Turkish, vapor and medicated baths.

Rev. Henry Reinhart, Chaplain.

An electric elevator receives the patients from the ambulance, who are thus conveyed without noise or unnecessary agitation to any floor of the building. In addition to the apartments already referred to, the operating, dressing and surgeon's room are on the second floor. There are also a number of receiving rooms for patients, a dressing room, general operating room, anaesthetic room, sterilizing room, and a consulting room.

That St. Francis Hospital has received suitable and substantial recognition of its great value and service to the Community, may be realized from the fact that the number admitted and treated successfully increases from year to year.

The first resident chaplain connected with St. Francis Hospital was the Rev. John Foppe, who assumed the duties of that office on February 22, 1892, and remained at the hospital until May 1, 1893, at which time he returned to his native home in Holland. His successor, the present chaplain, the Rev. Henry Reinhart, former procurator at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, has had charge of this office since May 5, 1893.

St. Michael's Orphan Asylum, La Crosse, Wis.

St. Michael's Orphan Asylum, La Crosse, Wis.

ST. MICHAEL'S Orphan Asylum for Boys (incorporated), of La Crosse, Wisconsin, is situated on Winnebago street, between Ninth and Tenth. It was founded in 1875 by the late Archbishop Heiss, then Bishop of the Diocese of La Crosse, and is in charge of the Franciscan Sisters of the Perpetual Adoration, of La Crosse, Wisconsin.

During its existence, this institution has harbored and cared for five hundred and sixty-six boys, ninety-three of whom were in the Asylum at the close of the year 1897. Children are received into this institution between the ages of eighteen months and eleven years, and are bound out to Catholic families as occasion offers. Half-orphans, to which class by far the greater number of children belong, are not given into strange hands as long as the parent shows any interest in them, but are kept until the parents can again take charge of them. As a rule, however, they are not permitted to remain in the Asylum any longer than until they have made their first Holy Communion. If, then, the parent is still unable to provide for them, they are indentured to good Catholic families, with whom they must remain until they are eighteen years of age. They then receive small wages from their fourteenth year, generally from $25 to $50 per year, besides clothing. This amount is deposited annually with the Orphan Asylum by the guardians, and given to the ward after having arrived at the age of eighteen, or later, if the Asylum deems this more prudent. The institution derives its support from an annual collection taken up in the churches of the diocese on Christmas Day, from dues paid by parents and from donations and legacies.

St. Joseph's Hospital, Ashland, Wis.

THE foundation of St. Joseph's Hospital dates from the year 1884. Upon the request of the Franciscan Fathers, who at that time attended to the spiritual wants of the people of Ashland from their house at Bayfield, Wis., the Rev. Mother Prudentia, Superior of the Poor Handmaids of Christ at Fort Wayne, Indiana, went to Ashland in August of that year, in order to see what could be done towards opening a hospital at that place. Finding the prospects good, she returned to Fort Wayne for Sisters with whom to begin this work of charity among the suffering of Ashland and vicinity. The first Sister Superior of the new institution, appointed by Rev. Mother Prudentia, was Sister Flavia, her companions in that laborious mission being Sisters Johanna, Elisabeth and Tobia. Just about the time of their arrival in Ashland a terrible railroad accident occurred on the new branch of the Omaha road, between Ashland and Bayfield, which afforded an unusual opportunity for testing not only their capacity for physical endurance, but the value of an establishment of the kind to be conducted by them, to a community. Entirely unprepared for such an emergency, these noble women worked among the mangled and wounded forms with so much zeal and discretion as to create a lastingly favorable impression among the people with whom they had in much uncertainty come to cast their lot. In the spring of 1885 the frame building occupied by the Sisters was found to be inadequate to the demands made upon it, so an addition was built. Two years later it again became too small and it was then decided to erect a more substantial structure of brick, which was completed in March, 1888, at a cost of nearly $18,000. As rapidly as circumstances required, and the financial condition of the institution would permit, improvements were made to the property, until at the present time St. Joseph's Hospital stands as a monument of commendation to the careful and conservative management of the good Sisters and to the noble generosity of the kind people of Ashland. Of the physicians and surgeons this is particularly true, as without their invaluable assistance it would have been absolutely impossible for the institution to succeed as it has done. How much good St. Joseph's Hospital has accomplished for the sick since its foundation, may be imagined when it is understood that in one year alone eight hundred and sixty-six patients were received and treated there, and of these only thirty-seven died. From the beginning, in 1884, until the end of 1896, a little more than twelve years, six thousand four hundred patients have been treated at this institution. For a long time St. Joseph's Hospital at Ashland was the only place of the kind in charge of Sisters for many miles around, but during the last ten years a number of others have been started, noticeably at Superior, West Superior and other places, drawing great numbers of patients away from the Ashland hospital. The Sisters, however, have their hands as full of work as ever, and are still pursuing, with unabated zeal, their labors among the suffering.

St. Joseph's Hospital, Ashland, Wis.
In 1885 and 1896.

St. Mary's Industrial School, Bayfield, Wis.

IT was in the year 1877 that the Rev. Franciscan Fathers of the Province of the Sacred Heart took charge of the missions among the Chippewa tribe in the northern part of Wisconsin.

Here they soon realized the necessity of establishing a school for the education of Indian children, and, therefore, without delay, applied to a young community

St. Mary's Industrial and Parochial School, Bayfield, Wis.

of Franciscan Sisters which had been established at Joliet, Illinois, in 1863, by the Very Rev. Pamfilo De Maglian, O. S. F., Custos Provincial of the Franciscan Monastery, at Alleghany, New York. The chief aim of the community in question is the education of youth in parochial schools and other educational institutions. At present the Sisters conduct schools in the States of Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Missouri and Wisconsin. They have a membership of about two hundred and fifty.

St. Joseph's Sanitarium, Marshfield, Wis.

THIS institution, as well as others of a similar character at Oshkosh, Rhinelander and Menomonie, is in charge of the Sisters of the Sorrowful Mother. The Marshfield institution, to which this article particularly refers, was one of the first of its kind established in America, according to the system of the late Very Rev. Mgr. Sebastian Kneipp, having been opened to the public in 1890. St. Joseph's Sanitarium was built under the personal direction of the Rev. Paul Geyer, formerly Vicar-General of the diocese of La Crosse. Of the purpose of this institution, we quote the following from a little pamphlet issued by the Sisters of the Order in reference to the same: "Although founded and dedicated for the express purpose specified above (as a hydrotherapeutic institution), there were also admitted, during the short period of its existence, a large number of medical and surgical patients, under the direct supervision of their respective private physicians. Inasmuch as the patients in the latter departments have gradually increased in number, and realizing the fact that within a radius of fifty to one hundred miles there is no other hospital adapted for the proper care and treatment of those in need of close medical or surgical attention, the management of this institution has deemed it advisable to create special facilities, under the immediate supervision of capable surgeons and physicians, in order to enable the latter to properly and conscientiously discharge their duties in the various departments assigned to them.

"St. Joseph's Sanitarium has a most favorable location. It is situated just within the northern limits of the city of Marshfield, upon a tract of fifteen acres of land, the moderate elevation of which insures a pure, dry air and perfect drainage. One-half of the property is reserved and mapped out as a park, which is being constantly improved and beautified for the special benefit of convalescent and ambulant patients. The quietness of its location, the purity of the air, the wholesomeness of its water, the inviting and charming surroundings, are factors not to be undervalued by people determining upon an appropriate location for regaining their health.

"The hospital has large, airy rooms, which, although not elaborately furnished, are supplied with all the necessities demanded for the care and well-being of patients. A special operating room has been equipped with the necessary appliances for the practice of modern surgery, in strict accordance with the requirements of aseptic and antiseptic methods in this department." It is also a feature of this institution that all the Sisters detailed as nurses are graduates of one of the best-known and most reliable hospitals in the State, and are constantly under the close supervision and direction of attendant physicians.

St. Joseph's Sanitarium, Marshfield, Wis.

In Menomonie, the Sisters of the Order purchased ten acres of land, upon which a large and roomy house was situated. This structure was built over and arranged as an hospital, with which there is also connected a home for old people.

At Oshkosh, the Order purchased property on the corner of Boyd and Merritt streets, the same consisting of a number of lots and a house. The success of their undertaking, however, enabled them, in the year 1894, to erect an elegant and commodious structure, fitted throughout with all of the most modern conveniences and sanitary appliances necessary to the completion of a first-class and altogether modern hospital. And as such, in fact, is St. Mary's recognized wherever known. The original building bought and occupied by the Sisters in the first instance has also been comfortably, as well as suitably, arranged for old people.

St. Mary's Hospital, Rhinelander, Wis.

In Rhinelander, the Sisters purchased, in 1893, a house and property, the building two years later giving place to a practically arranged and modern hospital.

When the Sisters went to Tomahawk, in 1893, they were presented with a tract of land by Mr. Bradley, the well-known lumberman, upon which they erected a suitable building for hospital purposes. All of the more recent structures, that is, those at Oshkosh, Rhinelander and Tomahawk, were erected under the personal direction of the Rev. Joseph Joch, present chaplain and superintendent of St. Francis Sanitarium, Denville, Morris County, New Jersey.

The general mother house of the Order of Sisters of the Sorrowful Mother is located at Rome, Italy, while the mother house in America is at St. Joseph's Hospital, Marshfield, Wisconsin. The present Superioress-General is Mother M. Johanna, who resides at Rome, while the assistant Superioress-General, Sister M. Pia, makes her home at St. Joseph's Convent. The first establishment of this Order was located at Wichita, Kansas, in 1889. In the United States, the Sisters now conduct sanitariums (Kneipp Water Cure) at Marshfield, Wisconsin, and Denville, New Jersey; hospitals at Mankato, Minnesota, Marshfield, Menomonie, Oshkosh, Rhinelander, and Tomahawk, Wisconsin, and Wichita, Kansas, and parochial schools at Aleppo and Ost, Kansas. Of members of the Order, there are at present eighty-two Sisters, twenty-two novices, and four postulants.

Sacred Heart Hospital, Tomahawk, Wis.

College of the Sacred Heart, Prairie du Chien, Wis.

THIS institution, which is conducted by the Fathers of the Society of Jesus, was established and opened at Prairie du Chien, in September, 1880, chartered on August 20th of the year following as a "College and University of the Sacred Heart," and at the same time empowered to confer the usual degrees and academic honors. The primary and principal object of this institution is to afford to Catholic youth all necessary facilities for a solid and complete education, calculated to fit them best for a successful career in life which may at the same time be thoroughly based on the principles of religion.

The building occupied by the college, which is situated about a mile south of the town, has a beautiful location, commanding an extensive view of the Mississippi and Wisconsin Valleys. The grounds also surrounding the property are of an artistic and pleasing character, while ample enough in dimensions to afford sufficient opportunity for the pursuit of healthy exercise. The main or principal building, which faces towards the south and the Wisconsin River, is flanked to the east and west by extensive wings. It is a large and commanding three-story structure, having a stone basement which runs beneath the entire building. The interior also affords ample space for the accommodation of students, the study, class rooms, halls, dormitories, recreation rooms and other apartments being of extensive and lofty dimensions, excellently well lighted and thoroughly ventilated. The whole interior arrangement is, in fact, in every way adapted to secure for the student all of the necessaries as well as the comforts of a home. A select library, a handsome set of scientific apparatus, a valuable collection of minerals and other objects of natural science are all to be found here for the benefit and use of the student, while a scientific observatory has also been connected with the institution after the plan of that attached to the Washburn Observatory at Madison, the same being furnished with a transit instrument as well as equatorial and other accessories. The College of the Sacred Heart is a novitiate and scholastic of the mission of the German Province of the Society of Jesus, and there are at the present time twelve priests, fifteen scholastics, twenty-five novices, and fifteen lay brothers established in this institution.

The college department was discontinued a few years ago, and all of the inmates now connected with this institution are members or candidates of the Jesuit Order. At the present time a number of priests of this institution are giving missions throughout the different states of the Union. The present rector and master of novices is the Very Rev. J. B. Lessmann, S. J.

Sacred Heart College, Prairie du Chien, Wis.

St. Mary's Institute, Prairie du Chien, Wis.

THIS justly celebrated seat of learning conducted by the School Sisters of Notre Dame. was founded in 1872, and occupies a part of the charming and historic site of old Fort Crawford. It has six imposing structures, comprising the main building, dormitory, middle building, music hall, "St. Mary's Hall," and "St. Catherine's Chapel," each superbly furnished and adapted for its purpose and work, and all surrounded by spacious lawns beautifully laid out and embellished in the highest style of landscape gardening known to the art. With its tennis-court, croquet-grounds and sylvan walks; with its springing fountain, its embowered nooks and restful retreats; with its invigorating air filled with the aromatic fragrance of lofty pines that cover the hillside, and all overlooking the blue waters of the Mississippi and a landscape of surpassing beauty and grandeur, it is, indeed, an ideal place, well calculated to inspire and incite to noblest endeavor those who avail themselves of its privileges.

In the main building are the office, parlor, school-rooms, music-rooms, library, refectory, misses' study-hall, studio and infirmary. The basement contains the laundry, store-rooms, ice-vault, kitchen, baking-room, pastry-room, and pantries. The dormitories are arranged and furnished with special reference to healthfulness, convenience and comfort. The single black walnut bedsteads are supplied with superior woven wire springs and hair mattresses. In each dormitory is an elegant lavatory with marble basins and toilet-cases and closets for shoes and linen. In the elegant suite of bathing-rooms are perfect appliances for hot and cold baths, and throughout the whole building is a complete system of ventilation. The middle building of two stories and basement is used mainly for class-rooms, and music-hall, with its elaborate arrangements, is devoted to music. "St. Mary's Hall," with high arched ceiling and walls adorned with paintings and other works of art, has a seating capacity for six hundred persons and is provided with a large double stage, scenery, green-rooms, and all the appliances of a model exhibition hall, while "St. Catherine's Chapel," built in the Romanesque style of architecture, with its lofty and graceful arches, its stained-glass windows, its delicate frescoes, its spacious gallery and its magnificent altar, is the crowning gem of this superb group of buildings dedicated to the cause of intellectual, moral and religious culture.

A feature in the general conduct of St. Mary's Institute to which is made the subject of most rigid and untiring watchfulness, is the health of the pupils, and in consequence of this, the hours for rising and retiring, the choice and preparation of food, exercise, and indeed everything that pertains to correct habits being carefully and judiciously directed. The location of the Institute has also much to do with the really splendid results which have thus far been obtained, its marked exemption from everything in the slightest manner suggestive of epidemics and the well-known and highly regarded medicinal and curative properties of its mineral waters being features which alone might inspire the most unquestioning confidence. Pupils who have entered the school in good health have invariably retained it, and many who came broken in health have returned home at the close of their studies well and strong.

Sisters of St. Francis of St. John's Hospital, Springfield, Ill.

First Establishment of the Order.

THE original founder of this new branch of the great Order of the Seraphic St. Francis was the late Bishop John George Mueller, of the Diocese of Muenster, in Germany. He laid the first foundation both of the Order and the General Mother House, in the year 1854, at St. Maurice, a suburb of Muenster, and adopted for the new Community the rule of St. Francis as approved by Pope Leo X. in the year 1519. For three years, the Bishop himself was the spiritual director and confessor of the Sisters at the mother house. Having thus made himself thoroughly acquainted with the spiritual and temporal wants of the Sisters and the Government of the Order, he appointed the Rev. Father Mueller spiritual director of the whole Community, who, after ten years of faithful labor, closed his saintly life by a happy death in the General Mother House at Muenster, in the year 1864. His memory is held in veneration by all the old Sisters who made their novitiate under him. His successor was the Very. Rev. Theodore Ross, who at present is still Director-General of the whole Order, residing at Muenster, in Germany. Under his able and efficient administration, the Order has spread through all the provinces of Germany, Austria and some parts of Holland, numbering at present fourteen hundred members in one hundred and nine hospitals in Europe. In the year 1875, when the persecution of the Catholic Church in Germany by the Prussian Government was at its fever heat, most of her Bishops having been deposed or sent into exile, twelve hundred priests having been expelled from their congregations or sent into exile or the prisons, when the members of the older religious Orders, the Jesuits, Redemptorists, Franciscans and Benedictines, together with all the female teaching Orders had already been cruelly driven out of their homes and the Fatherland, which for upwards of forty years since their reëstablishment in Prussia they had adorned by their learning, virtues and labors, the German Diet, under the despotic rule of the then all-powerful Chancellor Bismarck, debated the question whether the charitable religious Orders of Germany should also be doomed to exile in foreign lands. Although the Prussian Government, for good reasons, after some time adopted a wiser and more just policy concerning these Sisters of Charity, still their right of existence, under existing circumstances, became more and more precarious, and the Superiors of many of these Orders commenced negotiations with Bishops in Holland and the United States for places of refuge, in case the cruel law of expulsion should be passed and enforced, also, against them. The same reason induced the General Supervisors of the Franciscan Sisters in Muenster to apply for admission of their Sisters in the diocese of Alton. After having received a favorable answer from the late Bishop Baltes, twenty Sisters, with Mother Angelica as Superioress, left Muenster on the 15th of October, 1875, and landed in New York on the 4th of November. They arrived in Alton on the 6th of November, and were most kindly received by the Bishop and clergy. The names of those pioneer Sisters of the Order were: Mother Angelica, Superioress, Sisters Cyrilla, Henrietta, Euphemia, Jovita, Basilia, Aurelia, Fridolina, Gerburgis, Rosa, Augustine, Crispina, Cassiana, Fortunata, Zosima, Macaria, Francisca, Silvana, Ulrica, and Rolendis.

Of these first Sisters of the Community in the United States, there are fourteen still alive and in this country, three died and three returned to Germany. On the 8th of November, four of the Sisters were sent to Springfield, four to East St. Louis, three to Belleville, three to Effingham, three to Litchfield, and two, with Mother Angelica, remained in Alton. It was the will of the Bishop that the mother house of the American Province should be started in Springfield, whither, on the 9th of December, 1875, Mother Angelica, with one of the Sisters of East St. Louis, departed. Of the two Sisters remaining in East St. Louis, one was sent to Belleville, the other was called to Springfield. After these preliminary arrangements for the establishment of the Order in the diocese of Alton had been completed, the Rev. Father Leve, pastor of SS. Peter and Paul's Church in Springfield, was appointed by the Bishop Spiritual Director of the whole Community in the United States. In Springfield, the Sisters, for the first two years, lived in an old frame house on South Seventh street, which belonged to the diocese of Alton. It had been a private residence, and was but little adapted for hospital purposes. Still, the Sisters managed as well as circumstances allowed to make their patients comfortable. No doubt many improvements of the modern hospital were wanted in that primitive St. John's Hospital of Springfield, still, no complaints were ever heard from the patients nursed therein. They considered themselves amply recompensed by the care and kind nursing they received from the hands of the Sisters. The first beginning of the Sisters in Springfield, as elsewhere, was surrounded by many trials and hardships. They were in a foreign land among strangers, unacquainted with the manners and customs, and even the language of the country, and, what was still worse, without means.

They found in no place hospitals ready to take patients, and for themselves, in many places, they had to be satisfied with any poor shanty which charity or a few dollars' rent would offer them for a home. More than once they were in want of even the daily necessaries of life. In other places they could get nothing at all for their support but what people would give them for nursing patients in their houses, which, in small towns, was of a rare occurrence, while in others, as, for instance, in Belleville, Eau Claire, Streator, Decatur and Springfield the clergy, the people and the physicians assisted them in every way they could. As a rule, the physicians were the most faithful and disinterested friends of the Community. Of the first period of its history in Springfield the deceased Dr. Ryan, Dr. Wohlgemuth, and later, the deceased Dr. Matthews, deserve special mention and the thanks of the Sisters. The names of these men and their successors in St. John's Hospital, and in most of the branch houses, will always have the first places among the benefactors of the Community, for whom the Sisters twice every day offer up their prayers to the throne of Mercy. All honor to the professional men who so nobly bear the heat and burden of the day in hospitals for the cause of humanity!

But, notwithstanding the many trials the Sisters had in the beginning, they were happy among poverty and other trials, going about like their Divine Master and doing good everywhere. The blessing of God was with them. The number of Sisters increased within twenty-one years to two hundred and forty-six, and, instead of a few temporary frame hospitals, they have at present, besides the mother house, the management of seventeen hospitals and one orphan asylum. Of the membership thirty-seven have since died, so that at present there are but two hundred and thirteen. As previously stated, the mother-house of the American Province was established in Springfield in 1875, in the temporary frame hospital on South Seventh street, which soon proved to be altogether inadequate. Hence the Sisters, in the year 1878, bought a number of building lots in Mitchell's Addition to the City of Springfield, on Mason and Eighth streets, for the site of a new hospital and mother-house. The corner-stone of the building was laid in the following April, the clergy and Catholic Societies of Springfield and pastors of adjacent parishes assisting in the ceremonies. The Mayor of Springfield and Governor Palmer were also present. The building was completed the next year. On the 22d of June, 1879, it was blessed by Bishop Baltes. It was 100 feet in front, 50 feet deep and 40 feet high, and forms the central part of the present St. John's Hospital. The east wing, 100x40x45, with the beautiful St. John's Chapel, 93x45, was added in 1886, and three years later the west wing, 80x45x45. Thus the whole frontage of the present hospital is 280 feet.

Next to the Capitol, it is the largest and most imposing building of the city, and the largest hospital this side of Chicago. Its inner arrangements correspond with all the requirements of a modern hospital. From the first to the third floor, it has high and large corridors and rooms, six wards for male patients, two for female patients, one large surgical ward for male patients, one medical ward for female patients, and twenty-one private rooms, which are all painted in oils and ornamented with stencil work. It gives to all the rooms a most cheerful and pleasing aspect, and contributes in no small degree to the well-being of the patients. The operating room on the second floor is furnished with a large skylight, and has a splendid equipment of surgical instruments. Convenient to the building is a large drug store. The west wing contains on the first floor five ward rooms for male patients, and in front five beautiful private rooms. On the second floor is the private chapel and an infirmary for the Sisters, who, when sick, are brought from the branch houses to the mother house. Here, too, are the private quarters of the Mother Superior and a hall in which weekly meetings and semi-annual retreats are held. The hospital has a capacity for one hundred and six patients, the Sisters' infirmary not included. The wonderful growth and popularity of the institution since its establishment is creditable indeed to those who have had its management in charge, the benevolent Sisters of St. Francis. It also reflects admirably upon the good judgment of the public. The hospital is open at all times for the care and nursing of all sick and injured, excepting those only suffering with contagious, syphilitic, alcoholic and mental diseases and children under two years. It contains in the Ladies' Department eight private rooms and seven ward rooms, each accommodating two or more patients. In the Men's Department there are eleven private and eight ward rooms. The hospital is visited daily by either Drs. C. M. Bowcock or B. B. Griffith, physicians, and Drs. Walter Ryan or G. Kreider, surgeons, and Dr. B. M. Griffith, consulting physician. Dr. Hagler is specialist of the ear, eye and throat, and Dr. Taylor has charge of the laboratory for bacteriology in the hospital.

Patients of all creeds and nationalities are received on application to the Mother Superior. The hospital is, therefore, not sectarian, but catholic in the broadest sense of the word, which means universal. The Sisters are forbidden by the rule of the Order to interfere with the religious convictions of the patients.

Rules of the Order.

The general rule of the Community is the rule made by St. Francis and approved by Leo X. in 1519. The particular rule for the Community as hospital Sisters was sketched out by its founder, the late Bishop John George Mueller, and perfected by his successor, the late Bishop Bernard Brinkman, of Muenster, and is still before the congregation of Bishops and regulars in Rome for examination. As long as it has not received the approbation of the Holy See, it is forbidden by the General Superiors and the Canons of the church to have it printed for publication. However, in every branch and hospital connected with the General Mother House, there is a copy of the Statutes of the Order, which are an explanation of the Rule, part of which are read to the Sisters in the refectory regularly on certain days of the week, and explained every Sunday between ten and eleven o'clock by the Director. The Statutes, like the Rule, were made by the saintly founder of the Community.

Inner Organization of the Community.

The Community has four different classes of members:

A. Candidates.—Those who have an inclination to become Sisters of Charity, and for this purpose have made application to the Superiors of the Community, and have been admitted to the mother house for trial, are called candidates. The following conditions must be complied with before a Catholic young lady will be admitted as a candidate. 1. They must have the pure intention of becoming a Sister of St. Francis for the purpose (a) To promote the honor of God. (b) To work for the salvation of souls by works of mercy. (c) To strive after Christian perfection in obedience to the laws of the Catholic Church, the Rule of the Order, and the Superiors of the Community. 2. They must be of legitimate birth and good Catholic parents, and between seventeen and twenty-five years old. 3. They must have received a good moral and religious education, knowing how to read, write and speak correctly. 4. They must be healthy in body and mind, endowed with good common sense, and a cheerful disposition. 5. Their parents and grandparents must have been free from hereditary diseases, as, for instance, insanity, etc. 6. They must have a certain dowery. In case the candidate has less than required, but solid virtues and talents, the Superiors may dispense from this condition altogether. When the candidate is able to fulfill the above conditions, she makes application in writing to the Venerable Mother of St. John's Hospital, Springfield, Illinois, sending with it a short biography, a certificate of baptism, the certificate of health by a physician, and the testimony of her own pastor as to her character. Upon this application, she is requested by the Superiors to answer conscientiously the following questions: 1. Baptismal and family name? 2. Age? 3. Day, month and year of birth? 4. Where born? 5. If not born in this country, how long residing here? 6. What is her mother tongue? 7. Does she know English and German? 8. Did she frequent the public or parish school? How long? 9. Is she well instructed in religion? 10. Has she inclination for leading a pious life? 11. Is she ready to bring sacrifices for our Lord? 12. What is the candid motive for becoming a Sister of Charity? 13. How long did she reflect on the step to be taken? 14. Did she receive the approbation of her confessor? 15. Do her parents live yet? Are they in need of her assistance? 16. Was her health always good? 17. Is she ready at any time to enter?

If the answers to the above questions are deemed satisfactory to the Superiors of the Community, the candidate will be notified what day she has to present herself at the mother house in Springfield, and with her entrance there on the appointed day begins her life as a religious, although she takes no vow, and is at liberty at any time to leave the mother house and return to her family. The first year of the candidate in the Convent is devoted 1. To training her for the vocation of a nurse. She will receive a theoretical instruction in the science of nursing which is given every day by the Mistress of Novices. The text-books for this instruction are (a) Hand Book of Nursing for the State Hospital and Training School in New Haven, Connecticut. (b) Marx Guide for Nurses, used in the best hospitals in Germany, which contains the anatomy of the human body, etc. 2. Practical instructions in nursing by the Sister Prefect of the male and female department.

The Rule of Life.

This is the rule of life for the candidate the first year after her admission to the Order. About a month before the year is up, she will have to pass an examination before the Mistress of Novices, the Mother Superior, and the Spiritual Director, in English, in nursing, bandages, injections, cupping, electric battery, anatomy of the human body, the names and symptoms of the different diseases, etc. If she passes her examination satisfactorily, she is allowed, not forced or obliged, to apply for the habit of St. Francis. From the above, we see that the first year of the candidate in the Convent is entirely devoted to the study of practical work of her future life, so as to make her perfectly acquainted with all its duties and sacrifices. She has ample time and occasion to find out whether she has the talents, the will and strength required for that state of life to which she intends to consecrate her life or not. If she has given full satisfaction to the Superiors of the Community, she will receive permission to take the habit of the Order. This is generally done with great solemnity, after having spent five days previously in a spiritual retreat. But, even then, she is not allowed, much less bound, to make a vow or any permanent obligation.

B. Novices.—After she has received the habit, she is called a novice, and is sent to one of the branch houses of the Community to help the Sisters in nursing and all kinds of work that is connected with it. This is done partly that she may put into practice what she has learned in the mother house in the first year of probation, partly to give her time for reflection, and full liberty to decide about her vocation. No persuasion, no fear, no threats, no sinister motives, should determine her decision. Also, during this second year, she is perfectly free to leave the Convent and return to the world, in case, after due reflection, she thinks that she has not the vocation. Thus full two years of reflection are given to the candidate before she is allowed to take a permanent obligation. There is no haste, no fear, no compulsion, but perfect liberty. After having spent this second year in the duties of the Order, it is supposed that she is thoroughly acquainted with her duties as a nurse and as a religious, and she has to decide whether she can, with a good conscience, take the three vows of chastity, poverty and obedience for two years. If her conscience tells her that she will be happy in her vocation as nurse and Sister, she asks permission of the Superior to be admitted to make the vows, and in case that permission is given, the day is fixed when she will have to come to the mother house to make a spiritual retreat, and, at the end of it, make the three vows. After having made these vows, she is considered, at least for two years, a member of the Order, and during that time she is not allowed to leave the Order without having received previous dispensation from the Superior of the Order and the Bishop of the diocese.

C. The Professed Sisters.—Are those who, after having spent one year in the Order as a candidate and another as a novice, have taken the religious vows for two years. At the end of these two years, in case they believe before God and their conscience that it is not their vocation, they are again free to leave the Order. If they are satisfied and happy in the life they have chosen, they have to ask permission of the Superior every two years to renew their vows for two years more. After having done this five times, that is, after the elapse of twelve years in the Order altogether, they generally ask permission to make permanent vows for life. Then they are called:

D. Professed Sisters Under Perpetual Vows.—Their work is now the same as that of the other Sisters, with the difference that, as a rule, they are appointed for the different offices of the Community, and the Order has the obligation of supporting them in health and sickness until death. It is out of this class of Sisters that the Mother Superior and her assistant is to be appointed.

The Mother Superior.

The Mother Superior for the whole Order in the United States is appointed every five years by the General-Superior of the whole Order residing in Germany. She has the duty to devote her whole love to all Sisters without distinction, and take care of their bodily and spiritual welfare. She has the right to command and forbid, to admonish and to warn, and to punish for faults committed and not corrected. Hers is the duty to admonish the Sisters in charity and meekness and urge them on to the faithful observance of the Commandments of God, of the Church, the regulations laid down in the Rule of the Order, and promote the Sisters' temporal and spiritual welfare by her example, prayers, admonitions and corrections; in other words, to promote their sanctification She has to assign to every Sister in the mother house her daily work, and see to it that it is done promptly and faithfully The first Mother Superior of the American Province was Mother Angelica, who arrived in this country with the first band of Sisters in the year 1875. She ruled the Community for five years with prudence and firmness. In September, 1880, she was called back to the General Mother House in Germany, to the universal regret of all the Sisters. Her successor in office was Mother Ulrica, who for seven years ruled the Order with success. She built the east wing of the hospital with the new chapel. In November, 1887, she was called back to the General Mother House in Germany. In November, 1887, Mother Macaria was appointed her successor by the General Superiors. During her administration, the west wing of the hospital was built, which, on the first floor, contains five beautiful private rooms, five smaller wards for male patients, and on the second floor the room of the Mother Superior, three infirmaries for sick Sisters, a beautiful private oratory and a large instruction hall for spiritual retreats and conferences. The present Mother Superior, Mother Paula, was appointed April 6, 1895.

The Director of the Community.

He is appointed by the Bishop of the diocese of Alton. He has the right and duty to govern the whole Community in the United States in all internal and external affairs, in accordance with the Rule and Statutes of the Order, and the regulations of the General Superiors in Germany. The Mother Superior and all the Sisters owe to him, as the representative of God, obedience and reverence. He has the duty to instruct the Sisters, novices and candidates in our holy religion, in the duties of their vocation, and the exercise of the conventual life, and to exhort them to the conscientious observance of the Rule. Alternately, with the Mother Superior, he has to visit the branch houses, examine the books of accounts, the condition of the houses, decide about necessary repairs, etc. He has to watch that in all houses the property of the Community be administered according to the principles of prudence, justice and religious poverty. Without his permission, it is forbidden to erect new buildings, to undertake great repairs, or purchase furniture to a great extent. He examines plans, specifications, bids for new buildings, bills and receipts, and makes the contracts. He admits or dismisses patients. Without his permission, new branch houses cannot be established, nor old ones disestablished, and it is his duty to examine all accounts of the mother house and all branch houses, and report to the General Superiors in Germany. The first spiritual director of the Community in the United States was the Rev. Father Leve, pastor of SS. Peter and Paul's Church in Springfield. From 1875 to 1882, he labored hard for the temporal and spiritual welfare of the Community. Poor health forced him to give up his congregation and return to Germany. After a brief vacancy, the Rev. John Mohr, of New Berlin, Illinois, was appointed to the office, and for one year filled the duties. In the year 1883, the Very Rev. Father Mauritius, O. S. F., rector of the Diocesan College at Teutopolis, Effingham County, Illinois, was his successor. He labored incessantly for the welfare of the Community, and his memory is held in veneration by all the Sisters. Having been elected Provincial of the Franciscan Order of the Sacred Heart Province of St. Louis, Missouri, in the fall of 1886, he resigned as director of the Community, and the present incumbent, the Rev. L. Hinssen, was appointed his successor. He arrived in Springfield on the 9th of November, 1886.

The American Province of the Order, and the General Mother House in Germany.

The American Province of the Order stands under the spiritual director, who is appointed by the Bishop of Alton, and the Mother Superior, who is appointed by the General Superiors in Germany. Both the director and Mother Superior of the Order, and all the Sisters, owe them the same obedience, love and reverence, as they do their General Superiors. Both have the duty to watch that the Rule and Statutes of the Order are strictly observed. The director is appointed by the Bishop until recalled. The Mother Superior is appointed for five years. At the end of this term, she is either reappointed for a second term, or she has to give up to the one appointed in her place. It is her duty to appoint one of the Sisters, who is under perpetual vows for at least three years, as her assistant, who, in case of her absence, sickness or death, has to fill her place. Annually, an account has to be sent to the General Mother House: 1. Of the temporal condition of the Provincial Mother House and all the branch houses. 2. Of the labors of the Sisters, the number of patients, the deaths in the mother house and all branch houses of the Community. 3. Of the number of professed Sisters in the mother house and branch houses, and the name of the local Superioress. 4. For the erection of new buildings or repairs which cost more than $3,000.00, the permission of the General Superior is necessary. 5. New branch houses cannot be started without the written consent of the General Superiors.

Soon after the arrival of the Sisters in Alton, they were informed by the late Bishop Baltes that they were now independent of the General Mother House in Germany. On what authority the Bishop could give this information, we are not able to say. The only person competent to give a decision or declaration on this matter is Director-General Ross. On the 24th day of May, 1881, he wrote to the then Vicar-General of Alton, the present Bishop Janssen, as follows:

"As to the relation between the Sisters and the General Mother House, I hereby repeat that all branch houses, no matter where they are, form but one Community, who are all under the Superiors in Muenster, the General Mother House in America not excepted, with but this exception, that on account of the long distance, the direction of the Sisters is to be left to the Provincial Superiors. Hence the (Provincial) Superioress in America has to send, at least a few times annually, to the Mother House in Mauritz a report of the condition of the Community, and to ask permission and advice of the General Superiors in all important affairs. All this is a matter of course, and I cannot understand how this could be doubted for a single moment. We cannot send Sisters to America to establish there a new Order, but only to expand there the Order of St. Mauritz."

Are the Sisters of St. Francis of St. John's Hospital Religious?

Up to the time that the Sisters came to America, all were of the opinion that they were Franciscan members of the Third Order of St. Francis. In this opinion, they had joined the Community at Mauritz, that was what the name expressed and what their Rule said. All at once, some one in the diocese of Alton, whose name is known, informed some of the Sisters that they were not religious, but only piae feminae, i. e., pious women. The matter was reported to Mother Ulrica, who asked Bishop Baltes for an explanation. He answered February 5, 1881, to Mother Ulrica, "that they were true religious and true Sisters. The question is: Are they Franciscan Sisters? I answer that I do not know, I have never inquired." This matter was also brought before Director Ross, and he answered the Mother Superior as follows: "I have sent to the Bishop of Alton a letter in which the proof is given that the Sisters are real members of the Third Order of St. Francis, and are obliged to observe the Rule of the Third Order, approved by Leo X. in his Bull of January 20, 1521, for those who, with the three vows, live in a Community."

Can the Rule of the Sisters be Changed?

In the year 1862 the late Bishop Baltes, seeing that the health of so many Sisters gave way in the prime of life in consequence of their labor, especially the fasting and night watches, gave a general dispensation from the fasting prescribed by the Rule of the Order. It certainly was well meant; but many Sisters were uneasy about it, and, as a matter of course, asked advice from the Director General in Germany. He answered: "The Rule (of the Order) approved by the Pope can not be abolished in part or modified by any Bishop in the world, or the Superiors, nor even by the Father General of the Franciscans, but all he can do is to declare that the Sisters, on account of their vocation or sickness, etc., wholly or partly, in one or another part, are unable to observe the Rule, but only dispense in the way I have mentioned above, that is, give dispensation to an individual Sister for a sufficient reason."

Present Field of Labor of the Sisters of St. John's Hospital.

Mother House and Branch Houses.—First. St. John's Hospital, Springfield, Illinois, established in the year 1875, Mother House of the Community in the United States, a novitiate and training school for the Sisters. It is incorporated under the laws of the State of Illinois, the legal title being, "St. John's Hospital of the Sisters of St. Francis, Springfield, Illinois." The first Mother Superior was Mother Angelica. She had five Sisters to help her. The present Superior is Mother Paula, April 6, 1895. She has under her thirty-eight Sisters and twenty-five candidates. The medical and surgical department of the hospital is in the hands of able and scientific men, well known in Springfield.

The number of patients in the hospital from January 1 to December 31, 1896, was: Male patients, 419; female patients, 402; total, 821. Deaths: Male patients, 33; female patients, 24; total, 57. Dismissed, 716.

Operations: 1. By doctors of the hospital, 145; 2. By other doctors, 25; total, 170.

Second. St. Elizabeth Hospital, Belleville, Illinois, was started November 13, 1875, with Sister Jovita as Superioress and four Sisters. The first temporary hospital was in the old St. Peter's school house. It was an old brick building, one story high, containing two class rooms. When the Bishop sent word that hospital Sisters had arrived, that old school house was fixed up in a great hurry as hospital and convent. It was, indeed, but of a very miniature size and primitive style. There was just room enough for the Sisters, and, in a case of emergency, six patients. In this little house, the Sisters had to live for five years. Their chief employment during this time was nursing in private houses. In 1880 a petition was presented to the Bishop requesting permission to erect a new hospital, which was granted, and the work commenced at once. It was completed in the fall of 1880. In the year 1881, the late Bishop Baltes, by a decree dated August 17, 1881, transferred the hospital property to the Sisters of St. Francis, and for ten years it remained in their possession, until June, 1891, when the new Bishop of Belleville, the Right Rev. Janssen, proprio motu, declared the decree of Bishop Baltes void. The case was laid before the Propaganda in July of the same year, which, September 26, referred it to Archbishop Feehan, with power to examine and decide. His Grace gave the decision June 10, 1892, as follows: "I, Bishop Janssen, have to confirm the original decree of August 17, 1881. The Community has to pay to St. Peter's congregation $2,500.00." The above amount having been paid by the Sisters, Bishop Jannsen signed the decree of confirmation on the 28th of June, 1892, and sent it to the mother house. It was recorded in the Recorder's office of St. Clair County, Illinois, on the 7th of July, 1892. In the following year, two large new wings, each 255x50, were built to the hospital, which gives it ample accommodations for a large number of patients and improves its view very much. In one of these wings there is the hospital chapel, 33x28, with a beautiful altar, a Munich statue of St. Elizabeth, and new pews. At present there are nine Sisters in the hospital, Sister Julitta being Superior. It may be well, here, to give the law of the former diocese of Alton concerning the hospital Sisters, which presented to the diocesan Sisters as circulars Nos. 17 and 19 is as follows:

No. 17. When congregations, cities or other places, desire to have the above named Sisters for either hospitals or orphan asylums, such congregations, cities or other places shall, after having obtained the consent of the ordinary of the diocese to have the Sisters, erect and furnish, in a becoming manner, suitable buildings for such institutions at their own expense.

No. 19. When the institution is kept up and its current and other expenses are paid by the congregation, in addition to what the Sisters receive from private individuals for tending to the sick outside of the hospital, the mother house shall receive at the rate of not less than $25.00 per annum for each Sister furnished. At orphan asylums it shall receive at the rate of $50.00 per annum for each Sister.

Third. St. Francis' Hospital, at Litchfield, Illinois, was opened on the 13th of November, 1875, with three Sisters, Sister Fridolina being Superior. There, as in all other places where the Sisters began, no provision whatsoever was made for a hospital. All they could do was to rent a small frame house to live in, which, after some time, was bought by them and enlarged so as to have room for a few patients. For years the Sisters' dormitory was directly under the shingle roof, a regular furnace during the hot summer months. From this severe trial, they were delivered in 1891, when the mother house built the new hospital of brick, 60x45x30, now in charge of six Sisters, Sister Clara being Superioress. The deed of the old St. Francis Hospital had been made to the diocese of Alton, because the Community was not then incorporated. It was done to secure the property for the Sisters. Bishop Ryan, soon after his consecration, transferred the same to the Community, for which kindness the Sisters will always remain grateful to his lordship.

Fourth. St. Anthony's Hospital, of Effingham, Illinois, was opened November 15, 1875, with three Sisters, Sister Euphemia being Superior. Soon after their arrival there lots for a new hospital were donated by Michael Moenning, and the contract for the building let. From the beginning, the Sisters in Effingham were liberally assisted by the clergy and people, both Catholic and Protestant. All showed good will to the hospital. The first building having become too crowded with patients, an addition was made in the year 1891, which gives the hospital a frontage of 120 feet and all necessary accommodations for Sisters and patients. At present there are nine Sisters in the hospital, Sister Arnolpha being Superior. The title was originally made to the diocese of Alton in order to secure the property for the Sisters. In the year 1891, a memorial was sent the Right Rev. Bishop Ryan of Alton, showing why, in justice to the Sisters, the deed should be made to the Community. To this the Bishop replied that he would decide the same as soon as Father Jungmann, then absent, should return from Europe. On the 20th of January, 1893, the Bishop, through Father Spalding, the Chancellor, sent word to the spiritual director that the title of the Effingham Hospital in the diocese was only pro forma, and that the same should be changed, and that, meanwhile, the Sisters were to be in perfect control. In the beginning of June, 1895, Bishop Ryan, of Alton, gave the deed to St. John's Hospital, for which act of kindness the Sisters will forever be grateful to his lordship.

Fifth. St. Joseph's Hospital, Highland, Illinois, was opened January 26, 1878, with three Sisters, under Sister Severa as Superior. The new hospital was built on lots donated to the congregation for that purpose. It is certain that the Sisters did much towards the erection of the hospital and payment of the debts thus incurred, although the congregation owns the property and could dismiss them at any time did they desire to do so. As far as can be found out in the accounts of the mother house, the laws concerning the income from private nursing to be sent to the mother house was never carried out in Highland. The Sisters either believed that the hospital would belong to them, or were afraid of strife with the authorities there. At present there are nine Sisters there, with Sister Clementina as Superior.

Sixth. St. Mary's Hospital, Decatur, Illinois, was started in November, 1878, with three Sisters, Sister Rosa being Superioress. She was a Sister of an active disposition and of great energy and administrative talents. She built the original frame hospital, and secured a fine block of ground for it. She had the hospital incorporated, thus protecting the Sisters against trouble such as experienced in other places, where in good faith they had worked persistently for the establishment of a hospital upon property owned by the congregation, only to be ignored when it came to the question of ownership. In the year 1885, Sister Rosa was transferred to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, where she worked even more successfully than in Decatur, and died in peace in 1893, R. I. P. At present there are nine Sisters in Decatur, with Sister Cassiana as Superior. In the year 1891, the new St. Mary's Hospital, 80x45x35, was begun and completed, almost the entire debt thus incurred being liquidated. The old frame building was sold and removed in 1894.

Seventh. St. Agnes's Orphan Asylum, Belleville, Illinois. The foundress of this benevolent institution was the late Miss Katie Germain. She was, from the time of her first Holy Communion, very religiously disposed, of a clear intellect, and firm will. But her health was not good. Otherwise, she would in all probability have entered a convent. When about twenty-two years of age, the estate of her deceased father was divided among the mother, two brothers and one sister. Her share was eighty acres of land of great value near the city of Belleville. Scarcely had she received the deed of the property, when she made up her mind to devote all she had to the erection of an orphan asylum in the city of Belleville for the benefit of St. Peter's congregation. But her mother, brothers and sister were opposed to this, and commenced a persecution against her, and tried by all means, good and bad, to defeat her intention. Fortunately, the trouble began after the foundation of the orphan asylum had been laid. For two years the case was continued before the courts of St. Clair County, and the Supreme Court of Illinois, but finally was decided in favor of the orphan asylum. After many difficulties, the orphan asylum was at length completed. Miss Katie Germain, by her munificence, laid the foundation, but it was only by an equally noble gift of the St. Peter's Orphan Asylum, and the liberality of the members of the congregation and the public of Belleville at large, that it was made possible to bring it to completion. In the year 1881, five Sisters, with Sister Fridolina as Superior, took possession of the building and received the first orphan children. It was at the personal solicitation of Miss Germain that the Franciscan Sisters were given in charge of the asylum. Ever since it was opened, it has been well supported by means of donations, etc. From thirty-five to forty-two orphans or homeless children receive from the hands of the Sisters a mother's care and training, whilst they visit the St. Peter's parochial school. The orphan asylum is regarded as a great blessing by the congregation, all of whom take a marked and earnest interest in its welfare. Next to the blessing of God, Sister Fridolina and her devoted Sisters have contributed the greatest share to its success. At present there are seven Sisters in the asylum, with Sister Fridolina as Superior.

St. Joseph's Hospital, Chippewa Falls, Wis.

Eighth. St. Clara's Hospital, Lincoln, Illinois. The first four Sisters, with Sister Aurelia as Superior, went to Lincoln on the 9th of July, 1884. Soon after their arrival, they bought an old frame house and fixed it up as a temporary hospital. In the spring of 1886, the contract for a new hospital was given to William White, of Springfield, the size being 80x45x35. In November of the same year the building was completed, and, after having been blessed by Bishop Spalding, the Sisters moved in. Sister Aurelia remained Superior until September, 1894, when consumption forced her to ask permission to return to the mother house, where she died the same year. She was a faithful, reliable and zealous Sister to the end of her life. In her place, Sister Candida was appointed Superior, and has eight Sisters to help her.

Ninth. St. Patrick's Wabash Railroad Hospital, of Moberly, Missouri, was originally started in Kansas City, Missouri, May 5, 1885, with Sister Victorina as Superior, and four Sisters. In December, 1893, the Wabash Railroad Company, having built a new hospital at Moberly, Missouri, the Sisters moved there.

Tenth. St. Joseph's Hospital, Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin. On the 26th of June, 1885, five Sisters, with Sister Rosa as Superior, left the mother house for Chippewa Falls to start a new hospital. They first rented a large frame residence, which they afterwards bought for $6,000, but in less than three years it was found inadequate, applications for admission from the northern part of Wisconsin being far in excess of the accommodations. In the year 1889, a large hospital, 100x45x45, was built at a cost of $25,000, but in less than four years this house, also, was found too small to accommodate all patients who applied for admission. So, in the spring of 1893, an addition was built, 60x45x45, the chapel of the hospital was enlarged, and two large wards in one wing added to the rear of the hospital. Good Sister

Sacred Heart Hospital, Eau Claire, Wis.

Rosa, the head and soul of the institution for so many years, finally broke down under the work, though she had the satisfaction of seeing this new addition completed. After a long and painful sickness, which she bore with Christian fortitude, she died at St. Joseph's Hospital on the 18th of August, 1893, amidst her faithful Sisters, who, with her, had borne the heat of the day. She was a faithful and zealous Sister to the end, and we may well hope that she received a great reward in Heaven. About three months before her death, when she was no longer able to attend to the many and laborious duties of her position, the Superioress of the St. Vincent's Hospital, Green Bay, Wis.

Community appointed one of her former Sisters, Sister Marciana, the present Superior, her successor. She has twenty-two Sisters under her, and discharges her duties faithfully. Her hospital is incorporated.

Eleventh. St. Anna's Wabash Hospital, at Peru, Indiana, was opened October 16, 1885, with five Sisters, Sister Mary Augustina being Superior. The present Superior is Sister Ririna.

Twelfth. The St. Louis Hospital, Kansas City, Missouri, is the property of the "German Hospital Society" of that place. It was opened July 4, 1887, with five Sisters, Sister Clara as Superior. The last Superior was Sister Archangela, who had eight Sisters under her. She managed the hospital well, but owing to the long distance from the hospital to the church, the poor accommodations for the dormitory of the Sisters under the roof, and the poor health of several Sisters, the hospital was abandoned in 1895.

Thirteenth. St. Mary's Hospital, Streator, Illinois, was opened July 26, 1887, with five Sisters, Sister Crispina Superioress. They first bought a small frame house opposite the present hospital block on Bloomington street, which had been bought for the new hospital from Mr. Plumb (428 feet front), for the sum of $5,000, of which Mr. Plumb donated $1,000 to the hospital. In the summer of 1887, the present hospital, 80x45x40, was built, and the ground and garden laid out. The present Superior is Sister Thootima, who has seven Sisters to help her.

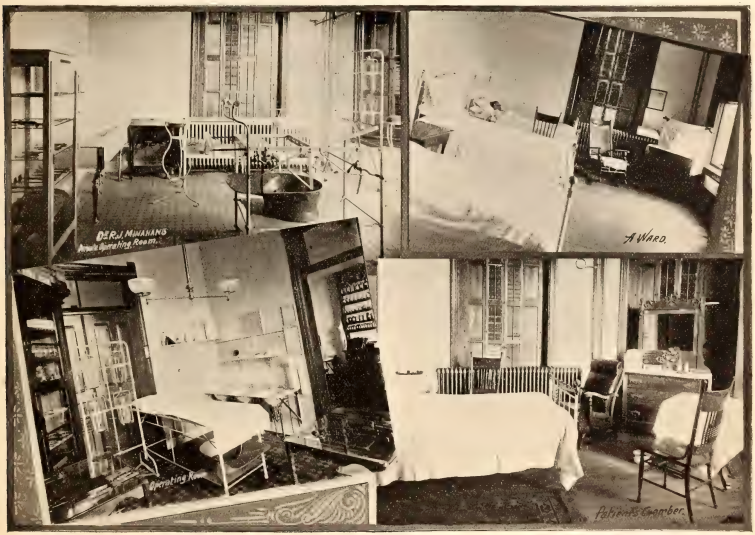
Fourteenth. St. Lucas Wabash Railroad Hospital, Springfield, was opened in the year 1885, with five Sisters, Sister Arnolpha being Superior. At present there are seven Sisters at the hospital, with Sister Liberia as Superior.

Fifteenth. St. Vincent's Hospital, Green Bay, Wisconsin, was opened December 12, 1888, with five Sisters, Sister Arnolpha being Superior, in the large private residence of the late Dr. Van Nostrand. It had twenty-three rooms, still was too small to comply with the demands made upon it. For this reason, the Superiors of the Community resolved to sell the old hospital property to Dr. Minahan for $6,000, and erect a new one on Webster street. This building was completed in September, 1895, at a cost of $27,000. The Superior Sister Felice has fourteen assistants. The hospital has been incorporated under the laws of the State of Wisconsin, which makes it obligatory on the corporation, regularly, at the time stated in the By-Laws, to hold a regular election of officers, to which the special attention of the Community is called at their visitation.

Sixteenth. The Sacred Heart Hospital, Eau Claire, Wisconsin. The first Sisters sent there to collect for a new hospital were Sisters Facunda and Ositha. They arrived there October 7, 1889. The new building was completed in 1890, and Sister Zosima, with five Sisters, opened it the same year. It is a large brick building, 35x54x45. There are at present thirteen Sisters, with Sister Zosima as Superior. The hospital there is also incorporated under the laws of the State of Wisconsin.



Interior of St. Vincent's Hospital, Green Bay, Wis.

Seventeenth. The St. Nicholas Hospital, Sheboygan, Wisconsin, was opened May 9, 1890, with Sister Alfonza as Superior, and five Sisters. It was a private brick dwelling, the purchase price of which was $4,000, of which amount the Catholic congregation of the Sacred Heart paid one-half. In the summer of 1892, the building was enlarged, and has now an area of 96x40x35. The present Superior Sister Attala has seven assistants. The hospital is incorporated.

Eighteenth. St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, Illinois, was opened May 12, 1890, with Sister Wilhelma as Superior, and six Sisters, in a new building erected by St. Henry's congregation. In the spring of 1895, a new wing, 100x50x54, was added to it. The present Superior Sister Wilhelma, has twelve assistants.

Work done by the Sisters in the year 1895:

	Patients.	Total.
St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Belleville,	male 78	143
" " " "	female 65
St. Agnes' Hospital, Belleville, -	boys 19	39
" " " " - -	girls 20
St. Joseph's Hospital, Chippewa Falls,	male 666	743
" " " " "	female 77
St. Mary's Hospital, Decatur, - -	male 100	199
" " " " - -	female 99
St. Anthony's Hospital, Effingham,	male 69	125
" " " "	female 56
St. Vincent's Hospital, Green Bay,	male 273	490
" " " " "	female 266
St. Joseph's Hospital, Highland, -	male 76	118
" " " "	female 42
St. Patrick's Hospital Moberly, -	male 295	295
St. Louis Hospital, Kansas City -	male 123	239
" " " " "	female 116
St. Clara's Hospital, Lincoln, -	male 72	106
" " " "	female 32
St. Francis Hospital, Litchfield, -	male 31	84
" " " "	female 53
St. Anne's' Hospital, Peru, Indiana,	male 358	368
" " " " "	female 10
St. John's Hospital, Springfield, -	male 419	821
" " " "	female 402
St. Mary's Hospital, Streator, -	male 153	194
" " " "	female 41
St. Lucas' Hospital, Springfield, -	male 307	307
St. Mary's' Hospital, E. St. Louis,	male 209	302
" " " "	female 93
Sacred Heart Hospital, Eau Claire,	male 412	494
" " " "	female 82
St. Nicholas Hospital, Sheboygan,	male 92	161
" " " "	female 69
Total number of paticnts in 1895		5,237

St. Mary's Hospital, West Superior, Wis.

ST. MARY'S Hospital which is located in the northern portion of Wisconsin, at West Superior, has from the time of its establishment been in charge of Sisters of the Pood Handmaids of Christ. Sixteen Sisters of this Order are at the present time performing the necessary duties at St.

St. Mary's Hospital, West Superior, Wis.

Mary's, they all having come to West Superior from the mother house at Fort Wayne, Indiana, in the spring of 1894, at which time the new enterprise was established. The structure, a substantial and commodious affair of solid brick, has a most advantageous location on Clough avenue and Eleventh street and is indeed but two blocks distant from St. Joseph's Church. The basement is of stone, and the entire furnishings throughout are of the most modern and improved plan. The building, when completed, cost not less than $85,000. That it has proved of unqualified value to Superior, the cheerful demonstrations of hundreds will vouch for, who have been nursed back to life by the careful and tireless ministration of the Sisters in charge. Father Weber, in addition to his duties as rector of St. Joseph's, is Spiritual Director of this institution.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART XII.

Biographical Sketches of Former Pastors in Wisconsin.

Bishop Baraga.

Rev. H. J. Albers.

ALBERS, the Rev. Henry Joseph, was born May 20, 1826, at Osnabrueck, and was ordained to the priesthood December 16, 1859, at Milwaukee. Subsequently he was pastor of St. Mary's congregation, Green Bay; Cassville, Grant County; Newburg, Saukville, and St. Mary's, of Racine. Father Albers is now rounding out a period of a well-spent life in the hospital at Racine, to which institution increasing years and infirmities have caused him to go. He is a man of many friends, having obtained and held the esteem of a large constituency through his unfform kindness and zealous efforts as pastor and friend.

BEAU, the Rev. Theophilus, was born March 24, 1840, in Canton Aargau, Switzerland. He completed his studies for the priesthood in this country and was ordained on February 5, 1865, at Omaha, Nebraska. He died at Sparta, Wisconsin, March 28, 1887.

BERCHMANN, the Rev. Father, died at Fussville, Wisconsin.

BEITTER, the Rev. Michael, is a native of Bavaria. He completed his education for the priesthood in this country, having been ordained in Milwaukee by Bishop Martin Henni. He was then appointed assistant to the Rev. Michael Heiss, at that time rector of St. Mary's congregation, Milwaukee, and from March 17, 1848, to July, 1849, was rector of St. Stephen's Church at New Coeln. In 1850 he was placed in charge of the Catholic congregation at Addison, Wisconsin, and from 1851 to 1855 maintained the pastorate of St. Lawrence congregation in Washington County, Wisconsin. From 1855 to 1856 he was located at Potosi; from 1856 to 1857 he was rector of St. Boniface congregation, Manitowoc, and from 1858 to 1860 was stationed at Brighton. After a brief period spent at Marytown, he was from February, 1862, until April, 1864, rector of the Catholic congregation at Jefferson, Wisconsin, where he built St. Lawrence Church. He was first resident pastor of St. Joseph's congregation at Racine, where he remained from

Rev. Thomas Bergen.

November 17, 1875, until April, 1877; later he was pastor of Sacred Heart congregation at St. Francis, Wisconsin. A number of years ago Father Beitter retired from his active duties as pastor, and is now spending the latter years of an active and successful life among relatives and friends in his native country.

BERGEN, the Rev. Thomas, was born in Ontario County, New York, June 24, 1844. He received his primary education in the public and in a select school at Watertown, Wisconsin. After leaving the select school, he entered the Seminary of St. Francis, near Milwaukee, on September 1, 1863, and there completed his classical and philosophical studies. He commenced his theological studies at St. Mary's of the Lake, Chicago, Illinois, in 1867. After that institution was closed, he returned to the Seminary of St. Francis, and completed his theological course in 1870. Bishop Henni being absent at the Vatican Council held in Rome that year, he was ordained by Bishop Melcher, at Green Bay, June 29, 1870.

Father Bergen was first stationed at East Troy, Walworth County, Wisconsin, where he built the parsonage and the present substantial church. After six years spent at East Troy, he was sent to Berlin, Green Lake County, Wisconsin, where he died November 30, 1879, at the age of thirty-three years.

BERMADINGER, the Rev. Fabian, came to the United States December 17, 1847, at the earnest request of the late Dr. Salzmann. Accompanying him at this time were a number of other priests whose subsequent achievements in behalf of the Church have done so much to bring it to its present prosperous and satisfactory condition. Soon after arriving at Milwaukee, Father Bermadinger was appointed by Bishop Henni assistant to the Rev. Kaspar Rehrl, then residing in Calumet County. It must be remembered that the Diocese of Milwaukee at this time comprised the entire State of Wisconsin, so that there was an almost unlimited field for such energetic spirits as he to labor in. In 1853 Father Bermadinger became assistant to Dr. Salzmann, at that time rector of St. Mary's congregation, Milwaukee. Subsequently, from June, 1855, to September, 1856, he was rector of St. Mary's congregation, at Racine, and from 1863 to 1864 had charge of the congregation at East Bristol, where he commenced the erection of a church. From July 8, 1866, to November 11, 1866, he maintained the Catholic pastorate at Elm Grove. Father Bermadinger died July 22, 1867, at Port Washington, and his remains are buried in the vault of the cemetery chapel at that place.

Rev. Fabian Bermadinger.

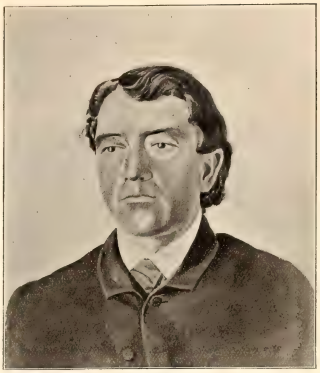
Rev. A. J. Bazelmanns.



Rev. Theophilus Beau.

Rev. Henry Beerhorst.

Rev. Wendelin Bernhard.

BERNHARD, the Rev. Wendelin, was born November 1, 1834, at Schippach, Germany. He came to America in 1857, and having completed his studies for the priesthood at the Salesianum, St. Francis, Wisconsin, was ordained December 8, 1860. When La Crosse was erected to an episcopate, he was attached to that diocese. From 1863 to 1867 he was rector of St. Aloysius' congregation at Sauk City, from which place he also attended the mission at Cazenovia. In 1868 he was appointed resident pastor at Cazenovia, remaining as such until 1872. From December, 1873, to March, 1876, he was located at Gratiot. He died at Dotyville, October 7, 1878.

Rev. Charles Beyerle.

BOEHM, the Rev. Joseph, was born March 13, 1846, at Ellwangen, Wuerttemberg, Germany. His education for the priesthood was completed in this country, he being ordained at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, July 20, 1870. Father Boehm died August 23, 1893.

BONENKAMP, the Rev. William, was born October 12, 1836, in the Diocese of Muenster, Westphalia. After having completed his classical studies he took a course of theology at the university at Innsbruck. Father Bonenkamp came to the United States in 1865, and was ordained to the priesthood on February 12 of that year at St. Francis Seminary by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Henni. Immediately following ordination, he was appointed to the rectorate of the congregation at Franklin, which he administered successfully for fourteen years. He died July 12, 1879, and was buried in the cemetery at Franklin.

BRADY, the Rev. George W., was born in Freedom, Outagamie County, Wisconsin, June 2, 1856. He received his earlier education in the district schools of his native place, after which he entered St. Francis Seminary in the fall of 1873, where, having completed the necessary courses, he was ordained to the priesthood in June, 1881. His first charge was as assistant to his brother, the Rev. John Brady, then rector at Portage, and after two months in that position he was assigned to the pastorate of the Catholic congregation at Florence, Wisconsin, at which place he built a church. About twelve months later he was transferred to Fort Howard, remaining there for seventeen months at the end of which time he was appointed pastor of St. Mary's congregation at Portage. Among the many improvements made to the church property at this place by him, were the enlargement and almost entire renovation of the church structure, and many other lesser though most necessary features which made his administration of the most acceptable character.

Rev. Joseph Boehm.

Unfortunately for the cause in which he was such an active and zealous worker, Father Brady's physical condition was thoroughly inadequate to the work, as a result of which he succumbed to the insidious encroachments of an incurable disease February 24, 1897.

BRUENER, O. F. M., the Rev. Leo, was born May 27, 1836, in Recklinghausen, Westphalia, Germany. He was ordained at Muenster, December 3, 1859, and came to the United States with the late Bishop Juncker, of Rev. William Bonenkamp.

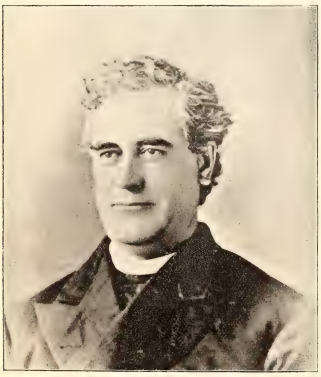
Rev. Geo. Brady.

Rev. Leo. Bruener.

Rev. John Brady.

Alton, Illinois, November 9, 1867. After coming to this country, he was for some time rector of St. Mary's congregation at Quincy, Illinois, where he remained until May, 1874. He then, with the permission of his bishop assumed charge of the Catholic Normal School and Pio Nono College at St. Francis, near Milwaukee, after the death of Dr. Salzmann, and was the founder of St. John's Deaf-mute Asylum at that place. In December, 1879, he was recalled by his bishop, becoming pastor of St. Boniface's congregation at Quincy, Illinois. In November, 1887, he joined the Sacred Heart Province of the Franciscan Fathers, and was sent in August, 1892, to San Francisco, California, where he was rector of St. Anthony's Church until his death, which occurred during the summer of 1898.



Rev. Peter De Berge.

DE BERGE, the Rev. Peter, was born July 8, 1830, at Bedburg, in the Rhenish Province, Germany, and came to America while still very young. Here he completed his theological studies under the direction of Dr. Salzmann in the old seminary of Germantown, Washington County, Wisconsin, and was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Henni in December, 1852. Subsequent to ordination, his first appointment was to the rectorate in Sheboygan, after which he returned to St. Francis, where he assumed a professorship in the Salesianum. Some time later he became rector of the Catholic congregations at Waterford and Beaver Dam, where he built a church, and also at Waukesha. From the latter place he went to Brooklyn, where he also built St. Boniface's Church, which handsome structure had almost entirely been paid for when he was recalled to Milwaukee by the Bishop. In 1875 Father De Berge was appointed to the pastorate of St. Mary's congregation at Milwaukee, but after a year's services as such he once more accepted a professorship in the Seminary. In 1877 he became rector of St. Mary's congregation at Racine, where he built the present parsonage. In December of the same year he celebrated the 25th anniversary of his ordination. In March, 1881, he assumed charge of the congregation at Elm Grove, at which place he died June 14, 1882, his remains being interred near the church at that place. Father De Berge was among the first Catholic priests to come to Wisconsin, being one of the four students instructed by Dr. Salzmann in his little seminary at Germantown.

Rev. Fr. Croak.

DEISENRIEDER, the Rev. Michael, was born April 14, 1814, at Heinsberg, Bavaria. Acquiring the necessary education at the schools of his native place, he was finally ordained to the priesthood by Cardinal Reisach in 1837. For some years following he worked among the churches and Catholic institutions of his native country, but finally removed to the United States, becoming associated with the Diocese of Milwaukee in 1852. He was then successively rector of the congregations at Holy Cross, Ozaukee County, St. Mary's of the Lake, St. John's at Fond du Lac, and St. Lawrence, remaining in charge of the latter from 1861 to September, 1865. From 1869 to the time of his death he was

Rev. Father Butler.

Rev. John G. Collins.

Rev. Patrick J. Colovin.

Rev. Wm. Corby.

rector of St. Andrew's congregation at Farmersville. Father Deisenrieder was a very zealous and active priest, finding time in spite of his numerous and even arduous duties to assist many candidates in their efforts to obtain holy orders. He also did much towards advancing the interests of the Dominican Sisters at Racine. He died August 22, 1880, at Farmersville, and is buried in the cemetery at that place.

DONAHOE, the Rev. Patrick, was born at Kingstown, Dublin County, Ireland, in 1810. Having obtained his classical education in his native country, he came to America in 1834, where, after completing the necessary studies for the priesthood, he was ordained at Philadelphia by Bishop Kenrick, in 1837. Having labored for fifteen years in that diocese, he came to Milwaukee, where he was appointed rector of St. John's Cathedral, remaining as such for twenty-seven years, after which time, on account of ill health, he was obliged to resign this charge. Upon the recommendation of Archbishop Heiss, he received from the Pope the distinction of Monseigneur in 1884. In 1887 he celebrated his golden anniversary in the priesthood. He died in 1889 at St. Mary's Hospital.

ETSCHMANN, the Rev. F. X., was born near Innsbruck, Tyrol, November 9, 1818. Having completed his course in philosophy at the capital of the province, he entered the diocesan seminary of Brixen, where he was ordained to the priesthood July 31, 1842. In October, 1848, he emigrated to America, after which he devoted his entire time to the missions of Wisconsin. He was an exemplary priest in every respect, zealous and self-sacrificing, and at the same time kind and charitable to all. His first mission was Brighton, in Kenosha County, where he remained from November 12, 1848, to 1850, when he was transferred to Sheboygan. For several years subsequently, he was pastor of a Catholic congregation at Madison, where he built St. Raphael's Church and labored with much success for the welfare of the people, while later he was pastor for various periods at La Crosse, Green Bay, Racine, and Port Washington. Several times in the interim he was enabled to visit his native country, on each occasion making liberal donations to the church of his native village. In 1858 he visited the Eternal City, where he was received in audience by Pope Pius IX. Returning from his last visit to Europe, he assumed the pastorate of Brighton again, faithfully laboring for the welfare of his people until declining health compelled him to resign. Father Etschmann will long be remembered by all who knew him as a faithful and exemplary priest.

Rev. F. X. Etschmann.

Rev. Chas. Fessler.

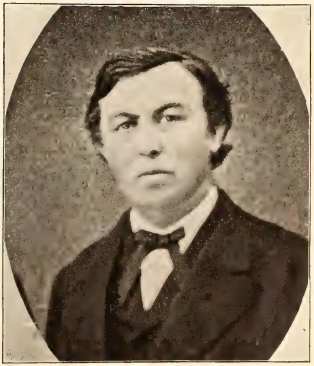
FESSLER, the Rev. Charles, was born in Baden, Germany, on October 12, 1852. In 1860 he came with his parents to America and Manitowoc County, Wisconsin. In 1868 he entered the Seminary at St. Francis, where, after completing the necessary courses of study, he was ordained to the priesthood on June 10, 1876. After ordination, he was appointed assistant to his brother, the Rev. Joseph Fessler, at Manitowoc. He

Rev. Louis Dale.

Rev. James Doyle.

Rev. Wm. Engel.



Rev. Geo. Fessler.

then became rector of the congregation at Random Lake, where he stayed for two years, during which time he erected a church at the mission-place Sherman. This church was dedicated in honor of St. Patrick. In September, 1879, he was appointed professor of the Pio Nono College at St. Francis, and in 1880 he was promoted to the rectorship. In November, 1889, he became rector of St. Joseph's congregation at Racine, where he remained for three years, after which he was obliged to resign on account of ill health. He then removed to Portland, Oregon, whence again he removed to Newark, New Jersey.

FESSLER, the Rev. George, was born January 20, 1848, at Oberhausen, near Freiburg in Baden. He came with his parents to the United States in 1860, the family settling at Nazianz, Manitowoc County. Young Fessler pursued his classical studies at St. Vincent's College, Pennsylvania, after which he entered St. Francis Seminary in 1867, where he was finally ordained to the priesthood December 22, 1872. His first appointment was as assistant to his brother, the Rev. Joseph Fessler, at that time rector of the Catholic congregation at Manitowoc. Later, he was appointed pastor of St.

Rev. Joseph Fessler.

George's congregation at Wilson, and it was during his residence there that he built the present church. Five years later he was appointed to the congregation of St. John's at Silver Lake, where he also acted as chaplain to the Franciscan Sisters. He died May 28, 1885.

FESSLER, the Rev. Jos., was born March 18, 1839, at Oberhausen, Grand Duchy of Baden. In 1854 he came to America and commenced his studies at the Benedictine Convent in St. Vincenz, Pennsylvania. He completed the theological course in the Seminary at St. Francis, Wisconsin, and was ordained to the priesthood in 1865. After ordination, he labored in different missions, and later he became rector of St. Boniface's congregation at Manitowoc, Wisconsin. At the latter place he had a large field to work in. When he took charge of this congregation, he found a small church and no school. Through his great zeal, and the assistance of the parishioners, he bought a church as well as a school in a good condition. Besides this he had to attend the mission St. Joseph, where he took up his residence in 1878 and erected a magnificent convent. He could not long enjoy the fruits of his labors as his health became undermined by an incurable sickness. He, therefore, removed to Farmersville, and later to Fond du Lac. As his sickness grew worse, he went to Oregon by permission of the Archbishop, where he labored, first at Sublimity and later at Beaverton, at which place he died June 20th, 1896.

Rev. James Fitzgibbon.

FITZGIBBON, the Rev. James, studied at St. Mary's in Chicago, and was ordained at that institution in the year 1854. At the time the war broke out, he was pastor of a church at Springfield, Illinois. About 1862, he was appointed post-chaplain by Abraham Lincoln, the highest position held by any Catholic chaplain in the army. He continued in that capacity until the close of the war. He then returned to Chicago, where he did not remain long, but came on to Milwaukee, where he was appointed by Archbishop Henni as assistant to Father Colton at Fond du Lac, remaining there, however, but a short time, owing to an appointment which he received as pastor of the church at Templeton. In August, 1871, he was transferred to Darlington, where he remained about four years; from there he went to East Troy, and from the latter place to Whitewater. He continued in charge of the congregation at Whitewater until February, 1896, at which time he was compelled to resign owing to his failing health. He then went to New Orleans with the view of regaining his health, but he rapidly grew worse and died about ten days after reaching there. He was a man who was highly educated, an excellent preacher, and was universally esteemed by the parishioners in each and every congregation of which he had charge and by all who knew him.

FOECKLER, the Rev. A., was born at Landstuhl, Bavaria, September 13, 1838. Acquiring his earlier education in the schools of his native country, he came to the United States and entered the Salesianum at St. Francis, Wisconsin, where, having completed the necessary courses, he was ordained to the priesthood June 29, 1863. He celebrated his first Mass on the 2d of the following month, soon after which he was appointed rector of the Catholic congregation at Cross Plains. He was then transferred successively to the charges at St. Martin's, Dane County, Germantown, East Bristol, Fussville, New Berlin and Racine, dying at the latter place while rector of St. Joseph's congregation, on November 9, 1889.

Rev. Anton Foeckler.

FRIEDEN, the Rev. Peter, was born February 25, 1837, at Ehnen, in Luxemburg. He was ordained priest August 30, 1862, and came to America in 1869. After his arrival in this country he stayed for some time in the East. Later, he joined the Diocese of Milwaukee, where he was stationed as rector at Belgium, Richfield, and at last at St. Francis, where he erected the present church and school. He died March 14, 1891.

FUSSEDER, the Rev. F., was born September 3, 1825, at Uberaikern, diocese of Linz, Austria. Having obtained an ordinary education, he had also completed his classical studies in the schools of his native country when he was induced by Dr. Salzmann to form one of the party of young aspirants who came to this country December 17, 1847. He then entered the temporary Seminary at Germantown and Milwaukee, where, having completed the necessary studies, he was ordained to the priesthood August 18, 1850. Of his subsequent labors we have it that from May, 1852, until September, 1853, he was rector of the Holy Name congregation at Sheboygan, and from 1859 to 1862 had charge of St. Mary's congregation at Port Washington. In 1862 he entered the United States service as chaplain, and after having considerable experience in that capacity returned to Wisconsin, where he was placed in charge of St. Peter's congregation, Beaver Dam, where he built the present school house at a cost of $8,000. On account of ill health he was compelled to resign his pastoral duties in 1876, and from then on led a retired life until the time of his death, which occurred July 16, 1888.

Rev. F. Fusseder.

Rev. R. Frank.

GARTNER, the Rev. John M., was born March 29 1829, at Olmuetz, Moravia. Having received an excellent rudimentary education, he entered the school for cadets in Vienna. In 1848 he took an active part in the Hungarian Revolutionary war, but later, though then thirty-four years of age, felt impelled to take up a course of study with a view to becoming a priest. To this end he took a course of theology in the university at Innsbruck. He came to this country with Dr. Salzmann in 1866, and having completed his theological studies was ordained to the priesthood on April 28, 1867, in St. John's Cathedral, Milwaukee, saying his first Mass at Franklin, Wisconsin, on May 5th of that year. Subsequent to ordination, he was appointed professor of philosophy at the Salesianum, remaining as such for a year and a half. During the same period, being thoroughly conversant with the Bohemian language, he administered to the spiritual wants of St. Nepomucene's congregation. He was also very active in bringing about the establishment of a mission house for Bohemian priests, to obtain funds for which he not only worked assiduously in this country, but also, in 1872, visited Europe, where he was fortunate in obtaining considerable aid. Returning from that country, he was for some time spiritual director of the Sisters of Notre Dame, but owing to failing health went for a period to Maria Stein, Ohio. In 1876 he returned to the West as rector of the Catholic parish at Hoka, Minnesota, where he died March 3, 1877.

GAUCHE, the Rev. James, was born at Messaney, diocese of Namur, November 5, 1825. He received his literary education at Bastogne Seminary, and acquired his studies in theology in the Grand Seminary at Namur in his native country. In 1857 he came to America and became a member of the Capuchin Order, near Fond du Lac, and was ordained to the priesthood June 29, 1860. He was rector of the congregation at Two Rivers for six years, at Cooperstown two years, and at Kaukauna eighteen months. He was then at West De Pere nine and a half years, and at Chilton three years. In 1893 he resigned and retired to West De Pere, where he died March 24, 1897.

GSTACH, Ph. D., the Rev. A., was born November 15, 1826, at Frastanz, near Feldkirch, Diocese of Brixen. He was ordained to the priesthood in his native country July 25, 1852, and came to America in 1867. Here he joined the Diocese of Milwaukee and was at once appointed assistant pastor of the congregation at Menomonee, subsequently assuming the pastorate at Wheatland, East Bristol, and latterly at New Berlin, where he remained from 1886 to 1887. Having become quite sickly, he retired to St. Joseph's Hospital, where he subsequently died, his remains being interred, according to his last wishes, in the cemetery near the chapel in the woods at St. Francis, Wisconsin.

Rev. John M. Gartner.

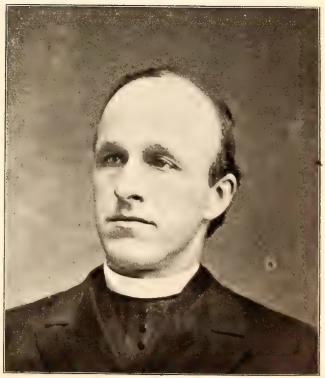
Rev. Father Goss.

Rev. Ph. D. Gstach.

Rev. Ed. Gray.



Rev. Clemens Hahn.

HAHN, the Rev. Clemens, was born November 23, 1845, in Germany. He acquired his classical education at home, completing the philosophical and theological courses at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, from which institution he was ordained to the priesthood June 27, 1880. He was then appointed assistant to the Rev. Father Mutz at St. Nazianz. In January, 1881, he became successor to the Rev. H. Reinhart as rector of St. Lawrence's congregation at Jefferson, Wisconsin. After a years' pastorate at that place he died December 6, 1882, his premature death being sincerely regretted by all.

HAIDER, the Rev. M., was born at Absam, near Hall, Tyrol, Austria, October 8, 1820. He was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Galura of Brixen, July 27, 1845. He came to America in 1850 and joined the Diocese of Milwaukee, where he labored most successfully at Holy Name Church in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, until the time of his death, February 23, 1885.

Rev. M. Haider.

HAMM, the Rev. Joseph, was born in 1822, at Niederwinden, Amt Waldkirch, Baden. He obtained his classical education at Konstanz, and studied philosophy and theology at the university at Freiburg, Baden. He took an active part in the Revolution of 1848, was finally captured and imprisoned, but escaped and came to America, where he completed his theological studies. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1853 by Bishop Neumann of Philadelphia, in whose diocese he worked till 1870, when he came to Wisconsin and joined the diocese of Milwaukee. For several years he was rector of the congregation at Cross Plains, and was afterwards transferred to Dacada, Sheboygan County, where he was stationed uninterruptedly for over twenty years. At this place he built a fine parsonage and school. He died November 16, 1892.

HASLBAUER, the Rev. J. B., was born July 17, 1807, at Anger, parish of Laaber, Bavaria, and was ordained to the priesthood at Wuerzburg, in 1835. He came to America in 1854, and for some time subsequent was professor of mathematics at the Benedictine convent in Pennsylvania. He then joined the Diocese of Milwaukee, where he worked for several years under Bishop Henni. During this period he was rector of the Catholic congregation at Wheatland, St. Joseph's congregation, Columbus Settlement, St. Hubert and St. Boniface congregation, Washington County; St. Nicolaus congregation, Ozaukee County, and St. George's congregation at Kenosha; afterwards he returned to Wheatland for a second time. In 1863 he went to Ingolstadt, Bavaria, where he died July 17, 1879.

Rev. Joseph Hamm.

HEIGL, the Rev. Matthew, was born at Jenbach, Tyrol. Completing his classical studies he entered the Premonstratensian Monastery of the Order at Wilten, near Innsbruck, where, finally, he was ordained in 1867. For four years following this he worked in different stations belonging to the Order of St. Norbert. In 1871 he came to America and was appointed assistant to the Rev. Adalbert Inama at Roxbury, Wisconsin. After

Rev. J. B. Haslbauer.

Rev. Michael Heiss.

Rev. Mathaeus Heigl.

Rev. Charles Hengen.

the latter's resignation Father Heigl was appointed pastor. Under his able administration the church of St. Norbert received numerous much needed improvements, finally making of it one of the most handsome and imposing structures in the diocese. Some years later Father Heigl was removed to Franklin, Milwaukee County, where he made notable improvements to the church of the Sacred Heart. Soon after this he was transferred to the congregation at Ashford, where he died after a brief illness in 1890.

HEISS, the Rev. Michael, nephew of the late Archbishop Michael Heiss, was born August, 19th, 1833, at Boehmfeld, Bavaria. He was ordained to the priesthood December 16th, 1859, at St. Francis, Wisconsin. After an active career of over thirty years, he died at St. Joseph's Hospital June 25, 1890.

HENGEN, the Rev. Charles, was born 1840 at Allerbora, Luxemburg, Belgium; was educated in the schools and colleges of his native country, and ordained to the priesthood in 1866, coming to America in the same year. Here he joined the Diocese of La Crosse, his first appointment being as resident pastor of St. Mary's congregation at Marathon City, where he remained until 1871. He died at Martin's Station, Diocese of Albany, New York, on July 11, 1875.

Rev. Peter Honeyman.

HONEYMAN, the Rev. Peter, was born in County Leitrim, Ireland, in or about the year 1858, and acquired his rudimentary education in the schools of his native country. Later he removed to Canada, where he completed his theological course in the Sulpitian College at Montreal. He was then ordained for the Diocese of Green Bay, Wisconsin, being assigned by Bishop Krautbauer to the pastorate of St. Thomas, at Poygan, Wisconsin, where he remained for four years. He was then transferred to the pastorate of St. John's at Montello, from which parish, after having erected a parochial school, and placing matters in a most satisfactory condition, he was transferred to the charge of St. Augustine in the city of Chilton. Here, also, he was remarkably successful in his labors, bringing the spiritual as well as the temporal affairs of the parish into a more satisfactory condition. He died after about three years' residence among these people, deeply regretted by all with whom he had been brought into more or less intimate relations.

Rev. Thos. Hodnett.

HOLZHAUER, the Rev. H. J., was born November 14, 1830, at Stetten, near Holstein, Hohenzollern. His father, Anton Holzhauer, was teacher of the school at the same place and was pensioned after forty years' service. His mother died when little Herman was ten years of age. He obtained his classical education at Ehingen near Ulm, and his philosophical and theological courses were taken at Tuebingen and Freiburg i. Br. In 1852 he came to America and was ordained priest March 11, 1854, by Bishop Henni. He celebrated his first Mass at St. Mary's Church assisted by the late Archbishop Heiss, Dr. Joseph Salzmann, Dr. Urbanek and Dr. Paulhuber, pioneer missionaries of this State. The Rev. Father Holzhauer's first position was at St. Mary's Church as assistant of Dr. Joseph Salzmann.

Rev. H. J. Holzhauer.

Rev. John Huber.

Rev. Charles Horan.

Rev. Adalbert Inama.

When the cholera broke out in 1854, he fearlessly administered the Sacraments to the dying. At this time the northwestern part of the city was settled by Germans, mostly Catholics, and thus Father Holzhauer was entrusted with the organization of a new congregation, which was established February 22, 1855. The new church was dedicated in honor of St. Joseph. Under most trying circumstances Father Holzhauer struggled along, his field of labor extending for many miles west and north. The first church built by the congregation was of frame, and so arranged as to be used for school and parsonage as well. This church was erected in 1856 under great financial depression, on account of which Father Holzhauer made a donation of his services to the congregation for several years. In thankful acknowledgment, the people, as soon as possible, erected a comfortable priesthouse for his use. In 1872 the new school was built which was enlarged in 1891. The Rev. Father Holzhauer was a great friend of the school; every hour that he could spare was spent there, going from one class to another, instructing the children in the Christian doctrine. He promoted the school system in every way and in 1890 organized a higher class for scholars who had taken their first communion. This class was continued with the greatest success till September, 1894. He was also a promoter of Catholic societies, ten of which were organized under his administration. The remarkable fact may also be mentioned, that, during his forty years of active service, he was not a single day absent from home. The twenty-fifth anniversary of his priesthood he celebrated in 1879, on which occasion he received many valuable presents from his congregation. In 1894 his health became very poor, owing to the encroachments of an incurable malady from which he never recovered. He died on the 6th of April, 1895. The funeral took place April 9 and was attended by a great number of priests and a multitude of people. His remains found their last resting place on the right side of the Sanctuary of St. Joseph's Church, where he had knelt daily in profound devotion.

Rev. Hubert Jansen.

INAMA, the Rev. Adalbert, the first resident pastor at Roxbury, Dane County, Wisconsin, was born at Kaltern, Tyrol, December 26, 1798. Having completed the classical course at Bozen with brilliant success, he entered the famous Monastery of the Premonstratensians at Wilten, near Innsbruck. Here, later, on account of his excellent abilities, he was made a professor of the gymnasium at Innsbruck. Not a few of his pupils at that time who afterwards obtained eminent positions in the Church were wont to speak in terms of glowing commendation of the wonderful clearness with which he explained the most difficult passages of the Greek classics.

Rev. J. Jaster.

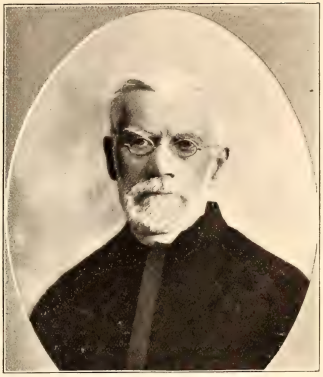
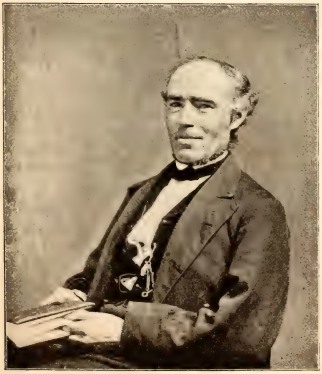
In 1843 Father Inama came to America, laboring for a considerable period as assistant to his countryman, the Very Rev. Father Raffeiner, Vicar-General of the Archdiocese of New York. In 1848 our subject removed to

Rev. Mathias Joerger.



Rev. Geo. Keller.



Rev. Thomas Keenan.

Rev. C. Kelly.

Wisconsin and almost immediately settled in the western part of the State, where he established congregations at Roxbury and Sauk City. From here, accompanied by his fellow laborer and countryman, Max Gaertner, he visited the neighboring missions, administering to the spiritual wants of the Catholic population as far east as Madison and Watertown. In 1871, owing to additional duties he was given as an assistant, the Rev. Matthew Heigl. In July, 1878, this venerable pioneer priest of western Wisconsin celebrated his golden jubilee. A few months later, October 18, 1879, he was called to his eternal reward.

Rev. J. F. Kennedy.

JAKOBS, the Rev. Th., died while maintaining the rectorate of the Catholic congregation at Manitowoc.

JANSEN, the Rev. Hubert, was born at Hechelscheidt, Archdiocese of Cologne, in 1828. He studied medicine for several years at Cologne, and afterwards studied theology at the university at Louvain, in Belgium, where he received minor orders in 1852. He was ordained priest in 1854 by Bishop Laurent of Luxemburg at Aix La Chapelle, and celebrated his first Mass in the convent chapel of the Sisters of the Child Jesus, on which occasion Bishop Laurent preached the sermon. In 1858 he was induced by Bishop John Martin Henni to come to America. Here he worked successfully for thirty-five years for the spiritual and bodily welfare of man. He was a kind benefactor to mankind in all the sense of the word, and the poor always found in him a friend. During his pastorate in Wisconsin he built seven churches, two schools and one parsonage. He died October 25, 1892.

JASTER, the Rev. J., was born in West Prussia, Germany, in 1828. Acquiring a part of his education in the old country, and completing his studies for the priesthood in America, he was ordained at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee. Subsequent to ordination, he was pastor at Menasha, Green Bay Cathedral, St. Mary's Church, Woodville and Oshkosh. He died at the residence of his nephew, the Rev. J. Decker, rector of SS. Peter and Paul's Church, at Addison, Wisconsin, November 19, 1881, aged fifty-three years.

JOERGER, D. D., the Rev. Mathaeus Joseph, was born October 12, 1842, at Wilburgstetten, Diocese of Augsburg, and came to the United States December 6, 1853. Having completed his studies for the priesthood at St. Francis Seminary, St. Francis, Wisconsin, he was ordained on April 22, 1865, by Bishop Henni. Subsequently he was appointed rector of the Catholic congregation at Waterford. Here he accomplished much good, reopening the parish school, which, owing to certain untoward conditions, had remained closed for some time, and reëstablishing the Sisters of Notre Dame, who had formerly been in charge of the same. He also erected a special chapel to be used for divine services in winter and bought an excellent organ for the church. He left this congregation November 4, 1872, to assume charge of St. John the Baptist congregation at Jefferson,

Rev. Aloys Kieser.

Wisconsin, of which he remained continuously in charge for a period of eighteen years. During this pastorate the interior of the church was renovated throughout, and provided with handsome new altars. On October 14, 1891, Father Joerger resigned his pastorate and made an extended visit to Europe. He now lives as a retired priest abroad.

KEENAN, the Rev. Thomas, was born in County Tyrone, Ireland, April 15, 1829, and lived in Ireland until 1844, when he came to Philadelphia with some friends. The rudimentary portion of his education was acquired at home, where he studied mathematics, Latin and other branches to some extent. After coming to Philadelphia he became a pupil of the Rev. P. Rafferty, receiving instruction from him for a period of three years. Then he entered the Seminary of St. Charles Borromeo's, located on Eighteenth Street, Philadelphia, but after taking a two years' course was compelled by failing health to leave that institution. Later, at the solicitation of friends, he came west, arriving at Milwaukee in the year 1852. Here, after two years' studious effort and preparation, he was ordained priest for the Diocese of Milwaukee by the late Archbishop Henni, July 19, 1854. Subsequently he was appointed pastor of old St. Gall's Church. In 1855 we find him laboring at Brighton, Kenosha County, and some years later he went to East Troy, Walworth County. From there he was transferred to Oshkosh, where he remained for nine years. In 1867 he removed to Portage, where he spent the last twelve years of his life working and toiling with an ardent zeal for the salvation of souls. Father Keenan died at Portage, September 6, 1880, and his earthly remains rest in the Catholic cemetery at that place. During his time of active service he built several churches and while at Oshkosh had charge of a mission, the territory occupied by which is now attended by more than nine priests. As a linguist he was most gifted, being a master of nearly all the languages of Modern Europe.

KELLER, the Rev. George, was born April 17, 1823, at Hagenau, Alsace, and came to America in 1854. He was ordained to the priesthood September 23, 1854. For many years following he had the distinction of being the only German priest in Minnesota, throughout which State he was thoroughly well known. Then he became associated with the Diocese of La Crosse, in which he worked for more than a quarter of a century. He died August 11, 1897, his last pastorate being at East Farmington, Wisconsin.

KENNEDY, the Rev. J. F., was born at Highland, Wabasha County, Minnesota. After acquiring the necessary education he was ordained to the priesthood June 24, 1886, at St. Francis Seminary, Wisconsin. Soon after ordination he became attached to the Diocese of La Crosse, where the most of his services to the Church were rendered. He died at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester, Minnesota, February 25, 1897.

KENNEY, the Rev. Lawrence M., was born in Tynagh, County Galway, Ireland, November 6, 1836. His parents came to the United States when he was three years of age, and settled at Rochester, New York, where they remained for a few years previous to moving to Milwaukee, which they finally did in 1846. Here he attended the first Catholic school established in the city, and was also one of the first class of students to enter St. Francis Seminary as soon as that institution was opened. He was ordained to the priesthood in St. John's Cathedral, Milwaukee, by Bishop Henni in the month of December, 1859, his first appointment being to the pastorate of East Troy, Walworth County, and Eagle and Mukwonago in Waukesha County, where he labored until 1864. He was then transferred to the charges at Delavan and Elkhorn in Walworth County, remaining there until 1867, when he was appointed to the pastorate at Mazomanie, Wisconsin, having the mission of Spring Green attached. In August, 1869, he was appointed to the pastorate at Meeme, in charge of which he remained until the time of his death, which occurred February 25, 1870, at which time he was a little over thirty-four years of age.

Rev. J. Kinsella.

KIESER, the Rev. John Aloys, was born October 9, 1825, at Buchen, in the Archdiocese of Freiburg, Baden. He came to America in 1861, seven years after his ordination to the priesthood, which was conferred upon him at Metz, Lorain, on June 10, 1854. After coming to America, Father Kieser remained for several months with the Rev. Father Oschwald, at Nazianz, in Manitowoc County. He then received his appointment as rector of the Catholic congregation at Beloit Road, remaining as such from 1861 to 1865. Following this, he was pastor at Johnsburg, Fond du Lac County, from 1865 to

Rev. Anton Koke.

1873, and at Ashton, Dane County, from 1873 to 1893. Father Kieser died while in charge of the latter parish, and is buried in the cemetery at that place.

KINSELLA, the Rev. J., was born May 21, 1838. In 1859 he was ordained to the priesthood on the same day as Bishop Flasch, and was for three years professor in St. Francis Seminary. In 1872 he took charge of the pastorate at Lake Geneva, after which he was stationed at Cedarburg and Franklin. He died at the latter place on March 4, 1879.

KRAUTHAN, the Rev. Cajetan, O. M. Cap., was born at Baernau, in the District of Kirdiexreuth, Oberpfalz, Bavaria, in 1819. In 1848 he joined the Capuchin Order at Eichstaett, and received tonsure April 12 from Bishop von Oettel; sub-deaconship was conferred upon him April 22, and deaconship May 1, and he was ordained priest on May 13. In October, 1852, he entered St. Victor's Convent in Mayland. Shortly afterwards he went to the East Indies as a missionary, where he worked with much success for some time; but owing to the extreme heat of the climate he was obliged to return to his native country. In 1865 he came to the United States, where he labored among the Menomonee Indians at Keshena. Subsequently he had charge of St. Mary's congregation at Calumet, Wisconsin; St. Matthew's congregation, on the Beloit Road, and the congregation at Schleisingerville. From May to July, 1878, he was editor of the "Columbia," a Catholic weekly published in Milwaukee. He died in July, 1878.

KRUSE, the Rev. J., was born in 1845 at Luechte, near Pyrmont, Diocese of Paderborn, Westphalia. He acquired his classical education in his native city, where he also completed his philosophical and theological courses. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1869. In 1877 he came to America and was a professor at St. Francis Seminary, St. Francis, Wisconsin, from that time until 1886. On the death of Father F. X. Obermüller, which occurred at about this time, he was appointed spiritual director of the Franciscan Sisters of the Perpetual Adoration at La Crosse. He died on Pentecost Monday, 1877.

Rev. L. Lay.

LALUMIERE, S. J., the Rev. Stanislaus Petit, was born in Vincennes, Indiana, on the 13th of February, 1822. After acquiring a preparatory education in his native town he attended St. Mary's College in Bardstown, Kentucky; although at that time he had no intention of entering the priesthood. On completing his collegiate education, he began studying for the law at Vandalia, Illinois, afterwards moving to Springfield, where he was finally admitted to the bar in 1844. At Springfield he held the position of Deputy Clerk of the United States Court until 1848, and was subsequently for one year Deputy Clerk of the Circuit Court in St. Louis. His first brief was prepared for him by Abraham Lincoln, who was also one of the Board of Examiners at the time of his admission. It was during the earlier part of 1849 that Father Lalumiere decided to abandon the law for the priesthood, and began studying to that end. In August of that year he came to Milwaukee and opened a boy's school on the site occupied for many years by St. Gall's Church. There he remained for two years, at the end of which period he entered the University at St. Louis. On July 11, 1861, Father Lalumiere was appointed pastor of St. Gall's Church, and from that time on devoted his greatest energies towards the building-up of that parish and its educational institutions. The schools were gradually enlarged and in 1870 the new St. Gall's Church was completed and occupied. Six years later Holy Name parish was formed. Father Lalumiere remained in charge of St. Gall's until 1887, when he was transferred to Marquette College and made Rector of that institution and of Holy Name Church, positions which were largely honorary owing to his poor health. On November 11, 1889, he was called to St. Xavier's College in Cincinnati, where he remained until the time of his death, March 23, 1895.

Father Lalumiere lived in Milwaukee for more than thirty years and was a most popular priest, being a man of large heart and great generosity. He was a tireless worker in his chosen field, and it was largely owing to his instrumentality that the Little Sisters of the Poor were brought to Milwaukee and the House of the Good Shepherd established. He counted among his friends many prominent citizens and the devotion of his parishioners was very marked. His last visit to Milwaukee was at the time of the laying of the corner-stone of Gesu Church. Father Lalumiere's true name was Petit, that of Lalumiere, meaning "the light," being given to an ancestor who had saved the lives of a number of men lost in a Canadian forest.

Many heartfelt and touching tributes have been paid to the memory of this noble priest, from among which the following extracts have been taken:

"He was out of the line of the ordinary churchman in this, that he was broadened in early life by contact with men of the world. This gave him a great advantage in dealing with the members of a mixed congregation. He was a deep student of human character and few persons ever left his presence without being impressed with his versatility and personality. He was also one of the most successful business men connected with the Jesuit Order in this region. When he came to Milwaukee the parish of St. Gall's was a mere speck, with a small membership, but when he left it was one of the most flourishing parishes in the Northwest, both as to membership and educational institutions and its acquired property. Father Lalumiere was one of the most courteous and accomplished gentlemen I ever met. He was a good preacher, always spoke extemporaneously, and his discourses always made a strong impression on his hearers."

Another says: "Father Lalumiere was remarkable for his never-failing good nature. He took a great interest in unfortunate people and would solicit money to buy pipes and tobacco to give around. He was very fond of Lincoln and would often repeat stories of his or tell of some amusing incident that happened at Springfield, where he was a fellow-lawyer with him."

Rev. Father Stanislaus Petit Lalumiere.

Still another says: "During the early days of the old parish of St. Gall's, it was my good fortune to be frequently in his company. His manly, frank and open countenance was the index to a heart as warm and generous in the cause of suffering humanity and unfortunate souls as ever throbbed in human breast. His benevolence was as broad as the ocean's stretch; his advice as soothing as a mother's love. His words of consolation in sorrow and distress brought tears of joy to many an aching heart, and his great charity penetrated in all directions and was ever at the command of his people in the cause of faith and good work. He was unostentatious in every sense, and his marked simplicity drew thousands towards him. He was likewise a man of great intellect, and his sermons, when he was in good health and in the full vigor of manhood, were gems of pulpit eloquence, full of force and logic, clothed in simple words, alike inspiring and effective on his audience. He was noticeably gifted with a clear, full, voluminous voice, which, added to his striking physique, presented a figure in the pulpit that created a lasting impression. He was the advisor of the poor and lowly as well as of the rich and well-to-do, and was admired, loved and respected by the Catholic and non-Catholic alike. His greatest desire was to properly care for and guide the youth of his flock to the end that they should become good Christians, knowing that to be an essential to good citizenship. The many edifices which through his efforts were erected here in the cause of religion, education, charity and humanity are monuments to his memory more lasting than fame. * * Here he spent the best years of his life laboring in the vineyard of Christ, and here we would have liked to have had him in the closing days of that noble, useful and well-spent life. But Providence ruled otherwise. * * His loving and grateful children here sorrowfully yield his remains to those in whose midst the closing scenes of a fruitful life were laid, but his memory, his counsel, his example, his works, are our treasures."

Rev. Herman Leygraaff.

LEYGRAAFF, the Rev. Herman, was born February 13, 1845, in Emmerich on the Rhine. He acquired his classical education at Gaesdonek, and studied theology at Muenster. In 1869 he emigrated to America, where he was ordained priest for the Diocese of St. Louis on September 30, 1869. He was then appointed assistant at St. Mary's Church, St. Louis, soon afterwards, however, being transferred to the Catholic rectorate at Cape Girardeau. In 1870 he was appointed a professor in the Salesianum at St. Francis, Wisconsin, where he remained for one year, when at the request of his old bishop he returned to organize the congregation of St. Agatha at St. Louis, remaining as rector of that congregation for three years. In 1874 he again returned as professor to the Salesianum, where he was regarded as a learned and methodical teacher of languages and history and is remembered with deep graditude by the former students; but owing to continued failing health he was compelled to resign that position in 1878. He died January 30, 1881.

Rev. Joseph Maly.

MALY, the Rev. Joseph, was born at Bechin, Kreis Budweis, Bohemia, in 1828. He commenced his studies for the priesthood at Pisek, and afterwards took a course in theology at Budweis, where he was ordained in 1851. For a year following ordination he was assistant pastor at Dorf. In 1852, just a week preceding Christmas, he landed in New York, and for two years following was pastor of a congregation near Syracuse. In 1854 he associated himself with the Diocese of Milwaukee, where he held services in old St. Peter's Cathedral for the first Bohemian congregation organized in that city. Afterwards he became rector of a congregation in Manitowoc County. He was pastor at Slovan, Wisconsin, in 1885, and in 1895 was appointed to the pastorate at Springfield Corners, Wisconsin. At the present time he is living in retirement in Dane County.

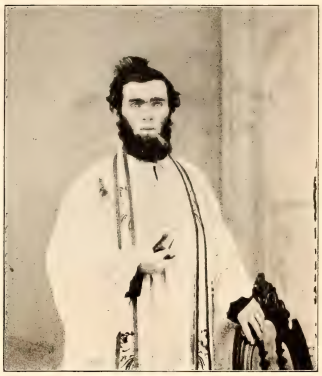
MASCHELEIN, the Rev. A., was born at Kortrijk, in West Flanders, in 1821. Having partly completed his studies in his native country he came to America in 1850, where he worked as printer and photographer. In 1870 he resumed his studies and was ordained to the priesthood in 1872 when fifty-two years of age. He worked in different congregations of the Diocese of Green Bay, his last place being at Askeaton. He died September 27, 1895.

MATTHEW, the Rev. George W., was born in New York city in the year 1833. Later he removed with his parents to Columbiaville, New York, and soon afterwards to Providence, Rhode Island. In the spring of 1847 the family removed to Wisconsin, and settled at

Rev. Samuel Mazzuchelli, O. P.

This portrait was painted in Rome while he was a Novice at the Convent of Santa Sabina, when about 18 or 19 years of age.

Springvale, in Fond du Lac County. After spending several terms at the district school, he for three years attended St. Mary's University at Chicago, after which he entered St. Francis Seminary, at St. Francis, Wisconsin, from which institution he was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Henni in 1859. Following ordination, he was first appointed to the pastorate at Byron, Fond du Lac County, where in addition to his local duties he had charge of twelve missions. In 1863 he was appointed rector of St. Patrick's congregation at Racine, where he labored zealously and successfully for twenty-three years. Under his administration a substantial and commodious brick parsonage was erected at this place, also a school house and society hall. A valuable tract of land was also purchased and all pending church debts liquidated. This energetic and faithful priest died January 27, 1886.



Rev. Daniel M'Ginnity.

M'GINNITY, the Rev. Daniel, was a twin brother of the Rev. E. M. McGinnity of Janesville. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1863, and was subsequently pastor of the congregation at Mazomanie, and later at Waukesha. He died after six years of missionary life, in December, 1869.

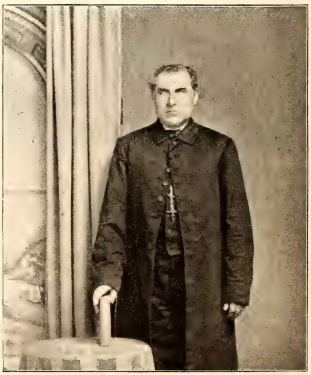
METZGER, the Rev. J., was born in 1804 at Donaueschingen, Grand Dutchy of Baden. Here, also, he received his earlier education, and completed those studies fitting him for the priesthood, to which he was duly ordained. He was then appointed rector of the Catholic congregation at Allensbach, Baden, remaining as such for many years. He then came to the United States, and from 1872 to 1876 was rector of the congregation at Mequon, Ozaukee County. From 1876 to 1878 he was located at Belgium, Wisconsin, but in the latter year was transferred to New Berlin, where he died May 23, 1878, in the seventy-fourth year of his age.

MRAK, D. D., the Rt. Rev. Ignatius, was born at Poelland, in Carniola, a province of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, on the 10th of October, 1810. Having completed his education, he was ordained to the priesthood on August 13, 1837. Having spent eight years in pastoral work in his native country, he came to the United States

Rev. Francis McGann.

Rev. John Mueller.

Rev. Joseph Minderer.



Rev. Ludwig Mueller.

in 1845 and began as an Indian missionary at Arbre Croche, where he was assistant to the Rev. Francis Pierz. On the 10th of July, 1847, Bishop Lefevre confided to the Rev. Father Mrak the missions of La Croix, Middletown, Castor Island and Manistee, which he attended from Arbre Croche. Soon after he took up his residence at St. Anthony's Church at La Croix, from which place he attended the mission of Middletown. In 1853 he was stationed at Eagletown, on Grand Traverse Bay, from which place he attended ten different stations. In 1860 he was made Vicar-General of the Diocese of Sault Ste. Marie. On the death of Bishop Baraga, Father Mrak and his missions returned again to the jurisdiction of the See of Detroit, by which they had been ceded to the late Bishop. The Rev. Father, however, was soon elected to fill the vacant See, and on the 7th of February, 1869, was consecrated Bishop of Marquette in the Cathedral at Cincinnati by Archbishop Purcell, who was assisted by Bishops Lefevre and Henni. He governed the diocese ably for several years, but owing to increasing infirmities he resigned in 1878. In 1881 he was transferred to the See of Antioch i. p. inf. and continues to reside at Marquette acting as chaplain to the Sisters of St. Joseph in their chapel of the Sacred Heart.

Rev. Longinus Neu.

God alone knows the many and untold trials and hardships this humble and self-sacrificing priest and bishop suffered during his earlier career as a missionary among the Indians.

MUELLER, the Rev. John, was ordained January 29, 1868; his last pastorate being at Sinsinawa Mound, where he was located for several years. Immediately prior to assuming that position he was for two years rector of the congregation at Wilson, near Sheboygan. He was also, while at Sinsinawa, chaplain of the Dominican Sisters.

NEU, O. S. B., the Rev. Longinus, was born July 23, 1846, at Bocholt, Westphalia, and came to America December 8, 1860. He was ordained to the priesthood December 20, 1871, after which he was made assistant to the Rev. Father Holzhauer, of St. Joseph's Church, Milwaukee, with whom he remained until August, 1872. He then became professor at Pio Nono College, St. Francis, Wisconsin, staying there until May 15, 1874. Father Neu was then transferred to the Diocese of Alton, as rector of Bunker Hill congregation, remaining as such until August, 1879. His next pastorate was at Franklin. This he left in May, 1881, to return to the teachers' seminary, at St. Francis, of which he was rector until May, 1884. He then became pastor of St. Michael's congregation, Milwaukee, remaining as such until September, 1888. Here he labored with great success as an organizer of the congregation and a parochial school. Subsequently, he joined the Benedictine Order, and is at the present time rector of St. Benedict's Abbey, in Atchison, Kansas.

Rev. John H. Niehaus.

OSCHWALD, the Rev. Ambrosius, was born March 14, 1801, at Mundelfingen, Amt Huefingen, Grand Duchy of Baden. In 1833 he was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Hermann von Vicari. For several years following he worked in his native country with the greatest zeal, his motto being "Everyone should strive to promote the welfare of others." In Munich he studied medicine in order that he might not only minister to the spiritual but also to the temporal wants of those who came under his immediate care and direction. In 1854

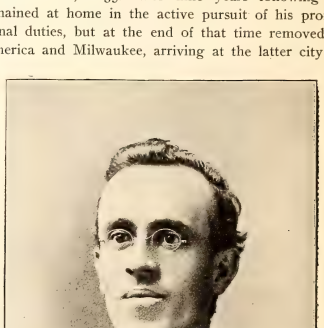
Rev. A. Oschwald.

he came to America with a number of others and bought some land where the present town of St. Nazianz is located. There he erected a Brothers' and Sisters' convent, a hospital and an asylum, besides several other buildings. For nineteen years he worked at this place as rector of the community, seeming only to live for the welfare and progress of his undertaking. He died February 27, 1873, beloved and regretted by all who knew him.

PFALLER, the Rev. F. X., was born November 5, 1831, at Eichstaett, Bavaria. He came to America in 1857 and was ordained to the priesthood on the 25th of August in the same year. For a short time following he was a professor in St. Francis Seminary. Then, for a number of years, he was located in Green Bay, afterwards at Brighton, Fountain City and La Crosse. From 1880 to 1885 he was rector of the congregation at New Muenster, and following that had charge of St. Nicholas' congregation, New Franken, where he established a parochial school and built a parsonage. He died at St. Vincent's Hospital, Green Bay, December 21, 1892.

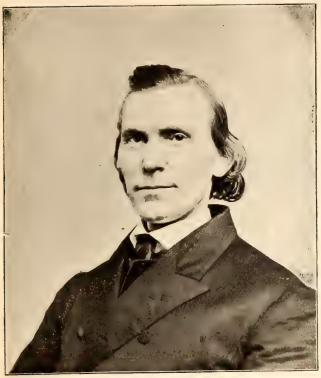
RAPP, the Rev. John Nepomucene (frater Antonius de Padua, tertiarus O. S. F.), private secretary to the Right Rev. Bishop Schwebach, was born in Germany May 9, 1858. His education was acquired at St. Bernard's College, near Bregenz, Austria, and later at St. Willibald's Seminary, in Eichstaett, Bavaria. He came to America in 1882, received minor orders at the hands of the Right Rev. Bishop Flasch, on March 19, and June 24, 1887, and was ordained to the priesthood for the Diocese of La Crosse at the Cathedral Church, on Sunday, June 16, 1895, by the Right Rev. James Schwebach, Bishop of the Diocese. He is now exercising priestly functions under the direction of his Ordinary, who also appointed him as his private secretary.

REHRL, the Rev. Caspar, was born December 31, 1809, at Aigen, Salzburg Diocese, Austria. Having completed the necessary courses for that purpose, he was ordained to the priesthood in his native country on September 20, 1835. For nine years following he remained at home in the active pursuit of his professional duties, but at the end of that time removed to America and Milwaukee, arriving at the latter city on

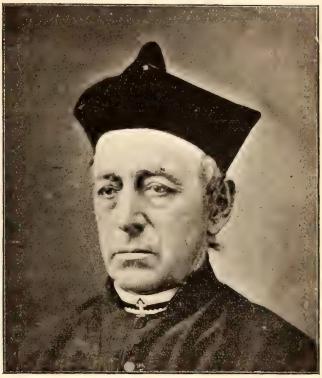


Rev. John Rapp.

January 8, 1845. Here he was regarded as a most welcome addition to the priestly force which at that time was all too limited for the work required of it. His first appointment was to the charge at Barton, after which he was transferred successively to West Bend, Fond du Lac, Sheboygan and latterly to Green Bay. The name of this worthy and zealous priest is in fact associated with nearly all of the first Catholic congregations in Wisconsin. Towards the end of his career, and after, in fact, he had

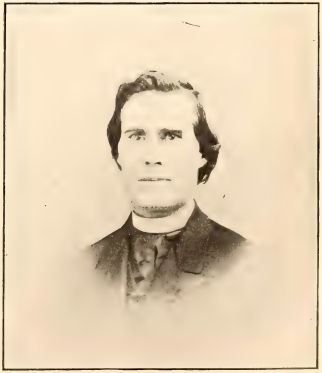


Rev. John D. Norris.



Rev. F. X. Obermueller.

Rev. J. M. Obermueller.



Rev. A. Petit.

retired from active service, he removed to Barton, where he had already erected a convent, and there he died September 3, 1881. Father Rehrl is particularly remembered for his marked success in the erection of a large number of churches and schools throughout the State.

REHRL, the Rev. George, a saintly old pioneer and brother of Caspar Rehrl, was professor at the Seminary of St. Francis at the time of its first opening. He died at Elm Grove.

Rev. P. F. Pettit.

REINDL, the Rev. John B., was born February 14, 1827, at Hohenkemmat, Bavaria. He acquired his education in the university at Amberg, after which he came to this country (1851), finishing his theological studies at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee. He was ordained to the priesthood December 8, 1860, and received his first appointment as rector of the Catholic congregation at West Bend, Wisconsin, where he built a handsome and substantial church. In 1871 he removed to Oshkosh as rector of St. Vincent de Paul's congregation, and there, during the first year of his residence, completed the church and parsonage in that parish. At the same place he, in 1874, built a new school house 80x40 feet, four stories high, for which $18,000 was paid and in 1883 bought with his own personal means two bells and a high altar for the church. He celebrated his silver jubilee December 10, 1885. Father Reindl will also long be remembered as the founder of St. Vincent's Benevolent Society. In 1886 he began to show the effects of encroaching disease, but still kept manfully at his post, for, in spite of increasing ailments, we find him in 1889 building a school hall 32x90 feet, at a cost of $1,000. Finally, however, though still at his post, he succumbed, dying December 13, 1891, after an effective and zealous pastorate of twenty years.

REINHART, the Rev. Henry, was born in Altheim, Rhenish Bavaria, June 18, 1853; ordained at the Salesianum, St. Francis, Wisconsin, November 5, 1865, subsequently having charge of the following missions: Eau Claire, from December, 1865, to August, 1867; Caledonia, from August, 1867, to March, 1869; Brighton, from March, 1869, to August, 1870; procurator of St. Francis Seminary, August, 1870, to September, 1874; Madison, September, 1874, to March, 1877; Jefferson, March, 1877, to August, 1881; again procurator of St. Francis Seminary from August, 1881, to May, 1893, with an intermission of one year, from 1866 to 1867, which was spent in La Crosse, Wisconsin, to recruit his shattered health. In May, 1893, he retired to St. Francis Hospital at La Crosse, Wisconsin, where he has since acted as chaplain.

Rev. Father Phillips.

ROETTGER, the Rev. Anton, was born March 15, 1850, at Velen, Diocese of Muenster, Germany. Having studied philosophy and theology at the Borromaeum in Muenster, he came to America in 1873, where, after having completed his theological studies, he was ordained to the priesthood at Mt. St. Mary's Seminary in Cincinnati. For two years he was professor of philosophy at Ruma, after which he held a similar position

Rev. F. X. Pfaller.

Rev. John B. Reindl.

Rev. V. Rademacher.

Rev. Anton Roettger.

in the Seminary at St. Francis. He died July 14, 1878, at Highland, Illinois.

SAILER, the Rev. F. X., was born at Pradl, a suburb of Innsbruck, Germany, in 1824. Having acquired a rudimentary education, he joined the Praemonstratensian Order at Wilten, where, after completing the necessary courses, he was ordained to the priesthood June 29, 1848. Four years later he removed to the United States, arriving in this country July 4, 1852, when he immediately came west to Wisconsin. After remaining a short time as the guest of Father Inama at Roxbury, he was appointed rector of St. Mary's congregation at Port Washington, assuming the duties of that office October 9, 1853. In September, 1856, he took charge of St. Mary's congregation at Racine, remaining as pastor of the same until 1861. In 1863 he returned to Port Washington, where he remained until 1867. During this period he built a school house, besides making numerous other improvements to the church property. He was then appointed to the pastorate of St. Aloysius congregation at Sauk City, where he stayed until 1872.

Rev. F. X. Sailer.

From 1872 to 1877 he was rector of St. John's congregation at Highland, and on August 24 of the latter year was transferred to Belgium, where he died on October 11th following. His last resting-place is in the vault under the cemetery chapel at Port Washington, where he lies side by side with his former friend and co-laborer, the Rev. Fabian Bermadinger.

SCHALLER, the Rev. Ignatius, was born March 8, 1844, at Ammertzwister, Diocese of Strassburg, Germany. He came to America April 20, 1871, and was ordained to the priesthood on the 16th of July following. He served as rector of the Catholic congregation at

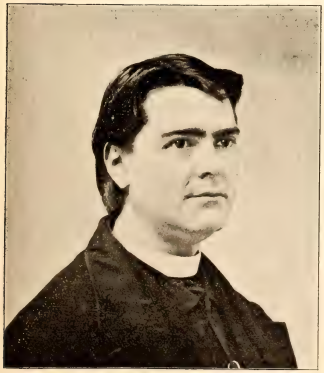
Rev. Ignatius Schaller.

Marshfield, Wisconsin, for a number of years, and was located at Fifield, Wisconsin, from March, 1891, to July, 1892, and at Plain, Sauk County, from March, 1893, to October, 1895. He died at Marshfield, Wisconsin, January 20, 1896.

SCHOEBERLE, the Rev. John J., was born in Watertown, Wisconsin, June 24, 1857. He attended St. Henry's parochial school in his native city and at the same time received a preparatory education in Latin at the hands of his pastor, Father F. Minderer. In 1873 his family removed to Milwaukee, where, by the kind advice of Dr. Salzmann, he entered the Salesianum at the age of 15. After the completion of a course of nine years at this institution he was finally ordained to the priesthood on June 26, 1881. His first appointment after ordination was to the pastorate at Granville Center, Wisconsin, over which he presided for two years. Then, in turn, he administered to the parishes at Muscoda, Boscobel, Avoca, and Union Mills, in all of which he did faithful and satisfactory services. In 1886 he was appointed dean by Archbishop Heiss. Some time prior to his death he was compelled to refrain from all ministerial duties owing to the peculiar character of the disease from which he suffered, an affection of the throat.

Rev. John J. Schoeberle.

Rev. F. Simonik.



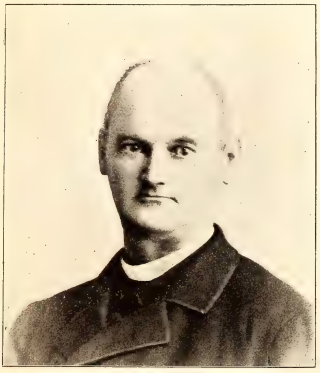
Rev. R. J. Scott.

Rev. Joseph Smith.

His death finally occurred at Muscoda, Wisconsin, March 6, 1892.

SEIBOLD, the Rev. Father, at different periods during his priestly career had charge of the parishes of St. Wendel, Manitowoc County; St. George's, at Wilson, Sheboygan County, and St. Apostles congregation, at New Berlin. From the last named place he removed to Racine in March, 1870, where he went into retirement, his death occurring April 23, 1884.

SMEDDING, the Rev. Benedict, was born at Muenster, Westphalia, in 1820. He acquired his education in the schools and colleges of his native country, where, also, he was ordained to the priesthood. In 1854 he came to the United States and Milwaukee, being soon after transferred from the latter place to the charge of an Indian mission at Chippewa Falls. Subsequently, he became rector of the Catholic congregations at Sun Prairie and Paris, Kenosha County, dying at the latter place after eighteen months' service in September, 1881.



Rev. Francis Spath.

SPATH, the Rev. Francis, was born at Hilzendorf, Steyermark, Austria, March 30, 1836. He was ordained to the priesthood in his native place April 22, 1865, and died in Schleisingerville, Wisconsin, five months after celebrating the 25th anniversary of ordination to the priesthood, September 17, 1890. At one time Father Spath was rector of the congregation at Ashford, Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, and was also associated as pastor with that of St. Henry's Church at Watertown.

STERN, the Rev. Ferdinand, was born at Fallhofen, Steyermark, Austria, May 15, 1841. Having acquired the necessary education, he was ordained to the priesthood November 5, 1865. After coming to America, he was pastor of St. Joseph's congregation at Appleton, where he built the present church. Later, he was transferred to the congregation of St. Edward at Center, Outagamie County, and it was during his residence there that he died, August 1, 1889.

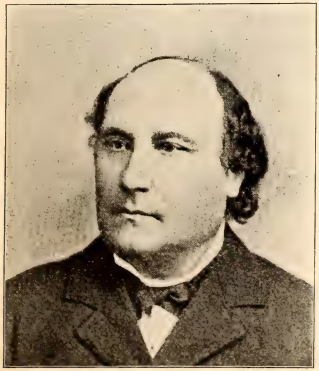
Rev. Father Stehle.

STRICKNER, the Rev. George, was born December 6, 1833, at Stadtkemnath, Diocese of Regensburg. He came to the United States in 1856 and completed his theological studies at the Salesianum at St. Francis, Wisconsin, where he was ordained priest December 16, 1859. Among the many places in which he was stationed during his pastoral career were Watertown; Fredonia, from 1865 to 1866; Grafton, October 3, 1866, to January 7, 1868; Germantown, Theresa, Newburg; St. Mary's congregation at Racine, August, 1873, to 1877; St. Luke's congregation at Plain, and New Cassel. He retired from active service in 1897.

SUCHY, O. S. F., the Rev. P. Leo, was born at Horsin Tyn, Bohemia, July 20, 1841. He acquired his education for the priesthood in the university of Prague, and was ordained in 1867. He then joined the Franciscan Order, and was professor of German in Prague for one year, subsequent to which he spent a considerable period in missionary work throughout Moravia. Father Suchy came to America in 1873, where he immediately began to labor among the Bohemian congregations in the Diocese of La Crosse. While engaged in this work,

Rev. Ferdinand Stern.

Rev. Leo Suchy.



Rev. George Stickner.

Rev. Anton Urbanek.

he was entrusted with the organization of St. Wenceslaus' congregation at La Crosse, over which he maintaind spiritual direction until 1875. He then associated himself with the Archdiocese of Milwaukee, where he was appointed director of St. John Nepomucene's congregation at Milwaukee, of which he remained in charge until 1883. During this pastorate he was successful in making numerous improvements to the church property, among other things building the present excellent school house. In 1883 he was commissioned by Archbishop Heiss to organize the Bohemian congregation of St. Wenceslaus on the south side of the city, where he erected a church, school and parsonage. He also performed the duties as chaplain of the Central Society of the Bohemian Fraternities in America for a number of years. During the latter portion of his life he made an extended trip to Carlsbad in hopes of regaining his health, which was then in a badly shattered condition. The effort, however, proved futile, for soon after his return, although apparently much improved, he quickly failed, dying October 20, 1894.

TAKKEN, the Rev. W., was born at Grabbenvorst, Province of Limburg, Holland, in 1838. In 1864 he came to the United States, where he was soon after assigned to the Diocese of Green Bay. In 1875 he was appointed rector of the French congregation at Green Bay, and afterwards of St. Mary's congregation at De Pere, Wisconsin. Subsequently he was for a time at Hollandtown and Bay Settlement. In 1886 Father Takken took charge of St. John's congregation at Antigo, the congregation showing an appreciable improvement under his spiritual direction. Here he completed and furnished the church, which had long been under way, besides building an excellent and commodious parsonage. In 1890, also, he erected a parochial school in connection with this parish. Father Takken died May 5, 1893, after a brief illness.

URBANEK, the Rev. Anton, was another of the coterie of zealous and active priests who came to America at an early day and became intimately associated with the early spread of Catholicity throughout the West. Soon after his arrival at Milwaukee, he was appointed assistant to the Rev. Michael Heiss, at that time rector of St. Mary's congregation at Milwaukee. Somewhat later he became spiritual director of the Sisters of Notre Dame. Father Urbanek was a very pious and learned priest; he was especially well versed in music, and will long be remembered as the composer of many beautiful church songs. Father Urbanek met with a sad and untimely fate while returning from a visit to New Orleans. On the way up the steamer upon which he was traveling exploded, as a result of which a large number of those on board, including the reverend priest, found a watery grave. Mother Caroline, who was also upon the boat at this time, was fortunate enough to escape, being assisted to a place of safety by a negro who had come promptly to her aid.

VAHEY, the Rev. J., was born in County Mayo, Ireland, in the year 1830. Having completed his classical course at the age of eighteen, he came to America, where he at once entered the theological seminary at Carondelet, Missouri. Completing the necessary courses, he was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Loras in 1854. During his priestly career Father Vahey was the direct means of building nineteen churches, in addition to which he also found time to furnish material for six publications, having more or less bearing upon theological matters. He was also for a period professor of philosophy, scripture, and physical science in four different institutions in this country, and was besides chaplain during the Civil War. Owing to the feeble condition of his health, Father Vahey is at the present time living in retirement.

Rev. J. W. Vahey.

VERTIN, the Rt. Rev. John, Bishop of Marquette and Sault Ste. Marie, was born July 17, 1844, at Rudolfswerth, Carniola, Austria. He acquired his classical studies in the institutions of his native country, and came to the United States July 7, 1863, when he was twenty-eight years of age. Here he was placed under the care of the great missionary Baraga, who received him into his diocese and sent him to the Salesianum at St. Francis, near Milwaukee, Wisconsin, to complete his theological Rev. W. Verbart.

Rev. J. Videnka.

Rev. H. Victor.

Rev. Peter J. Voissem.

studies. Archbishop John Martin Henni conferred minor orders upon him in 1865, and on the 31st of August, 1866, he was ordained priest by Bishop Baraga in Marquette, being the first ordained in that place, and the last one on whom that eminent ecclesiastic conferred Holy Orders. The young priest was first placed in charge of the mission at Houghton, where he remained five years. He then labored for seven years among the Catholics at Negaunee. On the resignation of Bishop Mrak, the Rt. Rev. Dr. John Vertin was recommended to the Pope as successor; his recommendation was accepted, and the Rev. Vertin, D. D., was consecrated by Archbishop Michael Heiss, assisted by Bishops Borgess and Spalding, on the 14th of September, 1879, his parents, who had settled at Hancock, living to witness the ceremony. The Diocese of Marquette has greatly prospered under his spiritual direction, there being within its limits at the present time fifty-eight priests, fifty-six churches, twenty parochial schools, and 5,440 school children.

VIDENKA, the Rev. J. N., was born December 26, 1845, at Bruenn, Moravia, Austria, and came to America in 1868. Here he completed his theological studies at St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, where he was ordained to the priesthood December 17, 1870. He then entered upon extended missionary labors among his countrymen in the Diocese of Pittsburg, but afterwards removed to Green Bay Diocese, where he was rector successively of numerous congregations. He then joined the Diocese of Baltimore, but subsequently returned to Green Bay, where he labored assiduously until the time of his death, which occurred while pastor at Reedsville, on May 29, 1885.

VOGG, the Rev. Philipp, was born October 22, 1827, at Oberwaldbach, Diocese of Augsburg, Bavaria. He came to America in 1858, and was ordained to the priesthood in 1860 at Leavenworth, Kansas. For fifteen years he attended congregations in Kansas and Missouri, after which he came to Wisconsin and joined the Diocese of Milwaukee. For several years he was assistant to the Rev. Father Holzhauer of St. Joseph's congregation at Milwaukee. He was also for a short time rector of the congregation at Dotyville, and from May 10, 1887, to July 5, 1895, was pastor of St. Joseph's congregation at Grafton. He died October 3, 1895, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Milwaukee, and was buried at Calvary Cemetery.

VOISSEM, the Rev. Peter Joseph, was born at Muenstereifel, Rhenish Prussia, April 14, 1835. He came to America in 1851, and completed his studies at the Salesianum at St. Francis, where he was ordained in 1859. Among the different parishes of which he had charge were Elk Grove (Seymour), Lafayette County, where he erected St. Peter's Church, Sauk City, of which congregation he took charge in 1861; and Saukville, where during his pastorate, 1867-72, he established a parochial school, besides making numerous other improvements to the church property. Afterwards he took charge of the congregation at Paris, Kenosha County. He died July 14, 1874, after fifteen years of missionary labor.

WAPELHORST, O. F. M., the Rev. Innocent, was born on the 13th of March, 1833, at Rietberg, Westphalia, Germany. For a number of years he studied in the schools at Muenster, coming afterwards to St. Louis, Missouri, in 1855. Then, having completed his theological course in the diocesan seminary, he located at Carondelet, where he was ordained priest on the 28th of June, 1856. For a short time following ordination he was stationed at Duzow, Missouri, and afterwards at St. Mary's Church, St. Louis. In 1857 he was sent to St. Charles, Missouri, where he labored zealously for seven years, at the end of which time he accepted a professorship at the Seminary of St. Francis, Wisconsin. After a brief period of labor there, he returned to St. Louis and became chancellor of the archdiocese. Upon the death of D. Salzmann (January 17, 1874), Father Wapelhorst became rector of the Salesianum, which position he continued to hold until 1879, when he resigned and entered the Order of St. Francis. From 1880 he labored at St. Louis, Mo., as a professor of theology as well as pastor of St. Anthony's Church, continuing to perform these several duties until his death, which occurred January 31, 1890. Father Wapelhorst was the author of a very learned and practical work on liturgy which is used in many of our theological seminaries to-day.

Rev. Innocent Wapelhorst.

WEINHART, the Rev. F. X., was born November 26, 1828, at Halle, near Innsbruck, Germany, where he also acquired a portion of his education at the Franciscan Gymnasium. At the urgent and repeated solicitations of the Rev. Father Sailer, Father Weinhart came to America in July, 1852, where he continued his studies under the personal direction of Father Inama at Roxbury. Later he, together with Hieronymus Bergmann and Joseph Minderer, entered the Brother-house at Nojoshing (St. Francis), where he was ordained priest by Bishop Henni on June 2, 1855. Following ordination, he was first appointed to the pastorate of Franklin, Wisconsin, where he began the erection of a church. Afterwards he, in 1858, was transferred to the parish at Greenfield, where he built the Holy Sacrament Church. In 1859 he became rector of St. Bernard's congregation at Green Bay, and from 1860 to 1864 had charge of St. Aloysius congregation at Sauk City, where he also organized the stations of St. Lucas and St. Patrick. In addition to these duties he, besides, attended the congregation at Muscoda. In 1864 Father Weinhart was appointed rector of the Catholic congregation at Highland, and from 1865 to 1870 was pastor of St. John Nepomucene's congregation. From 1870 to 1878 he had charge of St. Mary's congregation at Mineral Point. During the latter year he visited his native country, where he remained until 1880. Upon his return to America he was placed in charge of the Catholic congregations at Muscoda and Dotyville, remaining with them until 1885, when he again assumed the administration of St. Mary's at Mineral Point. Here he stayed until the time of his death, which occurred March 3, 1890.

Rev. F. X. Weinhart.

WEISS, the Rev. Sebastian, was born February 11, 1849, at Schamhaupten, Bavaria. Having completed his studies at the Salesianum at St. Francis, he was ordained to the priesthood June 24, 1879. After ordination, he became assistant to the Rev. Father Michels in New Cassel, and after the sudden death of the Rev. Father

Rev. Sebastian Weiss.

Mueller he was for some time temporary rector of Holy Cross congregation, Ozaukee County, Wisconsin. He was also stationed at Kohler and New Coeln. He died at the latter place in 1882, having just completed his third year in the priesthood. His brother, the Rev. George Weiss, is at present spiritual director of the Sisters of St. Francis.

WEISS, the Rev. Martin, who is undoubtedly still well remembered by many of the Catholics of Wisconsin, as the former highly respected and most sincerely regretted pastor of St. Lawrence Catholic congregation at St. Lawrence, Washington County, was born at Killingen, near Ellwangen in Wuerttemberg, Germany, on the 29th of August, 1824. He acquired his earlier studies at Ellwangen, Wuerttemberg, and at Freising, Bavaria. Later he attended the University of Munich, where, while following a course in theology, he, perchance, met Father Heiss, the late Archbishop of Milwaukee, then pastor of St. Mary's and the prospective rector of the Seminary, which at the time was about to be erected. Having received minor orders, he came to America, forthwith coming to Milwaukee, where he was welcomed by Bishop Henni and ordained to the priesthood on the 21st of September, 1851.

This zealous and intellectually well-equipped young priest proved to be a splendid accession to the clergy of the newly established diocese of Milwaukee. He labored successively at Wheatland, Wisconsin, where he remained three years; at Fussville, Wisconsin, for ten years; about one year at Centerville, Wisconsin, and for over sixteen years at St. Lawrence, Wisconsin. While having charge of the congregations in the above places, he also administered to the spiritual wants of many missions which long since have become independent parishes.

It was particularly at Fussville, Wisconsin, and at St. Lawrence, Washington County, that he accomplished remarkable success as a pastor of souls. In 1865 he took charge of St. Lawrence. At the latter place, which then was a numerous country parish, the mother of many surrounding missions, he, like his immediate predecessor, Father Deisenrieder, had to contend with many peculiar difficulties, such as only old settlers of our early little country towns can tell of and properly appreciate. From what to a stranger must have appeared a crude and heterogeneous population that had here settled from nearly all parts of Germany and Austria, the first pastors of St. Lawrence, and especially Father Martin Weiss, succeeded in forming an excellent community and parish, which was long after regarded as a model congregation. Father Weiss erected there the beautiful Gothic church and a very handsome rectory. But his real work was more felt than seen. He was pre-eminently a pastor of souls, taking care of the minute details of his cura animarum, in church and school and in the homes of his people. A man of stately form and winning manners, he easily made religion and piety attractive. Simple and playful as a child he was of stern and ascetic character, and his piercing eyes and sonorous sympathetic voice would easily, when occasion demanded, awaken at his command sentiments of love and fear alike. To his flock, especially to the children of his school, he was always a loving spiritual guide; and far and wide he was the revered friend and counsellor of his fellow priests, most of whom are now also among the dead. Thus it was that especially through Father Weiss St. Lawrence became a center of Catholic life which is even to-day evidenced by the abiding faith of Washington County people, who still worship at the endeared St. Lawrence Church, or who now, in new homes far away from that historic place, as useful citizens and good Catholics, cheerfully support the faith they learned to love in their old home.

For sixteen years he had unceasingly labored in St. Lawrence, when, in the year 1881, a stroke of paralysis compelled him to seek for a change of climate and occupation. He had not quite finished the new church that now adorns St. Lawrence hill and village when he left for Europe in quest of rest and health. He was no more to return to his endeared flock; a second and third stroke of paralysis ended his useful life at the home of his brother, where, too, he himself had once spent his boyhood days. He died and was buried at Killingen, Wuerttemberg, on November 13, 1881.

Rev. Martin Weiss.

Not the least of Father Weiss' blessings to his various congregations seems to have been his success in awakening in noble-minded and talented boys of his schools a vocation to the holy priesthood. A number of worthy priests point to him as the spiritual Father whose piety and noble character were to them the fruitful seed of a priestly vocation. Among these may be mentioned Father J. A. Birkhaeuser, the Rev. Anton Foeckler (deceased), the Rev. Nic. Schaaf, the Rev. John Hennes, the Rev. Nic. Zimmer, who were his pupils at Fussville, Wis., the Rev. Joseph S. LaBoule, the Rev. Anthony Mueller, the Rev. Wendelin Heder and the Rev. Wm. Wolff, who all were born and raised in St. Lawrence, Wis., where, too, in their turn, they celebrated their first Masses. With sincere gratitude, these, his spiritual sons, unite in prayer with the faithful of his former flocks that God may grant an eternal reward to this true man and faithful priest.

WENNING, the Rev. John Bernard,, was born December 9, 1840, at Darfeld, in the Diocese of Muen-

Rev. John Bernard Wenning.

ster, Westphalia. He came to America in 1870, and having completed his theological studies at St. Francis Seminary, was ordained to the priesthood from that institution in 1871. He was then placed in charge of the pastorate at Cooperstown, Green Bay Diocese, from which place he was transferred to Fussville, and subsequently Paris in Milwaukee Diocese. Later he joined the Diocese of Peoria, Illinois, and became rector at Troy Grove, near Mendota. From 1876 to 1877 he was rector at New Berlin, and at a later date he joined the Diocese of St. Paul, but finally returned, entering the Franciscan Hospital at Peoria, Illinois, where he died May 26, 1887.

WHITE, the Rev. Matthew, was born May 13, 1843. He, with his parents, emigrated from Vermont to Wisconsin when he was but a child, and settled at Sandusky, Sauk County. When a young man, he entered the State University at Madison and graduated therefrom in the early '60's. He also graduated at Milton College. From thence he entered the law office of Buttrell and Cottrill, Milwaukee, and was admitted to the bar, practicing with flattering success for some years. He felt, however, the divine call and quitted all the bright prospects of the law to give himself to the ministry. He entered St. Francis Seminary, and was ordained therefrom December 18, 1870. He was assigned at once to the charge of Mauston, having as out-missions Necedah, Lyndina, Union Center and Elroy; in fact, forty square miles of territory, laboring so hard that he lived but seven years in his chosen work, dying October 16, 1877. He was a brother of the Rev. William White, rector of St. Mary's Church, La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Rev. Matthew White.

Rev. Father Welter.

WILLARD, the Rev. George L., was born in western New York in 1836. Nine years later he removed with his parents to Wisconsin, settling in Fond du Lac County. Here he attended the high school at Fond du Lac, after which he was for one year a student at Sinsinawa College in Grant County. He then entered St. Francis Seminary, where he was ordained to the priesthood September 3, 1863. For one year following ordination, he was a professor in the Salesianum, afterwards becoming rector of the Catholic congregation at East Troy, Walworth County, where he remained for two years. He then became first resident priest at Waupun, remaining in charge of that parish for three years, and was for one year rector of St. Vincent's congregation at Oshkosh. In the fall of 1870 he was entrusted with the organization of St. Joseph's congregation at Fond du

Rev. George L. Willard.

Lac, remaining as pastor of the same for nine years. Then, for a year and nine months, he was rector of St. Patrick's congregation in Milwaukee, and in 1878 was editor and proprietor of the Catholic Citizen, published in that city, devoting much time during the same period to the organization of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Wisconsin. Later he was appointed vicar-general of the Diocese of Sioux Falls by Bishop Marty, and still later, under appointment from President Cleveland, was a member of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and resided at Washington. He died at Banning, California, July 26, 1890, while superintending the erection of an Indian school at that place.

WILMS, the Rev. F. X., was ordained to the priesthood December 21, 1885. After coming to the United States, he was associated with the Diocese of La Crosse, being for some time resident pastor at the Cathedral. Afterwards he organized the congregation of St. John's

Rev. Michael Wisbauer.

at La Crosse of which he became first resident pastor, remaining as such till 1890. He was next placed in charge of St. Boniface congregation at Waumandee, and afterwards at Prairie du Chien. He then, owing to continued ill-health, returned to his native country, dying at Gailenkirchen, near Aachen, May 18, 1895.

Rev. Simon G. Woelfl.

WISBAUER, the Rev. Michael, the first resident pastor of Burlington, Wisconsin, was born in Upper Austria, March 27, 1810. He was ordained to the priesthood July 15, 1834, in the Diocese of Linz, where, for thirteen years, he worked with praiseworthy zeal for the salvation of souls. In 1847 he left his native country and embarked for America, accompanying the Rev. Dr. Salzmann upon his return from a visit to Europe. Arriving here, he at once became associated with the Diocese of Milwaukee and was sent by Bishop Henni to Burlington to assume charge of the Catholic congregation there. Here he remained to the end of his life, a period of over forty-two years. This worthy priest was unexcelled as a modest and untiring pastor. It was in July, 1884, that he celebrated his golden jubilee as priest amidst the festive rejoicings of his people and a great number of prelates and confères. He died December 20, 1889, after a short illness.

Rev. John Zawistowsky.

WOELFL, the Rev. Simon G., was born March 2, 1846, in Waukesha County, Wisconsin. He was educated in Milwaukee and entered the Seminary at St. Francis in 1859, from which institution he was ordained to the priesthood in 1868, after which he became assistant to the Rev. L. Conrad of Holy Trinity Church, Milwaukee. Later he was pastor successively of the parishes at Caledonia, Grafton, Theresa and Mayville, building a nice church at the latter place. Subsequently he had charge of congregations at Farmersville, and lastly at East Bristol, where he died September 5, 1895.

ZARDETTI, the Most Rev. Otto, was born January, 1847, at Rohrschach, Canton St. Gall, Switzerland. Having received an elementary education in the Jesuit College of his native place, he continued his studies at Feldkirch, where his brilliancy attracted much attention. In the fall of 1863 he entered St. George's Seminary to study rhetoric, and concluded his philosophical and theological studies at the university of Innsbruck, from which institution he was ordained on August 20, 1870. On December 21 of the same year he received the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology, and in January, 1871, assumed a professorship in the Seminary of St. George. Soon after, he was appointed Honorary Canon of the Abbey of St. Maurice in Wallis, The winter of 1874-'75 he spent in England for the purpose of studying the English language. In February, 1876, Bishop Greith appointed Dr. Zardetti a canon of the Cathedral of St. Gall, in which capacity the duty of preaching devolved upon him. In August, 1881, he came to the United States and assumed the chair of Dogmatic Theology in St. Francis Seminary, near Milwaukee, which position he held till 1887. Then, at the request of his old friend and countryman, the Rt. Rev. Martin Marty, Vicar-Apostolic of Dakota, he became Vicar-General of the diocese, and while in that office wrote his first English book, entitled "Devotion to the Holy Ghost," a work which merited for him the warmest congratulations of the late Cardinal Manning. The Vicarate of Northern Minnesota being made a diocese in 1889, Dr. Zardetti was chosen its first bishop, to which appointment he was consecrated in October, 1889, by the Most Rev. Archbishop Gross of Oregon City. In 1894 he was raised to the dignity of Archbishop of Bucharest, Roumania, but resigned after a short period. At present he resides at Rome, Italy, where he holds high positions of trust at the hands of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII.

Rev. John Zirbes.

ZAWISTOWSKY, the Rev. John, was born in Polen in the year 1822. Nineteen years later he removed to Bavaria, acquiring a considerable portion of his education in the schools at Wuerzburg. He then entered the Carmelite Order, by whom he was sent to India, where he worked for many years as a missionary. Finally, unable longer to stand the climate, he returned to Europe, from whence, having remained for a brief period, he departed for America. From 1885 to 1889 Father Zawistowsky was rector of St. John's congregation at Highland, where he died on May 14 of the latter year.

ZIRBES, the Rev. John, was born at Racine, and was at one time rector of St. Mary's of the Lake, at Belgium, Wisconsin.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART XIII.

Catholic Orders in Wisconsin—Religious.

CHAPTER I.

Capuchin Order.

THE Capuchin Friars are a branch of the Franciscan Order, their rule in all essentials being the same as that of other Friar Minorites. It was during the first year of the thirteenth century that the Order of St. Francis was established, but it was over two hundred years from that time that the bull of Clement VII. erected into a separate Order the followers or disciples of a certain Minorite Friar, whose belief was that he had become inspired to reform some of the practices of his Order. This man, a Franciscan of the March of Ancona, was one Mathew da Bassi. Legend has it, that, having observed the painting of St. Francis representing him with the hood of the habit of a different shape from that usually worn by the Order, he made one like it and wore it about the year 1525. This being deemed an unwarranted innovation, it was condemned by his superiors. He, therefore, had recourse to Pope Clement VII., who not only gave him permission to wear the hood, but also permitted those who wished to imitate him to form a congregation. Three years later Pope Clement gave them further permission to wear the habit and also a beard. The rules of this Order are very strict, obliging the members to recite the canonical hours without singing, and to say the matins at midnight; an hour is to be spent every morning and evening, also, in mental prayer and in silence. Their food is of the very simplest, one kind of meat only being allowed, and on fast days they are restricted to a kind of cheese called cotta. Members of this Order are not allowed to wear any covering for their head, their habit is of the coarsest description, and no ornaments whatsoever of gold or silver are allowed in their churches. In 1624 Pope Urban VIII. caused a new church to be built for them at Rome, and in 1631 the Capuchins took possession of it. Among other relics in this church, is a famous painting of St. Michael the Archangel, by Guido.

Another writer says of this Order that the adoption of the hood brought down much blame and some persecution on the part of his Superior, but, as usual in similar cases, that did not prevent others from following his example. Notable among these, were two brothers, Ludovico and Raffaelle, of Fossombrone, the first a priest and the second a lay brother of the Franciscan Order, who joined themselves to Mathew, and underwent punishment from their superiors for so doing. These two, under the patronage of the Duchess of Cibo, a connection of Pope Clement VII., obtained from His Holiness the bowl known as Religionis Zelus, by which they were permitted to impart the hooded habit to any who as disciples wished to join them. These were known among themselves as the Hermit Friar's Minor, but the populace gave them the name of Cappuccio, which in Italian means a hood, and Cappuccino, which means a little hooded fellow. The first congregation of this Order took possession of an abandoned convent at Colmenzone, near to Camerino, which was given to them by their patroness, the Duchess Cibo. The membership of the Order rapidly increased, so that in a short time three other convents were built, Mathew da Bassi becoming the Superior of the first, and later Vicar-General of the Order. In 1538 the celebrated Bernardino Ochino of Siena was elected Vicar-General and again succeeding himself in 1541. Shortly after his second election, he fell into heresy, and took refuge in Switzerland, and thus the Society to which he had belonged fell under great suspicion of heterodoxy. The leading members of the congregation were ordered to appear before Paul III., to give an account of their opinions. In the mean time, Capuchins were forbidden to preach, and would undoubtedly have been abolished but for the ardent support of the Neapolitan Cardinal, Antonio Sanseverino. The privileges of the Order were restored in 1545, after which the congregation rapidly increased throughout Italy. The edict of Paul III. forbidding them to extend themselves beyond the Alps was revoked by Gregory XIII. granting to them permission to establish convents in any part of the world. Gregory XIV. forbade the Capuchins to hear confessions or grant absolution, but these functions were restored to them by Clement VIII. In 1619 the rank and status of a distinct order entitled Minister General to their Vicar, was granted to the congregation by Paul V. At this time the Order of Capuchins numbered some fifteen thousand members. The Capuchins may be regarded as a distinct missionary Order, having gained a world-wide reputation as converters of heretics and infidels. In 1641 they founded a college in Rome for the express education of their members for missionary work. In less than two years after the foundation of this institution, thirty-six Italian Capuchins were sent to Hindoostan and Brazil, and eighty Spaniards to Venezuela.

Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary.

IN the northwest corner of State and Twelfth streets, in the residence which was once occupied by General Hobart, a new community has established itself, the Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary, being a branch of the great tree of the Dominican Order. The Mother Superior came to Milwaukee with five other nuns, under the patronage of the Most Rev. Archbishop Katzer, on the 2d of September, 1897, it being the first exclusively contemplative Order to locate in the State of Wisconsin. This branch of the Order was founded by the Rev. D. M. Saintourens, a French Dominican of the Province of Paris, in the year 1880. This branch, although recently founded, has already established five houses, one in France, two in Belgium and two in America, and it was largely owing to his zeal and labor that the community in Milwaukee was founded. The functions of this Order are dissimilar to those observed by other religious communities, for the Sisters neither apply their services to the instruction of youth nor care of the ailing, their entire lives being spent in devotion at the altar, where they are continually pleading for the spiritual and temporal welfare of their less fortunate fellow-creatures. They pray, then, for those who do not pray, or at least do not pray well; they also pray for the recovery of the sick, for the conversion of sinners, for souls in purgatory, for all those who suffer and mourn, that families may live in peace, that missionary labors may be rewarded, and that those who devote themselves to the work of education, as pastors or teachers, may be successful in their undertakings. Such communities as these are supported by manual labor, charity, and the doweries of the Sisters.

Of the condition and surroundings of the Milwaukee Community, a recent article in "The Milwaukee Sentinel" says: "The six Sisters who came to found this little monastery brought with them only their clothes; the house, when they entered it, was literally only four walls and a roof. The revenue of the Sisters values only three hundred dollars yearly, and they, therefore, depend principally for their support on their handwork and alms. Of course all the work of the household is done by the Sisters, and they are, besides, anxious to obtain orders for needle-work of all kinds. Entering the hall, one is impressed with the austerity that surrounds the nuns. The floor is bare, and only the absolute necessities of life are provided for. The large room to the left of the hall is now the chapel, where there is a wooden altar, upon which a statue of the Blessed Virgin has been erected. Upon the base of the altar is painted: 'Queen of the Most Holy Rosary, pray for us.' Here, too, the floor is bare, and the prayer stools, upon one of which day and night a praying nun is kneeling, are of plain, unpainted pine.

"Behind the chapel is the refectory. Two long, narrow tables made of pine boards, nailed to a rude frame, and six wooden chairs, form the furnishing of the room. There perpetual silence reigns, for not a word of conversation is permitted. Usually one of the Sisters reads aloud from some religious work during the meal. An open cupboard affords a glimpse of a few cups and plates, and one could judge from the scantiness of utensils that the delights of the table have but a small part in the daily lives of the Sisters. Across the hall from the chapel is the parlor where visitors are received. Here one finds another bare floor, and the chairs are of the wooden kind commonly known as kitchen chairs. The only other furnishings in the room are a plain table, a chest of drawers, a few sacred pictures on the walls, and plain muslin curtains on the windows. Behind the parlor is the kitchen. On the second floor the room above the kitchen is used as the 'Cummunity Room.' In this room there is only a large table upon which the work is cut out, a wardrobe and a chest. The room above the chapel is the library, and the large square hall and remaining rooms on this floor form the dormitory. Here, also, perpetual silence reigns, only broken by the morning and evening hymns, chanted before the statue of the Blessed Virgin in the hall. The cells of the Sisters contain each a narrow cot, formed of pine boards nailed to a frame, upon which rests an Excelsior mattress; a plain table, chair and crucifix are the only ornaments of these cells. In only two rooms in the house, the parlor and kitchen, is there any heating apparatus.

"To join this Order a person must have received a good education, for the great canonical office has to be daily chanted in Latin. One must have a 'true vocation' for a cloister life, for a Sister cannot go out of a monastery regularly erected. Each Sister is to bring a dowery of two thousand dollars, besides one hundred dollars for the purchase of an outfit. A person wishing to join the Order becomes a 'postulant,' and remains such for one year. Then the postulant becomes a 'white novice,' and wears the habit of the Sisters, but with a white veil. At the end of one year the white novice makes her first profession and receives the black veil; at the end of three more years she makes her perpetual vows.

"The Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary wear a loose tunic of white serge which reaches to the ground, and which is held in by a brown leathern girdle, to which, on the left side, is attached the rosary. Over the tunic is a scapular, also of white serge. Around the shoulders and reaching up over the head, is a white linen guimpe. Around the forehead, a white linen bandeau is worn; over this is a capulet and veil of black nun's veiling. For the choir exercises the nuns wear a black cope. With the exception of the guimpe and bandeau, every article of clothing worn by the Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary is of wool. The community in Milwaukee numbers a Prioress and five Sisters, one of whom is a white novice. As regards their nationality, the Prioress is a Frenchwomen, while one of the Sisters is Irish and four are Americans.

"The principal occupation of the Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary are the divine office and the Holy Rosary, which is said without interruption. Two Sisters succeed each other day and night, with Rosary in hand, at the feet of the Blessed Virgin, and thereby literally carry out the precept of the Holy Father, 'recite' the rosary without interruption. The convent of the Perpetual Rosary is also the center of the association of the Perpetual Rosary, to which even people in the world can be associated and take part in the many and great indulgences attached to the Dominican Rosary."

Of the early history of the Order, we take the following from the Rosary Magazine: "In 1875 a Dominican of the province, the Rev. Damian Mary Saintourens, wrote and obtained from his superior permission to organize the association of the Perpetual Rosary. It was about this time that the pilgrimages to Lourdes began to increase so wonderfully. The faithful who had gone to pray at the miraculous grotto were returning with a great devotion to the Holy Rosary, for the Mother of God, after saying to the maiden to whom she appeared, 'I am the Immaculate Conception,' had also recommended the rosary as the great prayer of the age. It was easy to see that the association conceived by Father Damian Mary would spread rapidly. In a short time the Rev. Father had registered twenty-five thousand names.

"As one man alone could not take the management of such a vast organization, Father Damian Mary formed the resolution of founding a house of Dominican Sisters who would consecrate their lives to the devotion of the Rosary. Their vocation was to be both contemplative and apostolic; contemplative in the continual recitation of the Rosary by some appointed members of the association, and apostolic in the work of aiding the Dominican Fathers to propagate the Perpetual Rosary. The Fathers who organize the Rosary confraternities preach their conditions and advantages, inscribe the names of the associates, and bless the beads. To this much, only, is the propagation of the Rosary often confined, because the duties of mission life do not permit anything more. The intention of the devotion of the Perpetual Rosary is to form a guard of honor for the Blessed Virgin Mary. The associates choose an hour of prayer every month, which becomes an hour of guard. The days and hours are distributed with regularity; the rank of the guard of honor must be unbrokenly maintained in order that the Rosary may be really perpetual. Otherwise the name of the confraternity would have no meaning.

"The founders of the Perpetual Rosary realized that, while pious and zealous persons could be found in the world who would gladly offer to act as chief of the division, the condition of these persons often changes. Illness or death decimate their number, and thus it happens that bands of associates become as armies without chiefs, soon to be disbanded.

"A congregation of Dominican Sisters, devoted by vocation to the propagation of the Rosary, would obviate all such difficulties. An individual dies, a congregation lives. The latter would be at the same time able to maintain more system and regularity, for Religious, not being hampered with worldly matters, have more time to give to the things of God. A congregation of Dominican Sisters devoted solely to the Rosary, would, then, have many advantages. While the secular associate would give one hour each month to the Mother of God, the Sisters would be able to give one hour each day.

"The Very Rev. Father Ligiez, companion of the Master-General, also wrote to Father Damian: 'Let this work be commenced at once; it is a magnificent one. The Father-Directors of the Rosary in our convents are overrun by their apostolic occupations. They have not time to promote the Perpetual Rosary; they need help, and there are none more able to give it than the Dominican Sisters.' In another letter upon the same subject, he added this charming and delightful sentence: 'A brother is powerful when aided by his brother, but what can he not do when aided by his sister?'

"While everything seemed favorable to the foundation of the congregation of the Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary, and alerady charitable souls were preparing a house at Bethune, near Lille, terrible trials were about to begin. One day, some one said to Father Damian in his Lille convent, something was to be realized. 'I hear,' said the person, 'that you wish to found a work for the glory of the Blessed Virgin; if this is true, and you want to become a great servant of the Mother of God, you must prepare to suffer much.'

"During four years, it was impossible for Father Damian to lay the foundation of the work, for there arose an uninterrupted series of oppositions, obstacles and difficulties. What had seemed so near in the beginning, vanished; persons who had offered pecuniary assistance, retired; the house which had been set apart to become the cradle of the work was put to another use, and the friends of the first hour had become, if not enemies, more than indifferent. However, in the midst of the almost general abandonment, a great soul offered its services to Father Damian. The Rev. Mother Mary Dominic, Superioress-General of the Dominican Sisters of the Third Order, under the name of St. Catharine of Siena, had built a beautiful novitiate convent at Etrepagny. She placed at the disposal of the good Father one aisle of the monastery, comprising eight cells, and volunteered to form the postulants during the first three years, after which there could be opened for the young Sisters a special house. A young Irish woman, Miss Kate Welply, who had at her disposal a large fortune, generously offered it to cover the expenses of the novitiate. The Bishop of Evreux had given his consent and approbation, and it seemed that the dawn of beautiful days was about to shine; but the much-tried Father had not yet suffered enough. All that seemed so auspicious went to naught, and it became necessary to renounce hopes which had seemed so bright.

"At last, in 1880, after four years of trial and opposition, the sun rose radiantly upon the cradle of the work. The Very Rev. F. Cochrane, the author of 'The Life of Father Lacordaire,' had been appointed Provincial of the Paris Province. His was a great soul, capable of understanding a generous idea, and of giving help to its execution. Father Damian laid before him his plans, and he at once caught the spirit of them.

"The Very Rev. Father Provincial approved with his whole heart this beautiful idea, and gave to Father Damian all necessary authority to carry it out. He allowed him to establish the work where he liked best, and to entrust it to whomsoever he would. At that time, Mother Mary of the Angels, Prioress-General of the Third Order of the Dominicans of the Sacred Heart at Calais, offered the Father a part of her convent to form the first postulants, an offer which he accepted. On the 20th of May, 1880, he arrived at Calais, having only four dollars in his pocket, which had been given him by the Abbeville Carmelites, and on the 25th of May two postulants presented themselves at the convent.

"During six months other postulants came, but only two, Sister Mary Joseph and Sister M., persevered. Sister Mary Joseph had been secretary of the Perpetual Rosary at Havre under Father Damian's direction; she was, then, bringing to the work a special knowledge which it would be possible to turn to advantage. She lived ten years at Louvain, and died in the odor of sanctity. Sister Mary of the Rosary entered the convent very young. On the day she was invested with the habit, Father Damian asked her if she was ready to sacrifice all for the glory of the Blessed Virgin. 'Yes, Father,' said she, 'ready to sacrifice all.' And if some day we had to go to America, would you be willing to go? 'Let it be, Father, when you like; I am ready.' Eleven years later the Sisters came to found a home in America; Sister Mary of the Rosary was the first Prioress

"The Calais house was fast becoming insufficient for the accommodation of its inmates It was as two different communities under the same roof: one devoted to teaching, the other to the Perpetual Rosary. In spite of the kindness of Mother Mary of the Angels, whose memory is lovingly treasured, it was necessary to part. The Father Provincial advised Father Damian to seek another house, giving him liberty to go where he would, dispose the Community as he thought best, and to adopt the rule he preferred. But where to go? It was in the month of November, 1880; the Revolution had just ejected the religious priests from their convents, and it was rumored that the same fate was in store for the nuns. For greater security, Father Damian resolved to establish his daughters in Belgium. The two foundresses, Sister Mary Joseph and Mary of the Rosary, then left Calais. The Father rented a small house at Bonsecours de Peruvels, and there the two Sisters and a number of postulants went to establish themselves.

"Father Damian wrote, and had printed, the rules of the Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary, which were approved by the Bishop of Tournay. The fundamental point was the perpetuity of prayer in the Rosary at every hour of the night and day. He added the singing and psalmody of the great Canonical Dominican office, which brought the Sisters of the Rosary nearer to the Sisters of the Second Order. The constitutions of the Second Order of the Mauleon Sisters was taken as a base, and it was the intention of Father Damian to adopt the principal part of them. It was a Third Order, though, which he wished to found for the following reasons: The rising at all hours of the night for the Perpetual Rosary would not be compatible with the austerities of the Second Order. The experience at Muleon had been that the Sisters who combined strict fasts and continual abstinence with the duties of the Perpetual Rosary were dying of exhaustion, which obliged the Bishop of the diocese to prohibit the Perpetual Rosary. About this time a young Sister who had been among the most zealous for the propagation of the Perpetual Rosary, said to the Prioress, Mother Agnes of Jesus, just before dying: 'Mother, as the Superiors say that the Perpetual Rosary is not compatible with the Second Order's austerities, I offer my life to God in order that, sooner or later, He may inspire some one to found a Third Order devoted to the Perpetual Rosary.' Fifteen years later the Congregation of the Third Order of the Contemplative Dominicans of the Perpetual Rosary was founded.

"The Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary had then all the principal observances of the Second Order; the same office, the same habit, the same vows, and the same enclosure, but not the great fasts nor the perpetual abstinence, which were replaced by the Perpetual Rosary. The association was to call again to life the Contemplative Third Order, formerly so prosperous in the Church, but which disappeared after the great Revolution. How many young women for whom exterior works, such as teaching or nursing the sick, have no attraction, desire, nevertheless, to leave the world and lead a life of prayer. They knock at the door of the Second Order, but their health does not permit them to bear the continual abstinence and the great fasts; so they are obliged to renounce the Dominican life. It happens so often, especially nowadays, that the bodily strength does not respond to the desires of a vocation. The Contemplative Third Order of the Perpetual Rosary meets such special needs. One finds in it a rule much less severe, but at the same time the long offices, full separation from the world, and the principal observances of the Second Order. By the uninterrupted recitation of the Holy Rosary, too, the spirit and desire of St. Dominic are fully entered into, and the end for which the Holy Patriarch instituted the Sisters of the Second Order (which is to pray for the world's conversion) is admirably realized. In order to imitate still more the Sisters of the Second Order, Father Damian asked Mauleon to let him have, for a time, a Sister who could, as Prioress, form the new novices and postulants in the spirit and rule of the Second Order. Sister Rose of St. Mary was sent. This Sister was loaned, not given. She could not at first have been given, because she could not regularly pass from the Second to the Third Order. Under the priorship of Mother Rose the work prospered at Bonsecours de Peruvels. Soon the Belgian Dominican Fathers, knowing all the good accomplished by this Community, desired to have it at Louvain, near their convent. At Louvain, then, were established the Sisters who later came to found the first house in America, and Mother Rose of St. Mary governed the house with that prudence and zeal which the Sisters of the Second Order manifest in their convents.

"The Prior of the Dominicans at Louvain at that time was Father Iweins, director of the Perpetual Rosary in Belgium. He entrusted the association to the newly-arrived Sisters, and in the space of a few years fifty thousand associates were inscribed. Our Holy Father, Leo XIII., the great Pope of the Rosary, having heard with what zeal the devotion was practiced in the convent of the Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary, sent them, several times, his apostolic benediction, and gave various proofs of his great good will. When the Sisters began to build their new convent, the Holy Father sent them a small stone from the catacombs to be placed in the foundation. In 1885 the General Chapter of the Order of St. Dominic, held at Louvain under the presidence of the Most Rev. Father Larocca, inserted in the acts of the Chapter an article applauding the Sisters, and expressing a desire that new houses be founded in every other province of the Order. The foundation in the United States was, therefore, the realization of the General Chapter's wish. The American house of the Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary was established in the month of December, 1891.

"But let us not forget that the Community is not only contemplative, but also apostolic. A part of the Sisters' lives is consecrated to the propagation of the Blessed Virgin's worship in the world, by means of the Perpetual Rosary. As soon as established in America, they opened communication with the chiefs and associates of the Perpetual Rosary already organized by Father Damian in North America. The association numbered one hundred and twenty thousand members, scattered through Canada, the United States, and the West Indies. It formed already a beautiful guard of honor for the Blessed Virgin, established in the middle of the world, of which the cloistered Dominican Sisters of West Hoboken would be the center. The provinces of Quebec and Ontario, Canada, numbered over fifty thousand associates. In the East, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island, had flourishing divisions. In the West, Manitoba, the Rocky Mountains, British Columbia, and Vancouver Island, did not yield to the East or Center in number or the regularity of the hours of guard. The very Indians in the forests of the far West are associates. The Sioux, Abitibee, the Iroquois, the Mickmaks, recite their beads with the greatest fervor. They choose the night hours in preference to the day, and the Bishop of New Westminister wrote to Father Damian that every month when the hour of guard was near at hand the Indians left hunting and fishing to come to make their hour of guard in the midst of their tribes. In the United States, too, the Perpetual Rosary begins to prosper. New York, Newark, Baltimore, Chicago, Boston and St. Louis number more than twenty thousand associates. New Orleans and Louisiana have over six thousand. The West Indies are not backward; they contain over twelve thousand associates. Havana, Jamaica, Hayti, San Domingo, St. Lucia, Guadaloupe and Barbadoes promise that this devotion shall become as great, beautiful and splendid as are the flowers of their tropical clime.

"Such is the staff that the Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary found in working order when they arrived in America. Such is the vast field upon which their apostolic zeal exerts itself. With the assistance of their correspondence, their prayers, their leaflets, they till this magnificent field and make it yield crops of grace and virtue for the glory of the Blessed Virgin. They wish to rest only after enlisting the whole population of America in the guard of honor of our Heavenly Mother. The associates, knowing that these dear Sisters propagate their Holy Mother's glory, wish to imitate their zealous example, and, through correspondence, the most agreeable relations are maintained among the members of Mary's guard of honor.

"The Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary have neither Mother nor Superior-General. The only Superior is the Bishop of the diocese, while the Prioress governs her Community without any obligation toward the Superioress of the convent from which she comes. Thus, each house is independent, as are the Dominican houses of the Second Order and of the Carmelites. All the houses follow, however, the same rules and constitutions."

Franciscans.

THE three Orders of the Minorites, as well as all of the less important associations tracing their origin to Francis of Assisi, comprises that Order known as the Franciscans. The Order was founded by St. Francis Assisi in 1209, at a small church called Portiuncula, near Assisi. In 1210, when the number of his followers had increased to ten, he gave to them a rule in which strict poverty and a union of the active and contemplative life held the principal points. The Order was confirmed by Innocent III., in 1210, and again in 1215, spreading with great rapidity, and at its general chapter, held in 1219, five hundred of the members were present. Honorius III. confirmed the Order by a bull in 1223, giving it as the first among mendicant Orders the privilege of collecting alms, confirmed to the Church of Portiuncula the celebrated indulgence which was afterwards extended to all churches of the Franciscans, and granted them several other privileges besides. About forty-two years after the death of the founder of this Order, the number of Franciscans was estimated at about two hundred thousand, with eight thousand convents in twenty-three provinces. The three Orders of the Minorites, or Franciscans proper, included, (1) the Minorite Friars; (2) the Order of the Poor Ladies or Poor Clares—Franciscan Nuns; (3) the Order of Penitent Men and Women, which included (a) all those who dwell in Franciscan cloisters and keep the Third Rule, (b) those who live in cloisters of their own, keeping the Third rule, and (c) the Tertiaries. These Orders of friars, nuns and tertiaries are more or less under the jurisdiction of the general minister of the Franciscan Order.

The Minorite friars, or the First Order, are divided into two "families," Cismontana, or convents in Italy, Germany, Hungary, Poland, Syria and Palestine, and Ultramontana, or convents in France, Spain, the Low Countries, Saxony, Islands of the Mediterranean, Asia, Africa, and the Indies—the one ruled directly by the minister-general, and the other by a commissary-general. Each family maintains a province which is ruled over by a provincial. The Cismontana had sixty-six provinces, and the Ultramontana, eighty-one. A province in this instance comprises a union of a certain number of convents under a chief, who is directly responsible to the minister-general. The original rule prescribed by St. Francis, founder of this Order, was strict, and if rigidly enforced, would have made pious beggars out of all the members. This, in fact, was the founder's intention, but it was discovered that few belonging to the Order could fulfill its requirements. A diversity of opinions became rife among the members of the Order regarding the advisability of strictly adhering to rule, or partial moderation of the same. This necessarily brought about internal struggles, which resulted in the establishment of various divisions in the Order. Principal among these were the Observants, the Conventuals and the Capuchins, all of whom belonged to the First Order of the Franciscans. The Observants are supposed to keep the rule of Francis with considerable strictness, and doing so, take first rank among the Franciscans.

Their minister-general has preëminence. The Conventuals follow the rule of Francis with certain modifications. Their general has to be confirmed by the minister-general; otherwise, however, they are independent. Since 1528, the Capuchins have had an independent general under the minister-general. In the eighteenth century, the Franciscans, including the Capuchins, numbered nearly two hundred thousand members, with about twenty-six thousand convents, and in 1843 the number of Observants, the most numerous branch of the Order, was estimated at about eighty thousand. Since the year 1848, the order has steadily increased in numbers, their institutions being found in every part of Europe. They also have a province in Palestine, the members of which are guardians of the Holy Sepulchre and other Christian sanctuaries, which are celebrated for their hospitality to pilgrims and travelers. The Order also has charge of two Apostolic Vicariates of China. The Franciscans, in addition, have the distinction of being the earliest missionaries to America, having come over with Columbus on his second voyage in 1493. Their first formal establishment in the new world was in 1502, when twelve friars of the Order, with a prelate named Antonio de Espinal, accompanied Ovando to San Domingo. They also went to Florida in 1528, Juan Juarez, one of their number, bearing the rank of Bishop. Another Franciscan monk penetrated into New Mexico and California as early at 1539. In 1544 Father Andries de Olmos founded a successful mission in Texas, and subsequent to that date, priests of this Order established themselves permanently in Florida, California, Mexico and other portions of the South and West, and were among the first to plant Christianity in Canada, and in what are now the Northern and Northwestern States of the Union. The Recollects figured to a large extent in the missionary history of Canada, the celebrated explorer, Hennepin, being a missionary of that Order. Institutions under the domination and direction of the Franciscan Order have thriven and multiplied to such an extent that they are now quite plentifully distributed throughout the United States.

Some of the earlier, as well as most noted, among these are the convents at Alleghany and New York, both of which were established in the year 1859, and houses of the Order at Teutopolis, Ill., and Cincinnati, O., which were established during the preceding year. Among the many celebrated men produced by this Order was Anthony of Padua, Bonaventura, Alexander of Hales, John Duns Scotus, Roger Bacon, Nicolaus de Myra, William of Occam, Cardinal Ximenes, and the Popes Nicholas IV., Alexander V., Sixtus IV., Sixtus VI., and Clement XIV.

Jesuits.

THE Society of Jesus, or Jesuits, the best known and most influential among the religious Orders of the Roman Catholic Church, was founded by St. Ignatius Loyola. The establishment of this Order was confirmed by Pope Paul III. on September 27, 1540, the membership being limited to sixty. This limit was removed in 1543. Of this Order, the members of which take upon themselves the vows of poverty, chastity and obedience, the fourth binding themselves to go without hesitation wherever the Pope might send them, in order to labor for the salvation of souls, Ignatius was elected first General, taking up his abode at Rome in 1541. The Order of Jesuits consists of a congregation of ecclesiastics who live in accordance with a definite rule, in which military ideas, spiritual labors, the teaching of the young, conducting of missions, and converting of the heathen, had largely entered. In 1545 the Order had received great privileges, and in 1571 all the rights of the mendicant Orders. The constitution of the Order consists of a strict examination preceding the reception of new members. There are also five points designated as absolute impediments to admission: The commission of murder; apostasy, or other grievous offenses; subjection to a degrading sentence; membership in a monastic Order; marriage, and insanity or decided weakness of intellect. During the novitiate period, which lasts two years, the novices are not allowed to study, but devote their entire time to prayer and prolonged meditation. The government of this Order differs materially from that of other religious institutions, being somewhat arbitrary in character. The General, too, as with other similar organizations, is elected by the congregation of the Society, but with the difference that in this instance the appointment is for life. He nominates to every office in the Society and appoints the Superiors to all of the houses and colleges. The vow of obedience is also taken directly to him, and not, as in other Orders, to the rule, and the admission or dismissal of their members depends on his fiat. When the aspirant for membership has completed his novitiate, he offers himself for reception to the Society, and, having taken the vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience, is admitted among the scholastics. To this, the second stage of his religious life, he devotes from fifteen to seventeen years, during which time he engages in a continuous round of study, as well as teaching in the colleges of the Order. The major portion of this time is devoted to the study of belles lettres, rhetoric, philosophy, physics, mathematics, and the sciences, the last few years being given to the study of theology and the Oriental languages. Having completed his studies, the candidate performs his second novitiate, lasting one year, during which he lives in retirement. During this time he has to make himself acquainted with the constitution of the Order, and upon a satisfactory report being made of his progress in virtue and science, made by his Superior to the General of the Order, the latter admits him to the rank of either coadjutor, spiritualis or professus. Both have about the same rights, although the former cannot take part in the provincial and general congregations of the Order, nor can they be elected to a higher office than rectorate of the college. The professed members, however, with whom rests the supreme government of the Order, take the fourth vow, to go as missionaries wherever the Pope may send them. The Order is divided into provinces, each of which is governed by the provincial; a professed house is in charge of the Praepositus, a college is governed by the rector, and a residence by the Superior. The provincial congregation is composed of the professed members and such coadjutors as are rectors of the colleges. The general congregation never meets except for the election of a new General, or deliberation on subjects of great importance. It consists of all the provincials and two delegates from every provincial congregation. Jesuits do not wear a monastic habit, but dress in black, almost identically the same as that worn by secular priests. When Ignatius died, in 1556, there were already twelve provinces and one thousand members; by 1618 there were thirty-two provinces and thirty-two thousand members; in 1749, twenty-four professed houses, six hundred and sixty-nine colleges, one hundred and seventy-six Seminaries, sixty-one novitiates, and three hundred and thirty-five residences; two hundred and seventy-three missions in protestant and pagan countries, and about twenty-two thousand six hundred members. The Order was successfully introduced into Portugal in 1540 by St. Francis Xavier and Rodriguez, who found a patron and warm supporter in King John III. Rodriguez established a college at Coimbra, which, in 1544, numbered sixty members. In Spain the Order met with some opposition at the hands of the Bishops, which, however, was soon overcome, their reception from then on being most favorable. It was not until 1562 that they were able to obtain a legal existence in France. Here, although applying for admission as early as in the other countries, they met with the most obstinate resistance on the part of Parliament, the University of Paris, and a number of the Bishops. Parliament, however, at length yielded to the commands of the King, and registered the royal patent. Jesuit Colleges and institutions now became quite numerous throughout the country, and among the pupils of the Order were many who afterwards became brilliant and distinguished members of the Society. The Jesuits first appeared in Germany in 1551, and a few years later were invested with chairs at the Bavarian University of Ingolstadt, and colleges at Cologne, Munich, Treves, Augsburg and several other places. In Italy, however, they spread and prospered more rapidly than in any other country. In Poland, also, they became quite numerous, dividing before the end of the sixteenth century into two provinces, which had the controlling influence over houses and colleges in some twenty towns. The Jesuits began active missionary operations among the pagans as early as 1541, which was the year following the foundation of the Order. At that time, Francis Xavier sailed to the East Indies, founding a college at Goa and preaching in Travancore, Malacca, Macassar, the Islands and Japan, baptizing a vast number of pagans. Other members of the Order also preached in Madura, Ceylon and numerous other places, so that the Christian population of their missions in India alone was estimated at one hundred thousand. In 1613 the Portuguese Jesuits had in Japan two colleges, eight residences and three professed houses, but the Catholic persecutions almost immediately subsequent to that date put an end to those establishments. In 1584 Father Rogerius went to China, where others also became teachers and ministers. The number of converts in this country was very large, those alone in the provinces of Nankin amounting to one hundred thousand. Cochin-China and Tonquin were also missionary fields that yielded large returns for the labor expended. The most celebrated of Jesuit missions, however, was that established in Paraguay, where they are said to have Christianized and civilized an Indian population of nearly two hundred thousand souls. In 1566 the Jesuits came to Florida, which, in the year following, became a vice-province of the Order. At this time, also, a school for the children of the Florida Indians was commenced in Havana. Thus the work prospered and grew, new missions being from time to time erected, as the field became gradually enlarged. The first Jesuit mission in California was established by Father Eusibius Kuhn in 1683, after which followed several others, until not less than sixteen mission stations had been established. Thus the work progressed, missions being erected in the French possessions in America, at Quebec, and as far distant as the present State of Arkansas, from north to south, from east to west, as far and as fast as their limited numbers would permit, these earnest workers and faithful teachers carried the cross. From this time on, through oft-recurring periods of seemingly unavoidable disaster, when the world was rife with revolution and calamity, when even the accession of a new monarch or head to the Government might mean irreparable injury, proscription, or even death, the members of this Order struggled along, overcoming every vicissitude and restriction, until to-day they are at the head of all other religious organizations.

As educators, too, the Jesuits have proved eminently successful, and it is undoubtedly a fact that in this respect the Catholics would have been far behind had it not been for them. The first Jesuit school was opened in Germany in 1550, and in 1700, throughout the entire country, the Order possessed six hundred and twelve colleges, two hundred and fifty-seven normal schools, fifty-nine novitiates, three hundred and forty residences, two hundred missions, twenty-nine professed houses, and twenty-four universities. In 1695 the college at Clermont had three thousand students. Each Jesuit college was divided into two parts, the first consisting of five classes, three of which were devoted to the study of grammar and two to humanity and rhetoric; the other division began with a philosophical course of two or three years, after which the pupils studied theology for four years.

Order of Praemonstratensians.

IN the diocese of Green Bay, on the peninsula between Lake Michigan and Green Bay, reside the Praemonstratensian Fathers. It is only about four years ago that this ancient Order of religious priests took up their abode in America, coming at the personal request of the Right Rev. Bishop Messmer.

The Order of Praemonstratensians was founded in the diocese of Laon, France, in the year 1120, by St. Norbert, a Canon Regular, from Santen, Germany, where he was born in 1080. He afterwards, in 1127, became Archbishop of Magdeburg, died in 1134, and was canonized in 1584. While traveling throughout the country, engaged in missionary labors, St. Norbert became more than ever convinced of the increasing needs of Christian people and the limited number of priests available to minister to their spiritual necessities, and it was while laboring mentally in view of improving the general religious condition existing, that he received the divine inspiration to establish a religious Order, in which both monastic life and the ability to fulfill the sacred duties of the ministry should be combined.

By favor of Pope Callixtus II., and the noble aid of Bartholomew, Bishop of Laon, his heartfelt desires were fulfilled, and a new Order formally established in the year 1120. The point selected, according to tradition, was a meadow situated in the forest of Couchy, which place, it is said, was pointed out to him in a vision, whence comes the name of the Order, Pre Montre (the meadow pointed out). At this place, which is near the Bishop's residence, Norbert gathered his disciples and gave to them the strict rule of St. Augustine. According to one historian, St. Norbert received, in an apparition from the hands of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the white habit which has since been used by members of the Order as their regular dress, both when in service and at home.

The Order of the White Fathers spread with great rapidity; in France it gained much popularity by its efforts in suppressing the Albigenses, and in Germany by accumulating much property, and several of the abbots were raised to the rank of Princes of the Empire. As a result of this remarkable growth, the original convent was not only crowded to its full capacities, but the Order had established some fifty or sixty other communities.

"The aim of St. Norbert and the nature of its institution," writes the French historian Hurter, "was notably the combination of the active and contemplative life." Like the monks, they take the three solemn perpetual vows of chastity, poverty and obedience, while at the same time they are thoroughly trained in all of the studies required for the sacred ministry. Hence the Sons of St. Norbert may be sent by their Superior on request of the Bishop to any parish, and can also be removed at any time, ad nutum amovibiles, to resume their solitary life in the cloister. Members of this Order cannot leave any inheritance, as by the solemn vow of poverty no member can own any property.

To foster their spiritual strength, the White Fathers keep their special rules of fasting and abstinence moderated, according to the needs of an active life.

The government of this Order is like to that used by other institutions of the middle ages; each abbey, being a separate community, has its own superior, who is elected for life by the members, and to him is relegated the power of appointing and discharging all subaltern officers at will. The abbot of the parent convent near Couchy was given the title of General, and he, together with three other French Abbots, formed the Supreme Council of the Order. In his capacity as head of the Order, he, when necessary, called together the Superiors of all of the houses for a General Chapter.

Thus thoroughly equipped, and with the friendly recognition of all classes of people at their command, the Order throve beyond all human expectations for several centuries, so that, at the time of the Protestant Reformation, which caused a general religious insurrection throughout Europe, the Order had two thousand convents, of which five hundred were for women. As the majority of these convents were at that time located in England, Scotland, Ireland, Germany, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, the Order suffered almost irreparable losses, many of the members being slaughtered or driven away, whilst, during the revolution in France, over two hundred of their convents were torn down or otherwise destroyed. The noble principles of this Order had, however, become too deeply rooted to succumb to even such a terrible holocaust as that which swept the entire continent of Europe at that time. The broken threads of that unhappy period were again taken up with an amount of earnestness and zeal that compelled the admiration of the entire Christian world, and effected a substantial condition of affairs, which have been the means of placing this among the front ranks of religious institutions.

In late years some of the White Fathers have been sent to several foreign countries, either by request of local Ordinaries or by command of His Holiness, the Pope, and, as a result, there are to-day communities of this Order to be found in England, Germany, Brazil, America and Africa.

The Fathers who settled in Green Bay diocese belong to the old Abbey of Berne, established in Holland in 1134, the only community surviving the terrible time previously referred to. This community is flourishing most happily under the wise and gentle ruling of the Right Rev. A. J. Bazelmans. This worthy prelate was born in the southern part of Holland, in the year 1837. After completing the requisite course of study at college, he joined the Order, with whom he devoted his entire time for a number of years in preparing for the ministry. Being ordained to the priesthood in 1865, he was at once appointed professor and master of Novices in the convent, and pastor of several parishes in its locality. In this service he remained until 1885, when he was elected to the abbotship, being honored on the following year with the mitre and crosier.

When, in 1893, the Right Rev. Bishop of Green Bay requested the locating of some of the White Fathers in his diocese, the Abbot responded by sending two priests and one lay brother, with the Rev. Bernard H. Pennings as their superior. This little community at the present time consists of four priests and two lay brothers.

Servites.

THE Servites originated with Bonfiglio Monaldi, a Florentine, who, with six of his companions, withdrew to Campo Marzo in 1233, for prayer and other exercises in honor of the Blessed Virgin. Three years later they moved to Monte Senario, where their membership rapidly increased. At an early period in its existence, the Order received from Bishop Ardingus of Florence the rule of St. Augustine, but it was 1255 before the papal sanction was obtained. The Order now rapidly spread throughout Germany, France, Poland, Hungary and the Low Countries, receiving in 1424, from Martin V., the privilege of the mendicant orders. At about the same time Giuliano Falconieri founded the Servite Tertiaries, and in 1593, under Bernardino de Riccioline, arose the Hermite Servites. The members of the Order are now found chiefly in Italy, Hungary, Bavaria and Austria.

Sisters of Charity.

THE Sisters of Charity are a religious organization which was founded in the vicinity of Paris by St. Vincent de Paul, in 1633. The object of the organization was to care for the sick and poor, and educate the children of the indigent. Their mission being entirely among the lowly and unfortunate, the prisons, hospitals, almshouses and free schools in all parts of France were placed under their direction. So successful was the organization in its undertakings, that soon its members were invited to take charge of similar institutions in other countries, and now, as a result, the Sisters of Charity are to be found in almost every civilized country. Letters patent were granted to this organization in 1657 by Louis XIV., and three years later they were confirmed by the legate of the Pope. In 1848 the number of establishments of this Order throughout the word, not, however, including the United States, was more than six hundred, which were in charge of about twelve thousand Sisters. The American branch of the Order was established at Emmitsburg, Maryland, in 1809, by Mrs. Eliza Seton, their first Mother Superior. In 1852 there were no less than thirty-eight houses in charge of the Sisters in different parts of the Union, at which time two hundred and fifty Sisters were engaged in the work of caring for the poor and needy, and educating the children in the diocese of New York alone.

Sisters of the Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ.

THE general mother house of this Order is located at Dernbach, Switzerland, and the provincial house at Fort Wayne, Indiana. The latter is in charge of Mother M. Hyacinth, the Provincial Superioress.

The community of the Sisters of the Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ was founded by Miss Catherine Kaspers at Dernbach, in the diocese of Limburg, Nassau, Germany. The first members made their religious profession August 15, 1851. The rules of the community were formulated and compiled by the Right Rev. P. J. Plum, Bishop of Limburg, the same being approved by the Holy See in 1870, and confirmed in 1890. The Order was introduced into the United States by the Right Rev. J. H. Luers, Bishop of Fort Wayne, Indiana. The mother house and novitiate are still united with the general mother house. At present, Sisters of this Order are conducting establishments in the archdioceses of Chicago, St. Paul, and in the dioceses of Alton and Belleville, Illinois, Fort Wayne, Indiana, and La Crosse, Wisconsin. There are now, belonging to the Order, two hundred and twenty-five Sisters, forty-two novices, sixteen postulants, fourteen parochial schools, two thousand nine hundred and three pupils, two orphanages, four hundred and sixty-seven orphans, eight hospitals, four thousand two hundred patients, and one home for the aged.

In Wisconsin there are three hospitals under the control of this Order. These are St. Joseph's Hospital at Ashland, the oldest in the State, in which are Sister M. Coleta, Superioress, and ten Sisters; St. Francis' Hospital, Superior City, Sister M. Teresia, Superioress, and seven Sisters, and St. Mary's Hospital, at West Superior, where there are fourteen Sisters, of whom Sister M. Raingardis is Superioress. There is a neat little chapel in connection with St. Francis, but no resident chaplain, services being conducted there by the pastor of St. Francis Xavier parish.

Sisters of St. Francis of Assissi.

ST. FRANCIS of Assissi, founder of the Franciscan Order, also established an order of Nuns who were generally called from its first abbess, Clare of Assissi, the Poor Clares of Clarisses, This Abbess, a noble maiden of Assissi, fled from her home to Portiuncula in 1212, and there gathered around her a company of ladies, including her three younger sisters, with whom she founded this Order. In the year 1220 Cardinal Hugolin gave them a rule taken from that adopted by the strictest sect of the Benedictines, but with some special observance. Four years afterwards a written rule was given them by Francis, the same being approved by Gregory IX. and Innocent IV. The Hugolin rule compelled nuns, among other things, to fast every day, to abstain at all seasons on Wednesdays and Fridays from wine and soup, and also to observe numerous other diatory rules. They were also to keep perpetual silence, to be broken only by permission of the Superior, and they were to wear two tunics, a mantle and a scapulary, besides a hair shirt. The rule laid down by Francis was not so strict. The two rules conflicting, Pope Urban IV, gave to the Sisters a third rule, which was not so strict as either. The result of this was that several convents adhered to the first and strictest; that of the Reform of Collette, a French Sister, adhering to the second rule, that of Francis, while by far the larger number of the nuns followed the new rule of Urban.

The Tertiarians, or Penitents, of the Third Order of St. Francis, though living in the world, followed a rule and discipline similar to that of the First and Second Orders. The rule was given to them from St. Francis in 1221. New communities of this Order subsequently sprung up, devoted to teaching, and became independent of the parent Order. They have bought houses in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and other noted centers. One of the most important communities of women was that of the Elizabethians, founded by Angelina de Corbaro in 1395. These people, who were known as Daughters of Charity in Europe, had, in 1843, a membership of one thousand. In the United States there are establishments of the Third Order of St. Francis in numerous dioceses, among them that of Milwaukee. Besides the three Orders of Friars, Nuns and Tertiarians, the Franciscans include one or two of minor importance, which, however, trace their origin to Francis. Among these are the Chevaliers of the Order of the Immaculate Conception of the B. V. M., and the Archconfraternity of the Stigmata of St. Francis.

Catholic Orders in Wisconsin—Secular.

CHAPTER II.

Ancient Order of Hibernians.

THE Ancient Order of Hibernians first came to the United States and located in the city of New York as a voluntary social organization, in 1830. In March, 1853, Articles of Incorporation were filed in the Recorder's office of the County of New York, giving the organization a legal existence in the County. In 1856 amended articles were filed, giving the organization legal existence in the City, County and State of New York. In 1863 a charter was procured from the Legislature of the State of New York, giving the organization of the city a legal existence as a beneficial association. Up to this time, the organization was purely social, but its nature, under the charter granted by the Legislature, was changed so as to include sick and funeral benefits for living and deceased members.

From this time, National Conventions were held annually in the City of New York, and the officers of the National Association were, by the by-laws, required to be actual residents of the City of New York, or at least to reside there during their term of office. At the National Convention, held in 1877, an amendment was adopted, providing, amongst other things, that no two succeeding National Conventions could be held in the same State, and that the national officers might be chosen from any part of the United States. It was also provided that applicants for membership must be of Irish birth or descent, and practical Catholics. The organization, though composed of Catholics, is not, properly speaking, a Catholic society. There was a time when certain ecclesiastics would not countenance the organization within their jurisdiction, but that opposition has passed away, and the Order is now generally recognized by the Church.

The Order has a ritual, signs and passwords, simply as a means of recognition and to guard against fraud. The pastor of a congregation where an Order exists may be admitted to the meetings, and any member may communicate to the pastor of his congregation all that transpires at meetings without incurring the stigma of violating his pledges to the Order.

There is no written history of the organization in existence, what is publicly known of the Order being handed down from sire to son.

The organization came to Wisconsin on July 15, 1880, and located at "Bay View" (now the Seventeenth Ward of the city of Milwaukee), when the first Division, known as Division No. 1 of Milwaukee County, was established.

There are at present thirty-five Divisions in the State, of which Milwaukee has five, the others being located in Ashland, Chippewa Falls, Madison, Eau Claire, Fond du Lac, Byron, Elroy, Kenosha, La Crosse, Darlington, Shullsburg, Benton, Marinette, Oconto, Appleton, Kaukauna, Stevens Point, Racine, Janesville, Beloit, Hudson, Oshkosh, Menasha, West Superior, Rhinelander, Prairie du Chien, De Pere and Washburn. Divisions of the Order were organized at Florence, Hurley and one or two other places, but, owing to adverse circumstances, after a time became defunct. The present membership of the organization in this State is 1,704. Conventions are held bi-annually. The present State officers are: Charles T. Ragan, Chippewa Falls, president; Michael Colbert, Racine, vice-president; Thomas W. Reilly, Oshkosh, secretary; Edward J. Kelly, La Crosse, treasurer; the Rev. Ambrose Murphy, La Crosse, chaplain.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians exists in forty-five States in the Union, also in New Brunswick, Ontario, Prince Edward's Island and Quebec. The total membership in the United States is 93,898, and the gross receipts for the term ending December 31, 1895—last official report—were $1,717,258 and disbursements for the same period $1,174,046.

Unlike other organizations of the same nature, no special effort has ever been made to extend the Ancient Order of Hibernians in the United States or any other place. The present National officers are: P. J. O'Conner, Savannah, Ga., president; J. C. Weadock, Bay City, Mich., vice-president; Thomas O'Sullivan, Philadelphia, Pa., secretary, and Thomas J. Dundon, Columbus, Ohio, treasurer.

One of the principal objects of the Order is, as its motto puts it: "To Care for the Sick and Bury the Dead." Speaking of its benevolent purposes, a recent writer says: "The statistics of the Order in this country alone afford an indication of the generous charity

State Officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Thos. A. Reilly, Secretary, Oshkosh.
E. J. Kelly, Treasurer, La Crosse.

Chas. T. Ragan, President, Chippewa Falls.

Rev. A. Murphy, Chaplain, La Crosse.
Michael Colbert, Vice-President, Racine.

in this direction. It amounts to many thousand dollars every year, and the money value is doubly enhanced to its members by the consoling thought that in the hour of direct need and sorrow they have friends that are always true and loyal. It has contributed to churches, schools, orphans' homes and convents, both here and in Ireland, and many an Irish priest has had reason to bless its charity and benevolence. In recent years, besides its beneficial objects, an insurance feature known as the 'Widows' and Orphans' Fund,' has been established in connection with the Order for the families of the deceased members. Each Division has an employment bureau for the purpose of providing work for any Hibernian who may happen to come into the district. The Order is in no sense of the word a political organization."

Formerly the State officers constituted the State Board of Directors. At the National Convention held at Detroit, Mich., in 1896, the Constitution was amended, increasing the membership of the State Board by adding thereto the County President of each county in the State. The Board as now constituted is as follows: Charles T. Ragan, Chippewa Falls, Wis.; Michael Colbert, 1438 Buchanan street, Racine, Wis.; Thomas W. Reilly, 105 Otter street, Oshkosh, Wis.; E. J. Kelly, 1507 Vine street, La Crosse, Wis.; Dr. W. T. O'Brien, Ashland, Wis.; Edward Starr, Washburn. Wis.; S. W. Brennan, Shirley, Brown County, Wis.; John Garrity, Prairie du Chien, Wis.; James Casserly, 403 Washington street, Madison, Wis.; M. S. Frawley, 652 Wisconsin street, Eau Claire, Wis.; Dr. Edward McLoughlin, 46 Sixth street, Fond du Lac, Wis.; John Conway, Elroy, Juneau County, Wis.; J. H. Tully, Kenosha, Wis.; J. A. Duffy, Darlington, La Fayette County, Wis.; P. C. Donnelly, 34 Hattie Court, Marinette, Wis.; James McIver, 147 Lincoln avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.; John Noonan, Oconto, Wis.; William Whitty, Rhinelander, Oneida County, Wis.; John Driscoll, 787 Drew street, Appleton, Outagamie County, Wis.; Edward D. Glennon, 518 Brown street, Stevens Point, Wis.; William D. Brown, 936 Marquette street, Racine, Wis.; Isaac F. Connors, 116 Mill street, Janesville, Wis.; Thomas F. Roch, Oshkosh, Wis.

Chas. T. Ragan, state president of Ancient Order of Hibernians, was born in Syracuse, New York, in 1856. When a child, he came west with his parents, locating at Farley, Iowa, where he attended the Christian Brothers' school, from which institution he graduated when eighteen years of age. In 1877, he came to Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, and took charge of the mercantile business of W. T. Dalton and Company, then one of the largest retail houses in Northern Wisconsin, and which is now connected with the Chippewa Valley Mercantile Company, wholesale grocers of Chippewa Falls. He has held the office of City Clerk of Chippewa Falls for four terms, Deputy Internal Revenue Collector and Clerk of the Municipal Court, and is now President of the Common Council. He organized the first division of the Ancient Order Hibernians in Northern Wisconsin, as also the first Branch of the Catholic Knights of America, and has at all times taken a deep interest in Catholic parochial and social affairs.

Thomas A. Reilly, state secretary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, was born October 28, 1856, at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin; his early life being spent on a farm in Empire Township, Fond du Lac County. When eighteen years of age, he began teaching country school, and in 1876 entered the Oshkosh Normal School. During the winter of 1877-78 he taught school at Hingham, Sheboygan County, and was professor of English and Mathematics at Pio Nono College from 1879 to 1882. In 1883 he graduated from a full course at the Oshkosh Normal School, and was principal of the Fourth Ward School at Oshkosh from 1883 to 1896. In 1897 he graduated from the Chicago Law School, receiving the O'Callaghan prize for highest scholarship. In May, 1886, he was elected State Secretary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Wisconsin, which position he still holds. In September, 1897, he became a member of the law firm of Dreutzer, Reilly and Boylan, with offices in the Opera House Building, Chicago, Illinois.

In August, 1884, Mr. Reilly was married to Miss Jennie E. Kelley of Oshkosh. They have five children, three boys and two girls.

Catholic Knights of Wisconsin.

THE Order of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin was organized at Green Bay on January 1, 1885, and received its charter from the State on the 17th of February following. The first meeting of the members of this incorporation, for the election of State officers, was held at Bishop's Hall, in the City of Milwaukee, on February 24, 1885. The purpose of the Order is to unite fraternally for social, benevolent and intellectual improvement all practical Roman Catholics of every profession, business and occupation, personally acceptable of sound bodily health and between the ages of eighteen and fifty-five years at the time of admission. Also, as a mutual benevolent and charitable undertaking; to establish and maintain a benefit fund from which, on the satisfactory evidence of the death of a member who shall have complied with all its lawful requirements, a sum not to exceed $2,000 shall be paid to his family or heirs.

State Officers of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin.

J. M. Callahan, State Secretary, Neenah.
J. J. Sherman, Appleton.
Dr. M. B. Corbett, State Med. Examiner, Oshkosh.
Chas. B. Miller, La Crosse.
J. H. M. Wigman, President, Green Bay.
C. F. A. Hintze, Treasurer, Milwaukee.
M. L. Snyder, Vice-President, Waukesha.
Rev. M. J. Ward, Director, Beloit.

At the Sixth Biennial State Council of the Order, held at Stevens Point July 21 and 22, 1896, the official report showed that there were at that time in the State of Wisconsin 164 branches, with others in progress of organization, having a membership of over 7,000 and with a reserve fund of $61,000. During its existence, now a period of nearly twelve years, the Order has paid to the widows and orphans of deceased members the sum of $643,555.90. The incorporators of the Order in Wisconsin were J. H. M. Wigman, Henry Mulholland, Jr., W. M. Castle, P. H. Martin, John C. Keefe, James J. Keogh and John C. Neher. The present state officers are: J. H. M. Wigman, Green Bay, president; M. L. Snyder, Waukesha, vice-president; John M. Callahan, Neenah, secretary; Charles F. A. Hintze, Milwaukee, treasurer, and Dr. M. E. Corbett, Oshkosh, medical examiner. The directors are: The Rev. M. J. Ward, Beloit, Wisconsin; Charles B. Miller, La Crosse, Wisconsin, and John J. Sherman, Appleton, Wisconsin. Mr. Wigman has been State President of the Order since its organization. Since the establishment of the Order regular Biennial Councils have been held as follows: Milwaukee, 1886; Eau Claire, 1888; Waukesha, 1890; Ashland, 1892; Oshkosh, 1894; and Stevens Point, 1896.

John M. Callahan, state secretary of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, was born in the city of Menasha, Winnebago County, Wisconsin, on June 14, 1862, and was educated in the parochial and public schools of Neenah, Wisconsin. After school hours and during vacation he picked up a knowledge of telegraphy, in which he became so proficient that at the age of eighteen he was appointed telegraph operator at Appleton, Wisconsin, where he remained for two years, at the expiration of which period he was transferred to Neenah, his present home, and accepted the position as operator and ticket clerk with the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company. After serving in this position for ten years, he was promoted to the position of passenger and ticket agent. In July, 1893, he was given full control of the passenger and freight service.

Mr. Callahan was married on September 3, 1884, to Miss Margaret McCraley, of New York. To them have been born four children, William Raymond, E. J. Venturi, Margaret M. and John M. Jr. Mr. Callahan was elected state secretary of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin July 10, 1890, at the biennial state meeting of the Order held in the city of Waukesha, which office he has held since that time, being elected without opposition at the state meetings held at Ashland, Oshkosh and Stevens Point. Mr. Callahan was appointed postmaster of the city of Neenah by President Grover Cleveland, December 5, 1895.

Dr. M. E. Corbett, state medical examiner of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, was born in Buffalo, New York, September 5, 1857. When a child he removed with his parents to Oakfield, Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, where the family has since resided. The subject of this sketch was educated in the public schools and State Normal School at Oshkosh, and later graduated from the University of the City of New York. Dr. Corbett is in active practice in the city of Oshkosh, where he has lived for the past ten years. He is also Surgeon in Charge of the Alexian Brothers' Hospital and physician and surgeon to St. Mary's Hospital.

Besides being state medical examiner for the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, Dr. Corbett is medical examiner for a number of the larger life insurance companies, a member of the Fox River Medical Society, Brainard Medical Society, State Medical Society, and the American Medical Association.

M. L. Snyder, a resident of Waukesha County, was born near Treves, Prussia, on September 15, 1842. In 1844 his parents came to America and settled in New York City. When of proper age young Snyder attended a school conducted by the Redemptorist Fathers. When thirteen years of age he came west and settled in Waukesha County, where he has resided ever since. It was while a resident of that county that he attended high school and acquired the residue of a good common school education. When nineteen, Mr. Snyder enlisted in Co. A, Twenty-fourth Wisconsin Infantry, and served three years participating in twenty of the principal battles of the war. He was married February 12, 1872, to Amelia Gosa; nine children have blessed this union, six of whom are still living. Mr. Snyder has taken an active part in politics, filling many minor offices, having been clerk of the Circuit Court for four years, sheriff of the County for two years, and in the Register of Deeds office for six years. He has also officiated as chairman of the County Board of Supervisors, trustee, and Alderman. Mr. Snyder is now vice-president of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, having held that position for three terms. By profession he is a lawyer.

John J. Sherman, ex-County Judge and cashier of the Citizens' National Bank of Appleton, Wisconsin, was born in that State August 28, 1853, at Addison, Washington County. He remained on the farm until twelve years of age, and then entered St. Gall's Academy at Milwaukee, graduating from that institution when fifteen. He then, being in limited circumstances, taught school, applying the money thus earned to acquiring a better education, taking a special course in mathematics at the State University at Madison. For ten years subsequently he taught in the public schools in Washington County and at the city of Milwaukee, afterwards going to Wausau, Wisconsin, where he engaged in the mercantile business as a member of the firm of Dengel and Sherman. After seven years of prosperous business, he was elected city clerk of the city of Wausau, conducting the duties of that office with great credit to himself and satisfaction to the people, whose interests he ably subserved. Mr. Sherman had an unusually broad experience in the clerical work of the city and county, serving as court interpreter, deputy clerk of the court, county clerk, county treasurer, register of deeds, and undertaking several special contracts for both city and county, at one time being employed to examine the books of all the city and county officers for reconcilement, and to suggest improved methods of book-keeping. In 1890 he assisted in organizing the German American Savings Bank of Wausau, which later became nationalized as the National German American Bank. He was made assistant cashier, and had supervision of the book-keeping and loans. In 1893 he served as County Judge, part of the time by appointment, and part by election, but resigned to accept the cashiership of the Citizens' National Bank of Appleton, January 15, 1894. Mr. Sherman was also prominent in school matters in Wausau, serving on the school board for eleven years.

He joined the Order of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin immediately after its organization, and attended every convention held by said Order. He introduced the first resolution creating the reserve fund, which is now the most prominent feature of said Order, of which he is a State director, which office he has held for eight years. He was secretary of St. Mary's congregation of Wausau, Wisconsin, for eleven years, and chairman of the building committee during the time that congregation built its beautiful church and school buildings.

Catholic Order of Foresters.

A GROWING desire for the establishment of an association which would furnish the benefits of a Fraternal Insurance Society to the Catholic laity, resulted in the organization of the Catholic Order of Foresters, in Holy Name Parish, Chicago, and to which a charter was granted by the State of Illinois, May 20, 1883. The success of the undertaking was never for a moment in doubt, the rapid growth and spread of the Order, from its inception, bordering on the phenomenal.

On September 11, 1887, this Order became a recognized institution in the State of Wisconsin, Holy Rosary Court, No. 67, being organized at that time. Here again the growth of the Order proved remarkable, St. John's Cathedral Court, No. 71, St. Patrick's Court, No. 73 and St. Gall's Court, No. 77, following in quick succession. The spirit of emulation became general throughout the State, St. John's Court, No. 105, of Antigo; St. Mary's Court, No. 118, of South Kaukauna; St. Joseph's Court, No. 120, of Waukesha, and Appleton Court, No. 132, of Appleton, being soon added to the number.

Nor was the good work confined to the limits of this State, no better evidence of which is forthcoming than in the high appreciation shown of labors performed by the Wisconsin delegates at each succeeding annual session. As a further recognition of this unexpected though thoroughly welcome activity on the part of its representatives, the annual session, held in 1889, paid a handsome tribute to Wisconsin in the election of Brother John O'Neil of St. John's Cathedral Court, No. 71, to the office of High Vice-Ranger of the Order, to which position he was reëlected in the following year. He was succeeded by Brother John F. Kelly, also of St. John's Court, who held the office until 1893, when Brother T. J. Callen was elected to succeed him. Brother Callen also served as High Vice-Ranger for two years, when he was elected High Treasurer of the Order, at the annual session held in Ottawa, Canada, during 1895.

Pursuant to a law passed by the annual session held at St. Paul in 1894, the first state session was called to order at Milwaukee, Tuesday, June 4, 1895, by H. V. C. R., T. J. Callen. Sixty-five Courts were represented at the session, among that number being all of the most prominent ones in the State. At this meeting also were elected the following State officers: State Chief Ranger, T. J. Callen, Milwaukee; Vice-Chief Ranger, J. W. Dunnegan, Stevens Point; State Secretary, Francis J. Ricket, Milwaukee; State Treasurer, Louis Sonntag, Sheboygan; Trustees, Gustave Keller, Appleton; Michael Colbert, Racine, and John Brehm, Waukesha.

The rapid growth of the Order in Wisconsin can better be appreciated when it is understood that since September, 1887, eighty-one Courts have been established in the State, the total membership now being considerably over 6,000.

As a benevolent institution the Catholic Order of Foresters has proved a most gratifying success, far beyond, in fact, the most sanguine expectation of its inceptors. It now stands one of the greatest Catholic organizations in the United States, having 640 Courts, whose combined membership is computed at between 40,000 and 50,000. Since first organized it has expended some $500,000 in the payment of sick benefits and funeral expenses, besides over $1,500,000 in endowments for the relief of the widows, orphans and dependents of deceased members.

A fairly thorough idea of the present condition of the national organization may be obtained from the following semi-annual statement but recently issued by High Treasurer T. J. Callen. This report shows a most flattering financial condition of the Order as will readily be observed by a careful perusal of the following figures. Receipts (endowment), for the six months beginning January 1, 1898:

January, $37,857.67; February, $33,603.69; March, $41,705.51; April, $37,483.07; May, $39,090.77; June, $39,375.23; making a grand total for the half year of $229,115.94 in endowment payments.

The receipts in general funds were: January, $1,795.65; February, $10,568.87; March, $6,983.06; April, $2,390.69; May, $1,907.33; June, $2,418.01; making a total of $26,063.61, or a grand total in receipts in both departments of $255,179.55.

The expenditures are given as follows: Payment in death losses in January, $25,250; February, $41,125; March, $39,000; April, $33,000; May, $54,000; June, $26,000; making a total in death losses of $218,375.

From the general fund expenses were paid amounting in the aggregate for the six months to $25,668.92. This makes a total in disbursements since January of $244,043.92, leaving a balance in the treasury of the receipts during the past six months, of $11,135.65, added to which is a balance on hand January 1, 1898, of $72,229.48, which makes a grand total on hand July 1, of $83,365.48.

Thomas J. Callen, High Treasurer of the Catholic Order of Foresters, was born on a farm in Caledonia, Racine County, Wisconsin, in 1858. His early years were spent on the farm and in attendance at the district school. He later attended the State Normal School at Whitewater, Wisconsin, completing the two years' normal course. He then engaged in teaching for about eight years in the district schools of the counties of Racine, Milwaukee and Washington. In 1883 he settled in Milwaukee, and took the agency for the circulation of the Chicago and Milwaukee papers, in which line he built up a successful and profitable business.

Upon joining the Order, Mr. Callen connected himself with St. Gall Court No. 77, in which he held the office of Chief Ranger for a period of four years, after having first held other positions of trust. In 1893 Mr. Callen was elected High Vice-Chief Ranger of the Order, and was reëlected at the convention held in St. Paul in June, 1894. At the convention held in 1895 in Ottawa, Canada, he was elected to the office of High Treasurer, which, on account of the great amount of money now being handled by the Order, is one of the most important executive offices.

Mr. Callen, with his wife and four children, resides in Milwaukee. He is well known throughout the Order, particularly in the State where he resides, the delegates from the courts in that jurisdiction having shown their esteem for him by electing him at two successive State conventions to the office of State Chief Ranger. In both of the offices which he holds, viz.: High Treasurer and State Chief Ranger, Mr. Callen has shown remarkable executive ability, and there are few workers in the cause of Forestry who can point to greater results than he in that great work.

Louis Sonntag, present State Treasurer of the Order, was born in Bergheim (Alsace) on the 16th day of April, 1854, and is the second son of Sebastian and Marie Anne (nee Zehler) Sonntag. He attended the parochial schools until fourteen years of age, after which he assisted his father in cultivating his vineyards, and other similar work, until after the Franco-Prussian War, when Alsace was attached to the German Empire. On July 19, 1871, he left the parental roof in company with his brother, and came to the United States, arriving in Dayton, Ohio, on August 17. Until 1872 he attended college at St. Mary's Institute, of which his uncle, Brother Max Zehler, was director. He then entered the employ of Brownell and Killmeier, with whom he remained until 1877. On January 5 of that year he left Dayton for Fort Wayne, Indiana, where he remained until December 8, 1885. On December 11, 1885, he removed to Sheboygan, Wisconsin, where he has since resided.

On November 7, 1882, Mr. Sonntag was married to Catherine A. Myers, daughter of George and Rosa (McBennett) Myers. They have seven children, four girls and three boys, the five oldest of whom attend the Holy Name School. Mr. Sonntag is a member of the Holy Name congregation and is one of the trustees of that parish, and a member of the school board. He has been elected State Treasurer, Catholic Order of Foresters, three consecutive years, Financial Secretary of Branch 13, Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, seven consecutive years, and is still holding various offices in local Catholic societies.

Gustave Keller, present State Secretary of the Catholic Order of Foresters in Wisconsin, was born of German parents in Hoboken, New Jersey, January 17, 1868. When six years of age he removed with his parents to Appleton, Wisconsin, where he attended St. Joseph's parochial school, and afterwards De Land's Business College. When sixteen years of age he became an apprentice to his father, who was a watchmaker and State Officers of the Catholic Order of Foresters.

Gustave Keller, State Secretary, Appleton.
J. W. Dunnegan, Vice Chief Ranger, Stevens Point.
John Brehm, Waukesha.
Michael Colbert, Racine.
T. J. Callen, State Chief Ranger, Milwaukee.
Louis Sonntag, State Treasurer, Sheboygan.
F. J. Stiglbauer, Milwaukee.
Very Rev. J. J. Fox, Chaplain, Green Bay.

jeweler. Here he remained for two years, after which he went to New York, where he spent three additional years in acquiring his trade. From there he went to Kansas City, Missouri, where he remained for three years. In June, 1892, he associated himself with his father in the jewelry business at Appleton, Wisconsin, under the firm name of K. T. Keller and Son.

In June, 1893, Mr. Keller was married to Miss Therese Leimer of Appleton. They have two children, a boy and a girl aged three years and twelve months respectively. Since thirteen years of age Mr. Keller has always been active in Catholic society circles. At present he is a member of Appleton Court No. 132, Catholic Order of Foresters, of which he is Past Chief Ranger; he is also Recording Secretary of Appleton Branch No. 6, Catholic Knights of Wisconsin; a member of St. Joseph's Benevolent Society, and an honorary member of the St. Aloysius' Young Men's Institute. He is one of the directors of the Appleton Free Public Library, to which office he was appointed by the Mayor of the city. At the first annual convention of the Wisconsin State Court, Catholic Order of Foresters, held at Milwaukee June 4th and 5th, 1895, he was elected State Trustee, and at the second annual convention held at Appleton June 2 and 3, 1896, he was elected State Secretary, and reëlected at the third annual session held at Green Bay August 21 and 22, 1897.

John Brehm, a member of the present State Board of Trustees of the Catholic Order of Foresters of Wisconsin, was born in the town of Vernon, Waukesha County, Wisconsin, on September 15, 1857. He attended the country school until fifteen years of age, and then took a four years' course at Carroll College. At the age of nineteen he accepted the position of assistant book-keeper with M. and L. Stein of Milwaukee, in whose employ he remained five years, the last two years being head book-keeper. When they removed their business to Chicago he resigned his position, and in January, 1880, formed a partnership with Mr. William Hepp, the firm name being Hepp and Brehm, doing a general mercantile business. In 1885 the firm dissolved partnership and he associated his brother Philip with him, the firm being Brehm Brothers. In January, 1894, he started another store for clothing exclusively, and they are now running the two stores.

John Brehm has been remarkably successful in his financial undertakings, as his accumulations are almost wholly the fruit of his own labor. Besides owning the store building in which he began business and a valuable lot adjoining, he has a good residence and other property, and is also a stockholder in the Waukesha National Bank. On June 13, 1882, he was married to Miss Maggie Rickert, a native of the Empire State. Mrs. Brehm died December 10, 1892. At the time of her death but one child, John J., survived, four having preceded her, three of whom died in infancy, and one, Katie, at the age of two years. In the loss of his family Mr. Brehm has been remarkably unfortunate. Within two weeks in 1894 his only surviving son, his sister and two of his brother's children were taken from him by that dread disease, diphtheria.

On November 24, 1896, Mr. Brehm was married to Miss Lillian Weber, by whom he has one child, Annita. He has served two years as president of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, Branch No. 40, and seven years as treasurer of the Catholic Order of Foresters, Branch No. 120. He is also serving a second term as Trustee of State Court, Catholic Order of Foresters.

Politically Mr. Brehm is a Democrat and by his party has been elected to a number of official positions, among them being two terms on the Village Board as Trustee, and one year as Chairman of the Town of Waukesha, being the only Democrat that came out victorious at that election. In January, 1896, when the village of Waukesha was incorporated as a city, Mr. Brehm was elected its first Mayor. In the fall of 1896 he was nominated for Sheriff of Waukesha County against his wishes and was defeated in the election with the balance of the ticket. He is also a member of the School Board of the city of Waukesha.

Catholic Total Abstinence Union.

"IT has been a singular privilege of the writer," says the Rev. James O'Malley, rector of St. Peter's Church, Oshkosh, in a recent communication upon this subject, "to have been at the first convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Wisconsin, which took place at Watertown, under the auspices of St. Bernard's Church, on June 18th and 19th, 1872, and have attended each annual convention from then until the present time. The Rev. P. P. Cooney, S. S. C., was pastor of St. Bernard's congregation at that time. The election of officers took place on June 19, 1872, resulting in the election of the Rev. G. L. Willard, of Fond du Lac, as president; Dr. D. W. Nolan, of Milwaukee, as recording secretary; W. D. Stacy, of Watertown, corresponding secretary; Rev. James O'Malley, of Montello, treasurer, and John Clark, of Beaver Dam, sergeant-at-arms. Each year, during the month of June or July, local total abstinence societies meet in convention, and always with good results. The Wisconsin Union celebrated its Silver Jubilee at Barneveld on June 30, 1896. The officers of this organization are elected each year at the conventions, and State Officers of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Wisconsin.

Miss Nellie Kane, Ex-Secretary, Ashland.
Miss Agnes M. Brooks, Secretary, Watertown.
Rev. Jas. O'Malley, Vice-President, Oshkosh.
Rev. L. P. O'Reilly, President, Ridgeway.
J. C. Donohoo, Treasurer, Cuba City.
Rev. James Campbell, Ex-official, Elroy.

there is no salary paid to any of them. The amount of good done by the Total Abstinence Union is invaluable, as many persons have been reclaimed from drunkenness, bringing peace and happiness to many homes where discord and ill-feeling formerly prevailed. After joining the Total Abstinence Union, many a man has become a good husband and a kind father, who had sadly neglected his family before. Besides, many of the young people have been preserved from becoming a source of sorrow to their parents, as well as a cause of scandal to the Catholic Church of Wisconsin. The Total Abstinence Union of America, together with her numerous State and Diocesan unions, aided by her local societies, has noble branches spreading far and wide which have been the most powerful factors for the past twenty-eight years in making the Catholic Church in many places respectable and respected by our separated brethren, where her members were heretofore a reproach to her. The Union of America can safely boast of a vast army of eighty thousand pledged to total abstinence, and in her ranks may be found archbishops, bishops, priests in great numbers, cadets, besides thousands upon thousands of ladies, as well as gentlemen, the best members of the Catholic Church. Many people outside the Catholic Church have been most kind in aiding the Catholic Total Abstinence movement in Wisconsin, as well as in other places in fair and free America."

From Miss Agnes M. Brooks, the present secretary of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of Wisconsin, we also gather the following facts:

From the first organization, which was the nucleus of all that followed, has grown up in the State twenty-five branch unions, with a membership of twelve hundred. Since the doors have been thrown open for the admission of all proper persons who will avow the solemn pledges without distinction of nationality, sex or religious creed, there are more men and women engaged in the work with conformity to the laws and regulations of the Union than have ever before been gathered under any name.

One of the most ardent advocates of the cause was the Rev. James Cleary, formerly of Kenosha, who held the office of President for several terms. He is now a resident of Minnesota, and President of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America.

Throughout the almost twenty-seven years' existence of our State Union, the Rev. James O'Malley, of Oshkosh, a former President, has stood steadfast by the cause, and during that long period his energetic presence has not been missed at a single convention. To these men, ably aided by such earnest co-workers as Fathers Cooney, Ward, and many others, may be attributed a great portion of the merit. The last convention of the State Union was held at Elroy July 13-15, 1897, at which time the following officers were elected: President, the Rev. L. P. O'Reilly, of Ridgeway; Vice-President, the Rev. James O'Malley, of Oshkosh; Second Vice-President, Miss Helen Filbern, of Milwaukee; Third Vice-President, the Rev. J. J. Salentin, of Mount Horeb; Secretary, Miss Agnes M. Brooks, of Watertown; Treasurer, Mr. J. C. Donohoo, Cuba City.

German Roman Catholic Central Society.

FIFTY years ago there were but very few German Catholic benevolent societies in existence in the United States. The first was the St. Georgius Society, founded in St. Nicholaus congregation of the City of New York in 1842. In the year 1845 this Society was merged into the St. Joseph's Benevolent Society, established by the Rev. Gabriel Rumpler, C. S. S. R. In the course of years a number of Catholic organizations were formed and these Societies kept on multiplying rapidly, the further need was felt of bringing together the different Local Societies into a general organization, thereby enabling the members of any Local Society when moving to some other place to join the Society established there and receive all its benefits without any further formality of payments. The late Archbishop Heiss of Milwaukee, then pastor of St. Mary's Church, wrote in 1847 to the Rev. Father Rumpler inquiring about the character of a certain German secret society by the name of Sons of Hermann. Father Rumpler replied: "To prevent the Catholic men from joining societies forbidden by the Church, I have organized in my congregation a Catholic Benevolent Society, and I advise you to do the same." Following this advice, Father Heiss founded the St. Pius Society, which will celebrate its golden jubilee this year.

On the feast of St. Michael, September 29, 1854, the Presidents of all the German Catholic Benevolent Societies then existing in Buffalo, with the exception of St. Ludwig's Society, met in St. Alphonsus Hall. Following an exchange of opinions, it was decided to send a circular to all the German Catholic Societies in the country, recommending the establishment of a union by means of which to bring them into closer relations. Seventeen Societies responded to this circular, their representatives meeting at St. Alphonsus Hall, Baltimore, on Easter Sunday, April 15, 1855. The meeting, which lasted until April 19, was composed of delegates from the following societies: Deutscher Roemisch Katholischer Unterstützungs-Verein, St. Louis, John Amend; Deutscher Roemisch Katholischer Unterstützungs-Verein; St. Alphonsus Gesellschaft, Buffalo, Joseph Schutte; St. Joseph's Gesellschaft, Rochester, Ludwig Ernst; St. Peter's Verein, Rochester, George Messmer, Secretary; St. Alphonsus Gesellschaft, Buffalo, George Deuter; St. Joseph's Liebesbund, Washington, Peter Richter; St. Johannes Verein, Allegheny, Pa., Alois Hildebrandt; St. Bonifacius Wohlthätigkeits-Gesellschaft, Birmingham, Pa., Magnus Lagser; St. Michael's Unterstützungs-Verein, Birmingham, Pa., Michael End; St. Philomena Wohlthätigkeits-Verein, Pittsburg, Pa., John P. Buch; St. Michael's Verein, Buffalo, Franz Haeffner; St. Alphonsus Wohlthätigkeits-Verein, Pittsburg, Pa., Anton Meyer; St. Valentinus Hülfs-Verein, Allegheny, Pa., Casper Bauer; St. Alphonsus Gesellschaft, Baltimore, Md., Anton Blattau; St. Georgius Gesellschaft, Baltimore, Md., Johnson Mauser; St. Peter's Gesellschaft, Baltimore, Md., Franz Mueller; St. Stephen's Gesellschaft, Baltimore, Md., Franz Mueller. These Societies and delegates laid the foundation of that great organization which comprises at present nearly 600 Societies with 50,000 members living in the different States of the Union. The officers elected at the first Convention in 1855 were: President, Anton Blattau of Baltimore; Vice-Presidents, John Amend of St. Louis and Anton Meyer of Pittsburg; Recording Secretary, John Peter Buch of Pittsburg; Corresponding Secretary, George Messmer of Rochester, N. Y. A resolution was adopted to organize a Central Society of German Roman Catholic Benevolent Societies. The organization was placed under the patronage of the Holy Family, adopting as its device the words: "Blessed Be Jesus, Mary and Joseph." The Constitution said that only practical Catholics who fulfill their Easter duties, lead an honorable life, are dutiful children of the Church and obedient to Bishop and Pastor can become and remain members of the Central-Verein. Naturally, in the course of time some changes were made in the Constitution, but always in accordance with the ideas and principles enunciated at first. At the Twenty-sixth Annual convention held in Covington, Ky., in September, 1881, a Widows and Orphans' Fund was created in connection with this Society. In 1883 the Central Society was incorporated. The objects of the Central Society are: First, to foster the practice of religious duties and a Christian life and to promote Catholic interests. Second, to unite German Roman Catholic Societies in works of charity and benevolence, and assist Societies when in actual need in giving aid and assistance to their members; to nurse the sick and bury the dead. Third, to provide for a Widows and Orphans' Fund. Fourth, to provide for a system of legitimation, introduction and recommendation of members.

All members of Societies affiliated to the Central Society are required to send their children to a Catholic School, if possible, and all Societies are under the spiritual guidance of the pastor of the congregation in which they exist. This Constitution has received the approbation of several Bishops. The annual conventions in which the welfare of the Societies is taken care of were held in the following cities: Baltimore, Md., 1855, 1871, 1890; Buffalo, N. Y., 1856, 1866; Pittsburg, Pa., 1857, 1867; Rochester, N. Y., 1858, 1874; St. Louis, Mo., 1860, 1880, 1893; Zanesville, O., 1863, 1875; Erie, Pa., 1864; Milwaukee, Wis., 1865, 1882 and 1898; New York, N. Y., 1868, 1894; Chicago, Ill., 1869, 1887; Louisville, Ky., 1870, 1891; Dayton, O., 1872; Detroit, Mich., 1873, 1896; Philadelphia, Pa., 1876; Cleveland, O., 1877, 1889; Indianapolis, Ind., 1878; Newark, N. J., 1879; Covington, Ky., 1881; Evansville, Ind., 1883; St. Paul, Minn., 1884; Brooklyn, N. Y., 1885; Toledo, O., 1886; Dubuque, Ia., 1892; Albany, N. Y., 1895; Columbus, O., 1897.

The good work which the Central Society has done since its existence will be shown by the followig statement: From 1873 to 1895 there was paid by the Local Societies, united in the fold of the Central Society, in 70,229 cases of sickness the large sum of $166,044.76, and the payments to the widows and children of 8,229 members who died during these twenty-two years amounted to the still larger sum of $1,745,865.05. Furthermore, the Central Society has contributed toward various other charitable purposes the following sums:

For poor emigrants	$5,631.76
For sufferers through the forest fires in Wisconsin	603.00
For the sufferers by the great Chicago fire	6,607.44
For the Teachers' Seminary at St. Francis	5,026.89
For the sufferers through yellow fever in New Orleans	1,239.40
For rebuilding a burnt Church in Owensboro, Kentucky	173.89
For a new Church and Hospital in New Ulm, Minn.	1,669.00
For the sufferers by the great inundation in Germany in 1883	4,247.08
For the Indian Missions	340.00
For Peter's Pence	3,592.08
For the Catholic Church in Menominee, Mich.	1,408.27
A total of	$30,540.62

Anthony Gmeiner, treasurer of the State Central Society, is a well-known business man of Milwaukee. He was born in Bavaria, Germany, November 1, 1844, and came to Milwaukee with his parents on September 15, 1850. He was educated at St. Mary's and St. Joseph's schools. Mr. Gmeiner is a shoemaker by trade and one of the oldest members of St. Joseph's Catholic congregation.

Although the term of its officers is but one year, in the forty years of its existence the Central Society has had but nine Presidents, viz: Anton Blattau of Baltimore, 1855-1856; Franz Haeffner of Buffalo, 1856-1857; J. P. Buch of Pittsburg, 1857-1858; Christian Wieckmann of Buffalo, 1858-1860; John Amend of St. Louis, 1860-1868; Joseph Phillips of Milwaukee, 1868-1872; George Baldus of Buffalo, 1872-1873; H. J. Spaunhorst of St. Louis, 1873-1891; Adolph Weber of Racine, Wis., 1891-1895. The Central Society had honored Mr. Amend when he retired from the Presidency by electing him Honorary President for life, which honor was also conferred on Mr. Joseph Phillips, when retiring as President, and on Mr. H. J. Spaunhorst, who for nearly two decades was the Presiding Officer. The Central Society has also three honorary members, viz: Dr. E. M. Lieber, member of the German Parliament, who honored the Central Society with his presence at its Thirty-third Annual convention at Cincinnati in the year 1888; Monsignor J. Schroeder, Professor at the Catholic University in Washington, and the Rev. A. Schwenniger of New York.

At the Twenty-third Annual convention, held in Indianapolis, January, 1878, an agreement was made between the Central Society and the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union to the effect that all members of Benevolent Societies affiliated either to the German Roman Catholic Central Society or to the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union, who are provided with regularly issued traveling cards, shall in case of request be entitled to assistance. This certainly very beneficial arrangement is a pleasant evidence of brotherly feeling existing between the German and Irish Catholics.

At the General Convention of the Catholic Central Society held at Cincinnati, Ohio, from the 2d to the 5th of September, 1888, a resolution was adopted to organize Conventions in every State where the Central Society was in existence. According to this resolution the delegates of Wisconsin at the Thirty-fourth General convention in Cleveland in 1889 held a special meeting and selected a committee to make the necessary preparations for the First Annual States convention. The members of this committee were: Gustav Kaiser, Anton Bickel, John Lochemes, William Casper, Adolph Weber, William Finke, and Peter Boden. This committee met at West Bend, Wis., November 3, 1889, and resolved to hold the First Annual convention in Milwaukee, May 26, 27 and 29, 1890. All Benevolent Societies of the State were invited, each one being entitled to a representation of two delegates. The object of these conventions was stated to be: (1) The organization of Benevolent Societies in all German congregations where there are none in existence. (2) Connection of all societies with the Central Society. (3) Inducement to all Catholic men to join these societies. (4) To go hand in hand wherever the Catholic cause is in danger.

The first convention took place at Milwaukee, as scheduled, sixty-seven Societies being represented by their respective delegates. The negotiations were transacted in the "Deutsche Männerhalle," where resolutions were also adopted against the, at that time, notorious Bennett Law. Among the eloquent speakers present during the convention were, Archbishop Katzer, Bishop Flasch, the Rev. Fathers Lochemes, Wiedmann, Heldmann; Messrs. H. J. Spaunhorst, Theodore Kersten, P. J. Somers and others. Before the close of the convention La Crosse was chosen as the next place of meeting, and the following officers were also elected to serve during the ensuing year: President, Gustav Kaiser, First Vice-President, Egidius Hackner; Second Vice-President, John Gottsacker; Corresponding Secretary, Charles Miller; Recording Secretary, Anton Bickel; Treasurer, James Hahn.

The second State Convention of German Catholic Societies was held at La Crosse on May 18, 19 and 20, 1891. Archbishop Katzer, Bishop J. B. Cotter of Winona, Monsignor Zeininger and about fifty priests attended the convention. The business of the convention was transacted in St. Joseph's School Hall, seventy-seven Societies being represented. Sixty-eight of these belonged to the Central Society. Resolutions in favor of promoting the interest of the Catholic Schools were adopted at this meeting. Green Bay was selected for the next annual convention. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Gustav Kaiser; First Vice-President, John Nick; Second Vice-President, Henry Broecker; Corresponding Secretary, Gerhard Bong; Recording Secretary, Anton Bickel; Treasurer, Jacob Beth.

The Third State Convention, held in the Green Bay Opera House at Green Bay, on June 6, 7 and 8, 1892, had a larger attendance than either of its predecessors, representatives of eighty-seven Societies being present. Resolutions were adopted to establish an employment bureau, to admit the Societies of young men to assist members in need when traveling and to introduce the free school system in the Catholic Schools. On the latter subject Archbishop Katzer spoke very strongly,

Officers of the State German Catholic Central Society.

Jacob Kober, Recording Secretary, Appleton.

Anton Bickel, Corresponding Secretary, Milwaukee. Theo. Kersten, President, Chilton. C. Roemer, First Vice-President, Appleton.
Chas. B. Miller, Second Vice-President, La Crosse. A. Gmeiner, Treasurer, Milwaukee.

favoring the free school system in words of unstinted praise. It was decided at this meeting to hold that Convention in 1893 at Sheboygan. The officers elected at this meeting were President, Gustav Kaiser; First Vice-President, Frank Gottsacker; Second Vice-President, Charles B. Miller; Corresponding Secretary, Anton Bickel; Recording Secretary, Joseph Hammes; Treasurer, Gottlieb Kleefisch.

The Fourth Annual Convention was held at Sheboygan May 14, 15, 16, 1894, ninety-nine Societies, or a total membership of 8,573 being represented. Resolutions were adopted for creating a School Board for promoting the interests of the Catholic Schools, Arch-Bishop Katzer and Bishop Messmer both addressing the delegates on this subject. Racine was decided upon for the next Convention. The following officers were elected: President, Theodore Kersten; First Vice-President, Henry Broecker; Second Vice-President, Charles B. Miller; Corresponding Secretary, Anton Bickel; Recording Secretary, John P. Hegner; Treasurer, Christian Roemer.

The Fifth Annual Convention took place at Racine May 25, 26 and 27, 1896. Here the meetings were held and business transacted at the Casino Hall. One hundred and nine Societies were represented at this Convention, 216 delegates being present. This proved to be the largest as well as most interesting meeting yet held, Catholics from all parts of the State being in attendance. Among other business transacted, resolutions with reference to a Bureau of Immigration were adopted. A Committee was also appointed to take necessary legal steps providing that Catholic children when released from the Industrial School at Sparta should be placed in Catholic families. Archbishop Katzer and Bishops Messmer and Schwebach each addressed the delegates on this subject. Appleton was selected as the place of meeting for the sixth Convention to be held. The following officers were elected: President, Theodore Kersten; First Vice-President, Christian Roemer; Second Vice-President, Charles B. Miller; Corresponding Secretary, Anton Bickel; Recording Secretary, Jacob Kober; Treasurer, Anton Gmeiner.

Theodore Kersten, president of the German Catholic State Society of Wisconsin, was born July 3, 1842, in Prussia. He came with his parents to America in 1855, locating in Calumet County, Wisconsin. He was elected County Clerk of Calumet County in 1868, which office he held for six years. He organized the German Exchange Bank in Chilton in January, 1875. Mr. Kersten has a family of eight children.

Jacob Kober, recording secretary of the State Organization, came to Appleton, Wisconsin, in April, 1854. He was one of the pioneer German Catholics of the St. Joseph's Church, and a charter member of the German St. Joseph's Benevolent Society, organized in 1868, of which he was president at three different times. In 1885 he became a member of Branch No. 6, Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, and was elected Financial Secretary and Treasurer of that Order at the last annual meeting. He was elected Recording Secretary of the "Staats-Verband" of the German Catholic Benevolent Societies of Wisconsin, at its last meeting at Racine, Wisconsin.

In 1862 he enlisted in Company A, Second Regiment Wisconsin Cavalry, but was discharged in December, 1862, on account of disability. He reënlisted in 1863 in Company I, Thirty-second Regiment Wisconsin Infantry, in which he served till the end of the war. Mr. Kober was alderman of the Third Ward of the city of Appleton during the years 1875-1884, and from 1893 to 1898. Since 1872 he has been engaged in the dry-goods, clothing and gents' furnishing business.

Charles B. Miller was born in the city of La Crosse, Wisconsin, on September 13, 1856. He attended the parochial schools at La Crosse and later took a classical course in the Seminary at St. Francis, and a philosophical and theological course at that of the Benedictine Fathers at Collegeville, Stearns County, Minnesota. He, however, decided that the priesthood was not his vocation and returned to his home at La Crosse, where he immediately commenced the study of law. He was admitted to the bar in December, 1881, and soon after opened up an office in the city of La Crosse, where he has since practiced. He is the senior member of the firm of Miller and Wolfe, a firm enjoying a lucrative practice. He has for the past ten years been one of the directors of the Order of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, and is successor to Judge John C. Ludwig, of Milwaukee, as chairman of the Anti-Bennett Law Committee (now called Anti-Proscriptive Committee). For the past eight years he has been on the Executive Board of the Union of the German Catholic Benevolent Societies of the State of Wisconsin.

Christopher Roemer was born on the 17th of December, 1848, in Erlinghausen, Westphalia, Germany. He came with his parents to America in 1852, living for one year at Troy and Buffalo, New York, after which he came west to Milwaukee, where he resided until 1858. He then removed to Appleton, Wisconsin, where he has since resided. Mr. Roemer's educational advantages were somewhat limited, being confined in all to two terms in St. Joseph's parochial school in Milwaukee, and four terms in the district school at Appleton. When eleven years of age he commenced work in a stove factory, in which he remained for three years, after which time he began learning the shoemaker's trade, which he followed for twenty-three years. In the meantime he attended a business college for two terms, and always having a love for self-culture, he was quite an extensive reader. In 1881 he entered the newspaper business, associating himself with John Klinker, who was then publishing a German paper, the "Beobachter am Winnebago," which plant was removed to Appleton and the name of the paper changed to "Appleton Wecker," which then appeared in an enlarged form, advocating Democratic principles. In 1885 he became sole proprietor of the paper, and giving up the shoe business, devoted his whole time to its management, fitting himself for the editorial work, which he afterwards undertook.

Mr. Roemer is a member of various Catholic organizations; he is president of local Branch No. 6 of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, and secretary of the local Branch of Family Protective Association; he is also a member of the St. Joseph's German Catholic Benevolent Society of Appleton. He has been a member of the executive committee and state treasurer of the state organization of the German Catholic Benevolent and Young Men's Societies, of which he is now the first vice-president.

Knights of St. George.

THE Knights of St. George is a military and benevolent organization which was established by Captain A. Gmeiner on May 15, 1879, since which time it has, under the careful management of its executive officers, shown a healthy and prosperous growth. Captain Gmeiner, who conceived and carried out the idea of organizing this military and benevolent order, is among the well-known business men of Milwaukee, having become a leading and successful citizen by dint of energy and close attention to business, which, however, it may in all fairness be said, has been accomplished without neglecting any of those public duties which the community has a right to expect of its citizens.

Captain Gmeiner came to Milwaukee in 1850, when but a small child, and his education was obtained altogether in the public and private schools of the city. When the Civil War broke out, he enlisted in the Sixteenth United States Infantry, with which he served for three years. During that period, he saw much active service, being twice wounded at the battle of Stone River. He was commissioned first lieutenant and captain by Gov. Lucius Fairchild. At the close of the War, Captain Gmeiner entered upon a commercial career, which has resulted in his present very satisfactory business relations. In 1883 he was elected supervisor of the Ninth Ward, in the city of Milwaukee, and was also Chairman of the Committee on Asylums and of the Board. Later, he was appointed by Governor Peck a Trustee of the Milwaukee County Chronic Insane Asylum for a term of five years, and is also at the present time a director of the St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum, having been elected as such from St. Joseph's parish.

Capt. A. Gmeiner.
Captain Knights of St. George.

The present officers of the Knights of St. George are as follows: A. Gmeiner, president; Joseph Gleisner, vice-president; Andrew Stegemeyer, secretary; Rudolf Nau, recording secretary; C. F. A. Hintze, treasurer; Joseph Kroha, J. Sallmann, J. Urban, trustees; George Berghamer, captain; George Schlehlein, first lieutenant; John Venhaus, second lieutenant; John Gmeiner, quartermaster.

Leo's Benevolent Society.

LEO'S Benevolent Association of the Roman Catholic priests of the diocese of Green Bay was incorporated on December 23, 1879, by the Right Rev. Francis Xavier Krautbauer, the Rev. Father Katzer and the Rev. Norbert Kersten, of Green Bay. The above named, as well as the Rev. Edward Walsh, of Fort Howard, the Rev. M. Schwebach, of Oconto, the Rev. Roman Scholter, of Manitowoc County, the Rev. Nicholas July, of Portage County, and the Rev. H. Annen, of Winnebago County, associated themselves for the purpose of forming a corporation pursuant to the Revised Statutes of Wisconsin, for the support of the members in case of sickness or misfortune, and for the maintenance of infirm and aged Roman Catholic priests, belonging to the diocese of Green Bay. The corporation is formed without capital stock, and all property, real and personal, which accrues to the organization, is vested in its name, and devoted solely to the purpose as previously stated.

The officers of the corporation are the president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, a board of five directors, and a committee on grievances. Of this body, the Bishop of the diocese of Green Bay and his successors are ex-officio president, as well as one of the directors, and the duties of the officers are the same throughout as those of similar character in like organizations. All the officers except the president are elected for a period of two years, or until their successors are elected or qualified. In cases of death or removal, vacancies are filled by the appointment of the president.

The organization is composed of Catholic priests belonging to the diocese of Green Bay, or at least laboring in this diocese, none other being eligible. The membership is $10.00, and the annual contribution $10.00, payable semi-annually.

The first meeting of St. Leo's Benevolent Society was held on December 3, 1879, since which time biennial meetings for the election of officers, and other business pertaining to the society, have been held at the city of Green Bay.

The last financial report of the Association, which was made October 14, 1896, makes the following showing: Income: December 15, 1895, cash on hand, $652.15; interest on loans and contributions, $1,254; total, $1,906.15. Expenditures: Sick benefits, $395.00; refunded, $20.00; printing, $37.46; loans, $700.00; total, $1.152.46. Cash balance, $753.69. The assets of the Assocation are: Loans, $9,500.00; cash, $753.69; total, $10,253.69. There are no liabilities.

The present officers of this organization are, the Right Rev. S. G. Messmer, Bishop of Green Bay, president; the Very Rev. J. J. Fox, Vicar-General, vice-president; the Rev. C. Lau, rector of St. Francis Xavier Cathedral congregation, secretary; the Rev. N. Hens, Chilton, Wisconsin, treasurer. The Revs. J. O'Malley, Oshkosh, L. Ricklin, Green Bay, and J. Verstegen, De Pere, board of directors; the Revs. A. Broens, Duck Creek, J. Geissler, Kaukauna, and F. Vaillant, Oconto, grievance committee.

The Society certainly has a very worthy and commendable object, that of assisting aged and infirm priests, for whose care there are otherwise no provisions made. It now has a fund of over $10,000 invested in church property in the diocese, and thus its future prosperity is assured.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART XIV.

Prominent Members of the Laity in Wisconsin.

Hon. John Black.

DR. BLACK is a native of the Province of Loraine, France, where he was born about seventy years ago. In 1844 the family came to the United States, locating on a farm near Lockport, New York, where the subject of this sketch passed a considerable portion of his younger days. At a later period, having become somewhat familiar with the language of the country, he started out for himself, obtaining employment in Lockport with a couple of his fellow countrymen who were extensively engaged in the wholesale grocery, wine and liquor business. With this concern he remained between two and three years, after which he, for a while, secured a position as clerk in a dry goods store in the same city. To add to the limited salary thus obtained, he also entered into a contract with Ex-Governor Washington Hunt, a resident at that time of Lockport, to dispose of certain real estate owned by him near the city, to German emigrants, who were rapidly settling throughout Niagara County. In this undertaking he was quite successful, the money made by him in the sale of these lands amounting to a considerable figure. The improved condition of his finances becoming known by his first employers, he was invited by them to become a partner in their business, which he did. Somewhat later he sold out his interest in the concern, and in the meantime, having been married, removed with his wife to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where they arrived in 1857. Here he at once engaged in the business with which he was identified extensively for many years following. Although not naturally a politician in that active and aggressive sense by which men are generally recognized as such, Mr. Black has, during his residence in Milwaukee, been elected to many offices of honor and trust. While a member of the Common Council, he devoted all his efforts to the establishment of a system of water works that would afford the best possible accommodations for all time. It was not an easy task, but by dint of perseverance and energy, his efforts were successful, and the present system of water works, which is now recognized as one of the best in the country, was established. He also has represented his district in both branches of the State Legislature, and was the author of several important bills. He was elected Mayor of Milwaukee at a time when the city was strongly Republican, and his experience during a portion of his career as such was of a character most novel, if not unequaled, in the history of Western municipalities. In the early part of his administration he was called away from the city to attend the obsequies of a relative, and during his absence the Republican members of the Common Council attempted a bold and dishonorable scheme to obtain possession of the municipal government. Their plans were all carefully and secretly perfected, and a special meeting of the Common Council was called to be held on Thursday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, although the usual meetings were held on Mondays. They intended, in fact, to revoke the appointments of the absent Mayor and elect partisan friends to the offices. Mr. Black was notified by telegraph of the plot, and arrived in Milwaukee one hour before the time appointed for the meeting, thus defeating the schemers and retaining his seat at the head of the municipal government. His entire administration was fearless, judicious and highly satisfactory, but he declined a renomination. In 1866 he was Democratic candidate for Congress but was not elected; in 1884 and 1888 he was delegated to the National Democratic Convention which nominated Grover Cleveland. He has always been a staunch and conscientious Democrat, espousing warmly the best principles of true Democracy; but in late years he has withdrawn entirely from active participation in political affairs, preferring the peaceful enjoyment of his home and friends to political honors.

Hon. John Black.

Mr. Black was married to Elizabeth Schoeffel, a daughter of Bernard Schoeffel, an attorney of Rochester, New York. His wife was a lady of refinement and a loving and devoted mother. It was a sore affliction to this happy family when she was called away. Mrs. Black died in January, 1891, sincerely mourned by a large circle of friends who will ever remember her with affection.

For the Cathedral of St. John's at Milwaukee, Mr. Black has at various times done valiant service, his most recent and notable donation being $10,000 for the building of a handsome spire as a memorial to his beloved wife. Mr. Black's home has been blessed with two daughters, one, Mrs. C. F. Clarke of Chicago, and the other, Elizabeth M., who presides over her father's beautiful home in Milwaukee.

Dr. James Anthony Bach.

DR. JAMES ANTHONY BACH, M. D., whose success in operations on the eye, ear, nose and throat, as well as the treatment of those organs, has made him famous beyond the limits of his native State, was born in Washington County, Wisconsin, on October 13, 1860. He is a son of Mathias and Anna Bach, both of whom are now hale and hearty, in spite of their more than four score years of life, and still live on the farm upon which they settled as a homestead half a century ago. Dr. Bach's earlier education was acquired in the public schools of his native county, and later continued in the State Normal Schools of the State, and University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor. Having completed his studies and taught in the public schools for a period of two years, he began his medical education at the age of twenty-one at Ann Arbor, graduating with honors from that institution of learning, in 1884. He then at once entered upon the general practice of his profession in the city of Milwaukee, gaining marked and gratifying success. Dr. Bach had even during his earlier studies manifested a predilection for investigations bearing upon diseases of the eye, ear and throat, and, greatly encouraged by his remarkable success as a physician, he finally decided, after three years of general practice, to enter the field of this most important specialty, feeling an additional security in making the attempt in the large and varied experience acquired by him as a practitioner. Consequently, in the fall of 1887, Dr. Bach turned his attention to the different schools in Europe, with a view to selecting the most thorough and successful among them as his seat for the further pursuit of those subjects. Having thoroughly satisfied himself regarding this matter, he at first went to Vienna, which has always been regarded as one of the greatest medical centers of the Old World. Here he remained for one year, under the personal direction of such renowned authorities as Professors Manthner, Fuchs, Politzer, Gruber, Stoerk, Schroeder, Urbantitsch, Stellwag, and others of equally high repute. He then went to Berlin, where he took a post-graduate operative course, under Professors Frankel and Hartman, and worked in the clinic of Drs. Hirschberg and Schweiger. Subsequently, Dr. Bach spent over five months in the large eye clinics of Paris,

Br. J. A. Bach.

where he received exceptional advantages in those held by Drs. De Wecker, Professor Panas, Landolt, and Galesowski.

Dr. Bach's special studies were completed in the city of London, where he spent some considerable time in the Moorfield Eye and Ear Hospital and the McKenzie Throat Hospital. With this educational equipment of over two years' experience in the best clinics of the world, Dr. Bach was well able to assume the responsibility of that comparison which an active competition with masters in the profession was bound to call forth.

That this confidence was well placed has been evidenced in the exceptional success which has accrued to him since the beginning, especially in surgical operations of all kinds on the eye, ear, nose and throat, which require the most cautious and delicate manipulation. Dr. Bach operates almost daily, so that the aggregate of his undertakings in this direction is very great, indeed.

Being of quite studious habits, the Doctor has, besides attending to professional duties, devoted considerable time to the development of his specialty, and in that line has made a number of valuable contributions to medical literature. Dr. Bach holds a professorship in this specialty in the Wisconsin College of Physicians and Surgeons, in which capacity he annually treats and operates hundreds of poor people without remuneration, devoting this work to charity. Among the Board of Directors of the College, the Doctor holds the position of Vice-President. Besides this, he is connected with several hospitals and institutions. He is also the specialist of Notre Dame Convent and Emergency Hospital, and belongs to several Milwaukee medical societies, as well as to the State and the National Medical Association.

Dr. Bach was married on June 24, 1896, to Catherine E. Pick, daughter of John and Marie Pick, her father being a prominent merchant at West Bend, Wisconsin. Mrs. Bach is a graduate of the West Bend High school, and later took a post graduate course at Longwood Convent, giving particular attention to the study of music and painting, in which she has become quite proficient. They have one child, a son.

Edward Cleary.

EDWARD CLEARY, the subject of this brief biographical sketch, is connected at the present time, as he has been for a number of years past, with the railway service, being a conductor on the Ashland Division of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. His home is at Antigo, in Langlade County, Wisconsin. Mr. Cleary was born in Lancaster, Worcester County, Massachusetts, on the 25th day of October, 1855, and is a son of Michael Cleary, who was a native of Ireland, having been born in that country in 1827. The grandfather of our subject after whom he is named, died in Ireland, in 1837, leaving a widow and six small children, Maurice, Garrett, Edward, Patrick, Michael and Ann, in indigent circumstances. They managed to get along, however, and in 1847, when twenty years of age, Mr. Cleary's father removed to the United States and settled in the State of Massachusetts. Here, subsequently, he was married to Mary Powers, also a native of Ireland, where she was born in 1830. To Michael and Mary Powers Cleary were born eight children, Maurice, who died in 1879, aged eighteen years, Edward, Michael,

Edward Cleary.

Ellen, Katharine and Margaret, and two who died in early infancy. Michael Cleary, the father of this family, came to Wisconsin in 1863, locating at first at Appleton. From there he shortly removed to a farm, but afterwards returned to the town in which he dwelt until the time of his death, which occurred during the month of March, 1895.

The subject of this sketch, Mr. Edward Cleary, was given the advantages of a good common school education, and remained at home on the farm with his parents until he was nineteen years of age. During this period he worked in the lumber camps of Northern Wisconsin for four years during the winter months, the summer being spent in assisting his father on the farm.

In the month of June, 1878, he first became interested in railroading, doing considerable work on the right of way for the new railway then in course of construction, for which he made a large number of ties. Having completed this work, he, in December following, began braking on what was then known as the Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western Railway, but is now the Ashland Division of the Northwestern system, and has ever since been steadily in the railroad service, being one of the oldest men on the division. Through strict attention to duties entrusted to him, Mr. Cleary has received promotion at the hands of the company from time to time, until in 1884 he was placed in charge of a passenger train. In 1886 Mr. Cleary removed to Antigo, in the future of which place he had acquired more than ordinary confidence. Here, in 1891, he erected a fine block on Fifth Avenue, beside which he is also interested in several other business structures erected in different portions of the city. He is also president of the J. C. Lewis Hardware Company, and is largely interested in the sale and purchase of outside lands. In addition to this he owns the largest farm in Langlade County, the same comprising an area of six hundred and forty acres, two hundred acres of which are under cultivation.

Mr. Cleary was married in 1882 to Miss Margaret Morrissey of Appleton, daughter of Patrick and Margaret (Landers) Morrissey, natives of Ireland, who emigrated to the United States many years ago. Mrs. Cleary is a sister of the Rev. John Morrissey, pastor of St. John the Evangelist congregation at Oshkosh, and also of Sister Ellen, who is a Sister of Charity of St. Agnes Convent at Fond du Lac. Politically, Mr. Cleary is a Republican, and as such has served his adopted city as a member of the county board and also as an alderman. In a social way he is an active member of the Order of Railway Conductors of America, of which he was a delegate to the Toledo, Ohio, convention in May, 1893, and also to the Atlanta, Georgia, convention in 1895, Los Angeles, California, 1897, from the lodge at Ashland. He also had the distinction of being the first Chief Conductor of the lodge at Ashland in 1889, being twice reëlected to that position, his term of office as such occupying a term of three years.

Ardent and consistent Catholics, Mr. and Mrs. Cleary, surrounded by their five children, John E., Agnes M., Raymond W., Emmet V., and Aloysius F., enjoy all of the amenities of home life in one of the finest residences in the city. As a result of the excellent record made by him during his life's work, Mr. Cleary is naturally highly gratified with his position as a railroad man, a service of which he is a zealous and unwearying admirer. He is also fortunate in numerous other attributes, being regarded by the thoughtful and conservative business men of the community as a person whose judgment on affairs in general is of much practical value.

Mrs. Wm. E. Cramer.

IT is a noteworthy fact that the example of giving liberally to enrich Milwaukee with works of art for the benefit of the people was set by a woman. The first treasure of permanent artistic value ever brought to this city and erected in a public edifice was the marble Pieta, by the Florentine sculptor, Giovanni Dupre, which was given to St. Gall's Church, in 1872, by Mrs. William E. Cramer. Mrs. Cramer's maiden name was Harriet Laura Barker. She was born in Fond du Lac County, but passed her girlhood days in Marquette County, where, at the early age of fifteen, she successfully engaged in school teaching. Since

Mrs. Wm. E. Cramer.

1863, when she came to Milwaukee and secured employment in the office of the Evening Wisconsin, her home has been in this city. Her marriage, in 1869, to William E. Cramer, the editor and senior proprietor of the Wisconsin, was followed by three years of European travel. Mr. and Mrs. Cramer had the memorable experience of being shut up for six months with the belaguered residents of Paris during the siege of that city by the Germans, and subsequently witnessed all the horrors of the Commune. In later years, the two have traveled extensively in the United States, Mexico and Central America, besides enjoying another European tour, in which they made a leisurely survey of Norway, Sweden, Finland and Russia. For many years, Mr. and Mrs. Cramer's home in Milwaukee was the Newhall House. They were asleep in that hotel early in the morning of the 10th of January, 1883, when the ill-fated edifice was destroyed by fire, with a loss of nearly one hundred human lives. Mrs. Cramer was awakened by the noise of the conflagration, and aroused her husband, whose impaired sight and hearing would have made his escape impossible but for her aid. At the imminent risk of her own life, she guided him to safety through the corridors filled with smoke and flames. Both she and her husband were so severely burned that for weeks after the fearful ordeal their recovery was uncertain. Mrs. Cramer has always taken an active part in charitable and other public-spirited work. Old newspaper reporters, recalling the days when Judge Mallory was on the bench, can tell of instances when she appeared at the morning sessions of his court with waifs in tow who, through her good offices, had been rescued from places of desolation, and were sent to asylums, where they were surrounded with wholesome influences, and trained to become useful members of society. She was instrumental in bringing the Sisters of the Good Shepherd to this city, and it was her influence that induced her husband to give them the ample grounds on which their building stands. In 1880, when the project of establishing a State Industrial School for Girls at Sparta was first brought prominently forward, and a bill for that purpose was introduced in the Legislature, the measure was recognized as prejudicial to the work in which the Sisters of the Good Shepherd were engaged, as well as to the interests of the Industrial School for Girls at Milwaukee, both of these institutions being in a stage of development in which they could not well bear the depletion of their resources that would have been occasioned by the competition of the Sparta school at that time. People alive to the importance of a religious environment for young girls in training for reclamation from wayward lives, felt that much was at stake. Mrs. Cramer and others, impressed with this view of the situation, went to Madison to oppose the passage of the bill, and, largely owing to her personal exertions, the Sparta Industrial School project was so signally defeated in the Legislature that its consummation was delayed for ten years. Shortly after, she enlisted her services in another enterprise of public concern. Although a large number of the inmates of the State Industrial School for Boys, at Waukesha, were of Catholic parentage, there had been no provision for their instruction in that faith. Mrs. Cramer was largely instrumental in securing the appointment to the State Board of Supervision of a gentleman who, while not himself a Catholic, appreciated the justice and wisdom of the claim that the door should not be closed against Catholic worship. It was opened, and the late Father Lalumiere improved the opportunity to visit the school at regular intervals and feed starving souls with the bread of life. In 1882, acting under an appointment from the Governor of the State, Mrs. Cramer was a delegate, representing Wisconsin, at the annual convention of the National Association of Charities and Reforms. She has since declined proffered appointments of this character, owing to the pressure of other duties. She and her husband were among the first who gave beds to the Milwaukee Emergency Hospital. Her largest and latest gift was that of the sightly polished granite pillars which are a striking feature of the massive architecture of the Church of Gesu, on Grand avenue. Mrs. Cramer is credited with being one of the best impromptu speakers among the ladies of Milwaukee. Her readiness as a speaker has caused her to be in great request as an entertainer at public charitable institutions, not only in Milwaukee, but also in the East, for the fame of her illustrated lectures has extended beyond the limits of the State. She is a student, as well as a lover of art, and is well read on subjects connected with art and history. Mrs. Cramer was one of the group of public-spirited women who raised the money for the creditable exhibition which was made by Wisconsin at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, in 1876. She was a life member of the Wisconsin Art Association, organized in this city in 1875, and has, for many years, been active in the Ladies' Art and Science Class. She is also a member of the Woman's Club, and a charter member of the Athenaeum Association, which she served in the capacity of treasurer for six years. Mrs. Cramer is of English and Irish descent. She has been admitted to membership in the Wisconsin branch of the Daughters of the Revolution, and is among the Milwaukeeans who are eligible to membership in the Society of Colonial Dames.

Ignaz Czerwinski.

No citizen among Milwaukee's extensive South Side population stands in higher esteem among his fellows than the subject of the present sketch. Mr. Czerwinski was born in the province of Posen, Prussian-Poland, in 1859, and in the schools of his native place acquired a part of his earlier education. In 1872, when about twelve years of age, he removed with his parents to the United States, locating at once in Milwaukee. Here he again took up the matter of his education, attending for some time following the boys' school which had been established by the priests of St. Gall's Church, and which was commonly known and designated as St. Gall's School. His school days ended, Mr. Czerwinski at once embarked upon a commercial career, working earnestly and well in behalf of those by whom he was employed. For years in this manner he struggled along, slowly, it is true, but surely winning his way into the confidence of his employers and business associates, all of whom were quick to appreciate those admirable and sterling qualities which mark the career of one whose motto is justice for his fellows as well as for himself.

Ignaz Czerwinski.

Being recognized as an exceptionally intelligent, energetic and trustworthy citizen, Mr. Czerwinski was honored by his fellow citizens in a substantial manner, being selected in 1890 for the important and responsible office of clerk of the courts for Milwaukee County, which position he filled with much credit to himself and the general satisfaction of those who had supported him.

Mr. Czerwinski is a staunch and ardent Catholic, and as such has also been called upon to fill numerous positions of honor. In 1896 he was elected president of the Polish Association of America, a purely Catholic organization, which is under the patronage of the Holy Trinity. He has also for the past fourteen years been a member of the Kosciuszko Guards, W. N. G., the only Polish-American military organization in the United States, and is a director as well as secretary and treasurer of that association. In addition he has always shown an active and earnest interest in all important Catholic or public movements. In private life Mr. Czerwinski is interested in the grocery and real estate business, in both of which undertakings he is well and favorably known. Mr. Czerwinski is also a member of the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners of Milwaukee.

Hon. Humphrey J. Desmond.

HON. HUMPHREY J. DESMOND, who is well known in Milwaukee and indeed throughout the State as lawyer, scholar and journalist, was born near Cedarburg, Ozaukee County, where his grandfather had settled in territorial days. In 1866 he removed with his parents to Milwaukee where he has since resided. He acquired his education in the common schools and high schools of that city, and subsequently graduated from the State University in 1880. Mr. Desmond was appointed a member of the Milwaukee School Board in 1883, and was re-appointed in 1885,

Hon. Humphrey J. Desmond.

1888 and 1890. He was elected to the Assembly in 1890, and is at the present time editor of the Catholic Citizen, a publication of much prominence in Catholic circles throughout the country. As a member of the Milwaukee School Board Mr. Desmond originated the movement for manual training in the public schools. In the Legislature of 1891 he acted as chairman of the Committee on Education and drew the compulsory education law which was enacted in place of the Bennett Law. He was one of the founders of the Western Summer School. Recently he has published two very successful books, "Mooted Questions of History" (now in its third edition), and "The Church and the Law." The latter book has been highly commended by Justice Pinney of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, Gen. Bryant, dean of the Law School, and other competent critics. Mr. Desmond is among the contributors to Charles Dudley Warner's Library of the World's Best Literature. Articles from his pen have also appeared in the North American Review, The Century, and The Forum.

Thomas Desmond.

THE Desmond family settled in Wisconsin in 1842, when the subject of this sketch, Thomas Desmond, was in his ninth year. His father, Humphrey, married Dorothy Allen, and subsequently emigrated to America in 1829. Later he removed from near Utica, New York, making a home for his family as one of the pioneer settlers of Ozaukee County in 1842. Here the youngest son of the family,

Thomas Desmond.

Thomas Desmond, grew to manhood. He had early followed the occupation of school teaching, devoting his summer to the cultivation of the farm homestead, which he subsequently inherited from his parents.

In 1866, having some years previously married Miss Joanna Bowe, he removed with his family to Milwaukee, where he has since resided. From 1866 to 1880, Thomas Desmond was secretary of the school board of Milwaukee, the scope and duties of which office were duly systematized under his management. Always keenly interested in education, he gave to his official work an earnest and personal interest, which the public and the Board recognized by repeated reëlections. In 1881 Mr. Desmond assumed the management for Wisconsin of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, one of the leading American life insurance companies, with which he has been connected for the past sixteen years. He has always identified himself with the Church and its interests. His was one of the first pioneer Catholic families of eastern Wisconsin. Mass was celebrated at his father's house in the early days before a church was built for the Cedarburg congregation, and he remembers Bishop Henni and Fathers Kundig and Morrissey as the guests at his home over night when on their missionary circuit. He was present at the consecration of St. John's Cathedral in 1853, of which congregation he is at the present time a member.

H. Dornbach.

H. DORNBACH was born on the second day of February, 1861, in Ozaukee County, Wisconsin, near Port Washington, in the village of Holy Cross. His father and mother are both natives of Luxemburg, the former emigrating to this country in July, 1848, while the mother came some six years later. A year following their arrival in the United States they were married, and at once settled in Ozaukee County, Wisconsin, where they are still living at the present time. Mr. Dornbach received his rudimentary education in the parochial schools at Holy Cross, where he continued to study until thirteen years of age. The year following he began life in earnest, starting out to earn his own living. Thus, until eighteen years of age, he worked for numerous farmers living in the vicinity of Fond du Lac, and finally moved to Milwaukee, where he acquired a thorough knowledge of the carpenter's trade, at the same time attending night school during the winter months. After three years of persistent effort in this direction, he made a protracted trip through the West, working at his trade in St. Peter's, Minnesota; Lincoln and Omaha, Nebraska; Denver, Colorado; Haley, Idaho, and Salt Lake City, Utah. After two years of continuous roving, during which time he acquired considerable knowledge and experience, he returned to Milwaukee and entered the employ of the Gruhl Company, manufacturers of sash and doors, etc., as foreman in the stair department. In the following spring he engaged in business on his own account, establishing himself as a carpenter and contractor, as such giving estimates and making contracts for the erection of buildings of all kinds throughout the city, or wherever opportunity afforded. Three years later he went to work as foreman for one of Milwaukee's most prominent contractors, devoting his spare time each evening to the study of architecture under the direction of a prominent city architect. Finally in May, 1893, having thoroughly prepared himself for the business, he opened an office at 506 Mitchell street, Milwaukee, where he has since been actively engaged in his dual capacity of architect and superintendent. During his four or five years' experience in this line, Mr. Dornbach has had charge of the construction of a number of large buildings in this city, among them being a block of flats for Mr. Anthony C. Schloegel, a similar structure for C. J. Seefeld, besides a large number of store and flat buildings too numerous to receive individual mention. He also had charge of the re-modeling of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum on Second and Greenfield avenues, built a parochial school at New Berlin, Wisconsin, the parsonage for St. Anthony's parish in Milwaukee and numerous other notable and valuable structures.

N. Dornbach.

Mr. Dornbach is an ardent and consistent Catholic, having been a member of St. Anthony's congregation for the past ten years, for five of which he has held the office of treasurer of the Board of Trustees. He is also an active member of St. Michael's Society connected with this congregation. He was married at the age of twenty-five to Miss Anna Bohmann, a native of Milwaukee, the ceremony being performed at Holy Trinity Church. His family at the present time consists of eight members.

William Dwyer.

OF the many men who have made their mark in life during the past twenty years and whose names have, therefore, become to a considerable extent associated with the history, growth and progress of the commonwealth of Wisconsin, none at least are entitled to more consideration than the subject of this sketch. This is not owing to any particularly startling incident or episode in his career which has brought him more prominently before the public than hundreds of others, but it is from a record of sterling integrity, honest endeavor and persistent effort that he has wrought out a position in his profession, the law, of which he has every reason to feel proud, and for which he is entitled to the congratulation of all good citizens. It is not to the individual instance that a community must look for well established and gratifying results as much as to the general tendency of a people collectively to advance. No individual has ever lived an upright and consistent life but what that life has had a marked effect upon those who have been brought into daily contact with it, and when the unit is multiplied the influence must naturally be still greater and more effective. It is to the concerted and genuinely persistent effort, then, rather than to that of a spasmodic nature, that we must in all candor yield the palm for the good influence that it has had or may have upon our fellow men.

W. D. Dwyer.

Mr. Dwyer's parents are both natives of Ireland, the father, also named William, having been born in Roscommon in 1817, while the mother, formerly Catherine Dalton, was born at the same place the year preceding. They were married in 1844 and came to this country in 1848, settling at once in Sullivan County, New York Both are still living.

William D. Dwyer was born at Liberty, Sullivan County, New York, September 22, 1859. His earlier education was received at the common schools of his native place, and afterwards at the Normal Institute there, the latter course being followed by one at Albany State Normal School and Cornell University. He graduated from the Albany Law School with the class of 1880, and at once established himself in an office at Liberty, where he continued in the diligent pursuit of his profession until 1885. During the year prior to leaving the State of New York, he was elected County Judge and Surrogate of Sullivan County, being the youngest person up to that date who had ever held the office. This position, naturally, he was compelled to resign when he removed West. After Mr. Dwyer had been a resident of West Superior for about a year, he formed a co-partnership with Frank A. Ross, and that business connection continues in active force to the present time. During the interim, however, there have been numerous changes made in the firm name; for instance: from 1887 to 1890 it was Ross & Dwyer, and from 1890 to 1892, Ross, Dwyer & Smith, from 1892 to 1893, Ross, Dwyer, Smith & Hanitch. In the latter year Judge Smith withdrew from the firm in order to assume the position of Judge of the Superior Court, and since that time the firm's name has been that of Ross, Dwyer & Hanitch. This legal partnership, in all of its different phases, has resulted in the members, under one name or another, being connected with some of the most interesting as well as important cases which have arisen for litigation at West Superior or within the northern part of Wisconsin for a number of years past.

Thomas Fitzgibbon, A. M., M. D.

THOMAS FITZGIBBON, A. M., M. D., was born in Troy, New York, March 1, 1854. His father was John Fitzgibbon, of Limerick City, Ireland, and his mother, Mary Airy, was also a native of the same place. In fact, he comes of good old Celtic stock. The family removed west at an early day, locating in Wisconsin, and the subject of this sketch received his primary education in the district school at Eden, Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, after which he took a business course at the Commercial College in Fond du Lac. For nine successive terms, he taught school in Calumet Village, Fond du Lac County, and for one year following was principal of a ward school in the city of Fond du Lac. It was at this time that he resolved to devote his life to the medical profession, and for the purpose of preliminary study entered the office of Drs. Dodge and Bowers at Fond du Lac, and afterwards graduated from Rush Medical College, Chicago, in 1882. After graduation, he practiced medicine at St. Cloud, Wisconsin, but, desirous of becoming a proficient in the science of gynecology, he went to Europe and studied at Freiburg, Berlin and Vienna, where he also acquired a thorough knowledge of German. Upon returning to the United States, he located with his brother in Plymouth, Wisconsin, where he remained in active practice for four years. In 1893 he was elected professor of diseases of women in the Wisconsin College of Physicians and Surgeons, and since that time has resided in Milwaukee, where he soon acquired much prominence as a surgeon and professor. Here, owing to his eminent fitness for the position he held, and the liberal education obtained both in this country and in Europe, he acquired additional honors, when in June, 1895, the faculty of Marquette College conferred upon him the degree of A. M. Dr. Fitzgibbon is a member of the American Medical Association, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin, the Brainard Medical Society, and Milwaukee Medical Society. In religion, he is a staunch exponent of the Catholic faith, besides being an active member of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, Catholic Order of Foresters, Knights of Columbus, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Catholic Benevolent Legion, the Young Men's Sodality, and the St. Thomas Society of Gesu Church. At the present time, he is attending physician of the Presbyterian Hospital, St. Francis Seminary, St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum, and the Convent of Assissi at St. Francis.

Dr. Thomas Fitzgibbon.

L. W. Flannigan.

L. W. FLANNIGAN is known throughout the northern portion of Wisconsin as one of the most successful lumbermen in Marinette and the Northwest. He is also a native of this State, having been born February 1, 1856, in Sheboygan County, and is a son of William Flannigan, who, though born in Ireland, came to this country while still a very young man. The father was married in Syracuse, New York, to Miss Margaret Sheridan, a native of that State, and cousin of the late renowned and lamented Phillip Sheridan. In 1855 the family concluded to move West, coming to Wisconsin, where they finally settled at Mitchell, Sheboygan County, the father purchasing a tract of Government land, for which at that time he paid one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre. After devoting several years to the improvement of this property, he moved to Fond du Lac County, where he opened up another farm, upon which he remained until the time of his death, in 1879. The earlier days of young Flannigan were devoted to work upon the paternal acres and in attending the common schools of his home county. Finally, when but seventeen years of age, he removed to Marinette, Wisconsin, where he at once engaged in the lumber business, working in the woods and familiarizing himself with all departments of the business. Thus, he continued working for various firms, logging on the Menominee and Oconto Rivers until the year 1886, when he engaged in the business on his own account, forming a partnership with John E. Lennigan, the firm name being that of Lennigan and Flannigan. These two conducted a business together on the Menominee River until September, 1892, when the Fence River Logging Company was organized, its members being L. W. Flannigan, J. E. Lennigan, and Fred E. Carney, Jr., of Marinette. The company is now one of the most extensive in that section of the country, furnishing steady employment to from three hundred to four hundred men. In order that some more substantial idea of the extent of this business may be obtained, it may be well to note that during the season of 1894-'95, this company cut thirty-four million feet of timber on the Fence, Net and Michigamme Rivers. In connection with this business, the Fence River Logging Company also owns two valuable and extensive farms, comprising eight hundred acres, both of which are situated in Menominee County, Michigan. One of these farms ranges along the Menominee River, and is very productive. There are now altogether some seven hundred and fifty acres of this property under cultivation, the farms proving a really valuable addition to the company's other business.

Mr. Flannigan has been a continuous resident of Marinette for the past twenty years, during which time he has witnessed all of the material changes which have marked the growth and prosperity of that interesting community. He is also recognized as a leading factor in the city's prosperity, the industry with which he is so prominently connected being in itself a great incentive to the county's advancement. It is during all these years of earnest and energetic business life that he has won for himself the esteem and respect of his fellows, for not only has he found time to advance the interests of his own immediate business, but has also been ever ready and willing to stretch forth a helping hand in the application of any enterprise which might indicate a chance to benefit the home of his adoption, as may be readily judged from the foregoing. Mr. Flannigan is entirely a self-made man, owing his present prosperous and responsible position to his own unaided efforts and determination to succeed.

L. W. Flannigan.

Mr. Flannigan was married at Oconto, Wisconsin, in 1887, to Miss Lucy N. Good, a native of that city, and a daughter of George Good, one of the earliest settlers in Oconto. Two children are the result of this union, Marion, aged seven, and Helen, aged five. Mr. Flannigan is a Roman Catholic, and communicant of Our Lady of Lourdes' congregation. He is a member of the Branch of Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, associated with this parish, and also of Marinette Lodge, Knights of Pythias. In politics, he is a Democrat, although not taking any particularly active part in public affairs.

Charles G. Forster.

DR. CHARLES G. FORSTER is a native of the State of Wisconsin, having been born in the city of Milwaukee on the thirteenth day of August, 1858. His father was John Forster, a native of Bavaria, who in 1850 left that country and came to Milwaukee. It may also be regarded as somewhat of a coincidence that during the same year another party of emigrants came to Milwaukee from Bavaria, among the number being Miss Walbinga Gruber, who subsequently became Mr. Forster's wife. They were married in the old St. Joseph's Church in Milwaukee. In 1878 occurred the death of Mr. Forster, who had ever proved an indulgent and faithful father and loving husband. Mrs. Walbinga Forster still survives, residing on the old homestead in the city of Milwaukee.

The subject of the present sketch, Mr. Charles G. Forster, began the struggle of life at an early age. His education he acquired at St. Joseph's parochial school, from which institution, being a bright, industrious and intelligent lad, he graduated with highest honors. It was on the 20th of April, 1874, that he began his business career as office boy and assistant bookkeeper with J. S. Mabbett and Co., lumber dealers, finally becoming head bookkeeper for the firm, when, under one of the numerous changes to which it was at times subjected, it became known as Mabbett, Pillsbury and Co. Thus, in spite of the diversified ownerships marking its career, and which included, besides the ones already mentioned, those of O. P. Pillsbury and Co., E. Friend, Jr., and H. J. Mabbett and Co., he maintained a position of ever increasing responsibility with the business until 1879, in which year he went to work in the capacity of bookkeeper for Holzhauer and Forster, who had established a lumber yard on Cape Street, at the foot of Cherry Street. After working for this firm for a year, Mr. Holzhauer stepped out, disposing of his interest in the business to Charles G. Forster, who thus became an active partner. The business at this time, though healthy, was very small. The affairs of the concern remained in this condition until the year 1884, when it was formed into a stock company, of which Charles G. Forster is at the present time president and general manager.

Since the time in question, and under the able and energetic management of Mr. Forster, the business has broadened out and expanded to a degree but little expected even by a man of his reasonably sanguine temperament. As a result of this, Mr. Forster to-day not only conducts an extensive and increasing lumber business at Menomonie, Mich., but owns a boat which conveys the mill products to their various markets, and is somewhat extensively interested in various other commercial enterprises of recognized stability and worth. Thus, conscientious, conservative and diligent, he has, by years of accumulated toil and persistent effort, gathered about him a business of present unquestioned value and future undoubted success. It is indeed a pleasant theme to dwell upon, especially for one who has wrought so good and enduring a work as has Charles G. Forster.

Charles G. Forster.

Mr. Forster was married on the 23d day of November, 1892, to Miss Emily Viola Yahr, daughter of Senator Yahr, of Princeton, Wisconsin, and enjoys his beautiful home on Highland Boulevard in the society of his wife and children, Karl A., Gertrude Josephine and Viola Marie.

Paul Fox.

IN giving the history of the Church in the city of Green Bay, we believe it but just and fair to write more at length concerning one individual among the laity, who, according to common consent, did more than any other layman towards the formation of a Catholic congregation and the building up of a church after the destruction by fire of the old and only church at Shantytown (now Allouez) in 1847. We refer to Mr. Paul Fox, one of the early German settlers, who came to Green Bay in 1841 and lived there until his death, April 5, 1893.

After the destruction by fire of the old church at Shantytown on Christmas night, 1847, the little flock of Catholics in Green Bay had no place to worship. They were, however, visited occasionally by a priest, who gathered as many of the flock as possible in the home of Paul Fox, where the Holy Sacrifice was offered upon a bureau or commode and the Word of God preached. This old bureau has always been highly treasured by the family of Mr. Fox, and after his death it was removed to St. Catharine's Convent, Racine, Wisconsin, where the eldest child of Mr. Fox is a member of the Dominican Order, Sister M. Cecilia. It will, however, at some future time, be returned to Green Bay, and a suitable inscription placed upon it.

Some time in 1848, the Methodist denomination built a new church in Green Bay, and their old church was purchased by the Catholics and fitted up for divine service. It stood on the site of the present St. John's Church.

In 1851 the German portion of the congregation decided to separate and form a congregation by themselves. It was in the organization of this congregation, and later in the building of their church, that Mr. Fox was particularly active. He took it upon himself almost single-handed to collect the funds, going into the lumbering camps and mills, and among the scattered farmers, and soliciting among the citizens of Green Bay of all denominations. He was anxious to procure a bell for the church; but bells in those days were very expensive, and the means were wanting. The late Morgan L. Martin, whose name is highly honored by Green Bay citizens, was about that time candidate for County Judge. Mr. Fox assured him that if he promised to donate a bell in the event of his election, he would promise the necessary votes for him. Mr. Morgan was elected, and the bell was donated. This same bell was later presented to the church at Martinsville, Kewaunee County, was broken, since recast, and is still in use there.

Mr. Fox went all the way to New York to procure the necessary articles for divine worship, such as chalice, crucifixes, candlesticks, etc., all silver plated, some of which are still used in the Cathedral. When the goods arrived, he placed them in order in a large room in his hotel, and charged a fee to see them, thus aiding in paying for them. Not only in these early days of Catholicity in Green Bay, but to the very day of his death, Mr. Fox interested himself in the work of the church. We append the following, which was taken from the Green Bay Gazette at the time of his death, April 5, 1893:

"Mr. Fox was a noble, devout and consistent Catholic, and his marked fidelity to the teachings of his church won for him from his friends of his faith the endearing title of 'the Saint of Green Bay.' His was a quiet, honest, gentle, reserved nature that secured for him the commendation of all who knew him, and who value true worth. His generous gifts to the church all through his life are brought vividly to mind, and it is noted that he was one of the original founders of St. Mary's (German) Catholic Church, the first Catholic church erected in Green Bay. His ambition was gratified in having his children secure a good education, and his piety gave him a blessed reward in having one of his sons (the present Vicar-General of the diocese, the Very Rev. J. J. Fox) enter the priesthood, and in having a daughter (Sister M. Cecelia, O. S. D.) become a nun. He departed this life, it is safe to assume, without an enemy, and many are the kindly tributes paid to his memory by life-long friends and neighbors."

Paul Fox.

The Gazette has also the following to say regarding the subject of this memoir: "The death of Paul Fox, aged seventy-five years, which occurred in this city at St. Vincent's Hospital on Wednesday, April 5, 1893, removes another old and respected citizen whose residence in Green Bay covers nearly half a century. The subject of this sketch was born in Langenfeld, Province of the Rhine, Prussia, on March 29, 1818. When Paul was about twenty-two years of age, in the year 1840, his parents, with their children, came to the United States, and all settled in Michigan excepting Paul, who pursued his way to Manitowoc, Wisconsin. He, however, remained there but a short time, leaving there on foot in 1841 and walking to Green Bay, where he resided the remainder of his life. He first entered the employ of Mr. Marshall, who lived about three miles north of the Bay Settlement church. He next was employed by the late Colonel Ryan, father of the Ryan Brothers of Appleton, and who was at that time in charge of Fort Howard. During that time, the duties which devolved upon Mr. Fox included that of running a ferry between the Fort and Green Bay. Later, he was employed by the late Morgan L. Martin.

"On February 11, 1847, in the old church in Shantytown, Paul Fox and Katherine Frances Barthel were united in marriage, and immediately went to housekeeping in a dwelling house opposite Mrs. H. O. Crane's former residence on Washington street. Later, they removed to the store building; after residing a short time in the present homestead, the family moved into the house on the southeast corner of Adam and Cherry streets, and for the past twenty-five years the family residence has been on the southwest corner of Cherry street and Monroe avenue.

"Soon after his marriage, Mr. Fox went into business with Joseph Fohrman in a wooden building on Washington street, on the site of the present Fox Block, carrying on the grocery trade for a short time, and keeping a sort of tavern for the accommodation of guests. Mr. Fox, after a short time, bought Mr. Fohrman's interest in the business, and increased its scope by adding a general stock of dry goods.

"In 1857 or '58, Mr. Fox erected the Excelsior Block, now occupied by A. Kimball's hardware store, which he sold to Mr. Morton. Later, in company with A. Weise, he built the block now occupied by Weise-Hollman Company, Mr. Fox owning and occupying the north store. His next venture, in company with a number of other Green Bay merchants, was the purchase of the steamer 'Wabash Valley,' which plied between Green Bay and Buffalo. This proved an unfortunate investment for all concerned, and cost Mr. Fox $10,000, leaving him as poor at the time of his loss as when he first began business here, and he had to begin over again in the building up of a competence. He then moved with his family to Appleton, engaging in business there for about a year or so, and then returning to Green Bay and associating himself in business with the late Washington Parish, under the firm name of Parish and Fox, they dealing in hides, furs, etc., occupying the old building noted, moving later into the Jeffrey Building, south of Bungener and Bur's store. Later, Mr. Fox built the block of three stores, three stories in height, on Washington street, which he owned at the time of his death, and which still bears his name. His line of business brought him into frequent contact with the Oneida, Menomonee and Chippewa tribes of Indians, and the white inhabitants of the Lake Superior region of the Upper Peninsula. At a later date, Mr. Fox took his son, Peter J., into partnership, and in 1892 he turned the entire business over to his son already mentioned and A. M. Fox. In 1882 Mr. Fox served acceptably as city treasurer, and was an alderman in the first Common Council Green Bay had after incorporating as a city in 1854. He was also an alderman in 1868 and 1869.

"The surviving members of the family are the widow and six children: Sister Cecelia of the Order of St. Dominic, Subprioress of St. Catherine's Academy at Racine, Wisconsin; Peter J., Englewood, Illinois; the Rev. Joseph J. Fox, Vicar-General of Green Bay Diocese; A. M. Fox, Stevens Point, Mrs. Lizzie Arnold Wink, and Mrs. P. S. Young. Mr. Fox was ill only about two or three weeks, his ailment being heart trouble. On Monday, March 27th, he went to St. Vincent's Hospital for the sake of treatment, but began at once failing so that he could not be removed to his home, and there his death occurred, as already noted, early Wednesday morning, April 5th."

Mrs. Fox, who is still living, was also very active in the interests of the early church at Green Bay, and for many years she and her husband, with two or three others, constituted the choir of the old church at Shantytown.

Casimir Gonski.

WERE it not for that distinctive feature of Americanism which binds together all citizens of this great country in bonds of indissoluble unity, and makes no distinction as to one's former country or condition, no matter what that may have been, the man achieving a well earned reputation or success would more frequently find recognition as the descendant of some particular race of people. Such, indeed, would invariably be the case when one was born elsewhere, and a citizen of the United States by adoption only. This condition of affairs could perhaps find no better vehicle for illustration than in the person of our present subject, Casimir Gonski.

Mr. Gonski, who is a well-known and successful representative of the legal profession in Milwaukee, is a native of the historic land of Poland, having been born in Mogilno, in that country, on the 10th day of January, 1869. His earlier education was acquired in the public and private schools and colleges of Germany. He then entered the service of the German government, in which he remained for four years. The routine life of a government official and the total lack of individual opportunities in that career could never satisfy a man who is willing to make useful employment of energy and ambition. In 1890 Mr. Gonski met at Antwerp his uncle, the Very Rev. Gulski, of Milwaukee, who, returning from Rome, was homeward bound. Through his kindness, Mr. Gonski was offered an opportunity to become an American citizen, and he has done so, thoroughly and enthusiastically. In order that he might perfect himself in the English language, Mr. Gonski went to St. Mary's College, Kansas, where he studied under Dr. Murphy, now of St. Ignatius College, Cincinnati, Ohio. After completing the necessary course at that institution he came to Wisconsin, and, having fully determined upon his future career, entered the law department of the University at Madison, from which he graduated in 1893. Since graduating he has been engaged in the active practice of his profession in the city of Milwaukee. Since coming to America, Mr. Gonski has taken an active interest in educational matters, writing earnestly and repeatedly for the state and national press on Polish history, literature and kindred subjects, and particularly in the interests of Catholic education.

Casimir Gonski.

Mr. Gonski was married to Miss Hedwig Reuter in 1898, his wife being a scholarly lady and a graduate of Sinsinawa Academy.

Dr. D. J. Hayes.

D. J. HAYES, M. D., is a native of the State of Wisconsin, having been born in Richfield, Washington County, on August 18th, 1853. He is of Irish parentage, being a son of Thomas Hayes, one of the pioneer settlers of his native county, who located there in 1841, and who remained a steadfast, sterling and progressive citizen of that county until the time of his death, which occurred in 1882, at the advanced age of seventy-five years. It was in the common schools of the neighborhood that young Hayes acquired his rudimentary education, after which he took a course at the State Normal School at Whitewater, Wisconsin. Then, being a young man of straightened circumstances and therefor compelled to make his own way in the world, he began life's struggle as a teacher, being engaged in professional duties as such for several years in Milwaukee and Washington Counties.

Through all of this time he never lost sight of the one and all-devouring desire on his part to enter the medical profession. Therefore, while teaching he lived economically, from time to time laying by the means with which he afterwards was enabled to secure the necessary medical education. To this end he began his studies under the preceptorship of Dr. D. W. Lynch, at West Bend, Washington County, Wisconsin, who was well known throughout the central portion of the State as a successful physician and surgeon. Having remained with him for some considerable period, Dr. Hayes in 1876 entered the Northwestern University Medical School of Chicago, from which institution he graduated three years later. He immediately began the practice of his profession at St. Nazianz, Manitowoc County, Wisconsin, remaining there in the active and successful performance of his professional duties until 1887. He then went to Europe and took a post-graduate course in the celebrated University of Vienna. Returning to the United States in 1888, he located in the city of Milwaukee and opened on office there. It was not long before this young, energetic and successful practitioner established himself firmly in the good graces of an extensive and valuable patronage. He, in fact, became widely and favorably known throughout the city and State, and in 1892, as a result of his increasing popularity, he was elected to the chair of Genito-Urinary Surgery in the Post-Graduate School of Chicago, Illinois, which position he still maintains. When the Wisconsin College of Physicians and Surgeons was established in Milwaukee in 1894, he was elected to the chair of Urinary Surgery and of Clinical Surgery.

Dr. D. J. Hayes.

Dr. Hayes is a member of the American Medical Association of the Mississippi Valley, Northwestern Medical Society, Wisconsin State Medical Society, and Milwaukee Medical Society, and has long been recognized as a valuable contributor to the literature of these societies as well as to a number of the most prominent medical journals of the country. In 1881 the Doctor was married to Miss Jennie Goggins, of Chilton, Wisconsin, and two children have been born of their union, a daughter living, and a son now dead.

H. C. Higgins.

IN glancing over the long list of those who, by well-directed and persistent effort, have been enabled to acquire a name and station among the successful business men of to-day, it becomes a noticeable fact that many, if, indeed, not most of them, arose to the occasion from the humblest spheres. And it would ever appear—most justly so, too—that honors thus obtained bear with them the sign manual of an indelible worth, absolutely unobtainable through any other source. In such instances, the evidences of true merit necessarily become more strikingly apparent, as it is owing entirely to the quality and character of the man, rather than to force of circumstances, that he owes this spontaneous and desirable recognition.

The subject of this sketch, Mr. H. C. Higgins, was born in Ireland, in 1847, being a son of Thomas and Mary (Gannon) Higgins, of County Roscommon. Not very long after the birth of Mr. Higgins, the family removed to the United States, locating in New Jersey, from whence they removed, in 1863, to Whiteside County, Illinois. Here they settled at Sterling, the father operating a farm near to that city, upon which he remained until the time of his death, in March, 1895. The youthful days of young Higgins were passed in

H. C. Higgins.

New Jersey, where he also received an ordinary education in the village school at Freehold. Upon removing to Illinois, he continued to assist his father with the work on the farm until arriving at his majority, when he began his business career as a railroad contractor, working, of course, at first in a small way. In this business he was more than usually successful, soon becoming recognized as one of the successful men of his time in that line of business. Thus, when but barely twenty-three years of age, in connection with the younger brother, Thomas, he obtained a contract for fifty-two miles of grading on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and sixteen miles on the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago system—quite an undertaking for so young a man. For five years he remained actively engaged in this business, and then, in 1876, began building gas works, his first contract being carried out at Dixon, Illinois. This he followed with a similar undertaking at Waterloo, Iowa, and numerous other cities, continuing actively engaged in the business until electricity was introduced for lighting purposes, when he engaged in the erection of electric light plants in connection with his gas works.

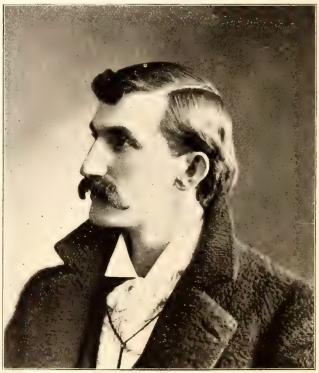
Mr. Higgins has been a resident of this State since 1878, during which year he located at Neenah. Here he remained until 1887, when he removed to his present home in Marinette. The Marinette Gas, Electric Light and Street Railway Company, of which Mr. Higgins is president, was incorporated in 1889, at which time the company purchased a franchise of a street railway, the motive power of which was horses. For these he quickly substituted electricty, which now furnishes the motive power for seven miles of road. This institution furnishes steady employment to about fifty people. Besides his business relations with this company, he is also a director of the First National Bank of Marinette, of which he was one of the incorporators; is a member of the Business Men's Association, and a director in the Marinette Hotel Company. He is, in fact, a wide-awake and progressive man, who takes ready and vigorous interest in everything calculated to promote the welfare of the city. Aside from this, he owns a large amount of real estate in and adjacent to Marinette. Mr. Higgins was married in June, 1890, to Miss Helen Gaffney, a native and resident of Neenah, Wisconsin, and a daughter of Philip and Anna (McCann) Gaffney, the former a native of Wisconsin, and the latter of New York. The result of this union is one son, Henry C., Jr., and one daughter, Kathryn. Both Mr. and Mrs. Higgins are members of the Roman Catholic Church, and are known for the active and zealous interest that they take in all kinds of charitable and benevolent work.

Max Hoffman.

IN no walk of life is that indomitable perseverance, energy and effort necessary to success made more palpable to the average mind than in that of the law. The duties here involved are numerous, intricate and absorbing, while paramount among the characteristics to be developed are those of promptness, conciseness and unquestionable correctness. Naturally enough, mistakes are made in this, as in other professions, yet such occurrences, especially if repetitions are in order, never fail in proving disastrous to the luckless practitioner. As a result, then, of these most necessary conditions and their proper fulfillment, the law as a body is represented by men of ultra intelligence and keenness of perception, men of prompt and positive action and sterling integrity. Nay, even more, they should be as a tower of strength to those who, relying upon the honor of the profession, come to them in confidence and trust. Even as so eminent an authority as Bacon has been wont to remark: "Judges ought to be more learned than witty; more reverent than plausible, and more advised than confident. Above all things, integrity is their portion and proper virtue." As may readily be supposed, there are not a few in the profession who prove anything but an advantage to its moral standing, yet in admitting this we have but said what is true concerning every other profession or calling. It is, in fact, that every-day and matter-of-fact occurrence of the unleaven creeping into the most desirable of exclusive quarters, and, while far from beneficial from a moral point of view, has to be made the best of, or at least endured. As regards this particularly undesirable feature, Wisconsin is deserving of a more than average amount of gratulation, her bar being recognized as among the most erudite, brilliant and responsible in the country.



Max Hoffman.

Among those who, in a quite, persevering, yet unostentatious way, have added thus to the strength and well being of the legal profession in Wisconsin, is the subject of this sketch, Mr. Max Hoffman, who is a practicing attorney at Antigo. He was born in Bavaria on the second day of January, 1867, and therefore may still be regarded as a very young man, whose destiny may be said to be all before him. Mr. Hoffman's parents, also natives of that country, were an energetic and thrifty couple, who, hearing of the many advantages to be gained by securing a residence in the States, emigrated to this country, and at once starting West finally took up their permanent location at Appleton, Wisconsin. This occurred towards the middle of the year 1869, so that Mr. Hoffman became a resident and in fact a citizen of this country when but little more than two years of age. At Appleton he began his education, being placed in charge of the German School Sisters there, under whose supervision and tuition he remained until twelve years of age. Then his family decided to make another change, removing to a point, now Gresham, in Shawano County, Wisconsin, where his father located a homestead. Two years subsequent to their removal to Gresham, and when young Hoffman was but fourteen years of age, he began earning his own living, working during the winter months in the lumber camps of Northern Wisconsin, and at other times assisting in clearing up the farm. He also spent several summer seasons in driving logs down the Wolf River and its numerous tributaries, continuing thus to earn a substantial living until the winter of 1888-9, when he went to Milwaukee and took a course in the Spencerian Business College there. Then, having devoted the summer of 1889 to log driving, he in the fall of that year entered the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, Indiana, from which institution he graduated in 1892 with the degree of Bachelor of Science. Two years later at the same place he acquired the degree of Bachelor of Law. During the World's Columbian Exposition, Mr. Hoffman was a Columbian Guard, and thus earned sufficient means to complete his legal education; in fact his entire schooling may be said to have been paid for by his own exertions, the financial condition of his family at the time making it impossible for them to render him any material assistance.

Having been admitted to the bar, Mr. Hoffman at once located at Antigo, his present home, where in the pursuit of his profession he has been gratifyingly successful. Mr. Hoffman is a staunch Democrat, and as such was nominated by his party for the District Attorneyship of Langlade County in 1896. He was defeated for the office, but gave ample evidence of his popularity and good standing by running nearly three hundred votes ahead of his ticket. An additional honor was conferred upon Mr. Hoffman by his fellow citizens in the spring of 1898, when he was elected city attorney for the city of Antigo.

Michael A. Jacobs.

M. A. JACOBS was born March 26, 1860, in the town of Lomira, Dodge County, Wisconsin, and moved with his parents to the town of Beaver Dam on March 20, 1868. Here he lived with his parents on the farm until February 26, 1887, when he removed to the city of Beaver Dam and engaged in the retail lumber and coal business with Peter Roedl and John W. Hall. This firm continued together for four and a half years, when the yard was leased to the Barker Lumber Company, and the subject of this sketch, with five others, organized the German National Bank of Beaver Dam, that institution opening for business on August 5, 1891. Of this new organization Mr. Jacobs was chosen assistant cashier, as well as one of the directors.

M. A. Jacobs.

Mr. Jacobs was educated in the district schools of Lomira and Beaver Dam and St. Mary's School in the city of Beaver Dam, completing his studies with one term at Mount Calvary College. His parents, Michael and Catherine Jacobs (nee Hartzheim), both emigrated from Simmerath, near Aachen, Rhenish Prussia, the mother coming in 1845 and the father in the spring of 1848. These two were married at Theresa, Dodge County, Wisconsin, in December, 1856. The subject of our present sketch was married to Theresa Mary Flasch on November 24, 1884, at St. Kilian, Wisconsin. Six children have been the result of this union, i. e., Peter R., aged twelve; Albert F., aged ten; Frank M., aged eight; Edward H., aged six; Agnes M., aged four, and Michael J., aged one. He has continuously resided at Beaver Dam since March 20, 1868, with the exception of a short period spent at school in 1875-76 and another enforced absence, when he was assigned to the position of chief clerk of the General Land Office at Washington, D. C., in 1893. All the rest of the time, however, he worked on his father's farm, continuing to do so until February 26, 1887, when he entered into business on his own account.

Mr. Jacobs is an active member of Branch 48, C. K. of W., St. Joseph's Benevolent Society of Beaver Dam, and the Beaver Dam Maennerchor. He has also been secretary or treasurer of the former organization since its first establishment, holding the latter office at the present time, besides being the appointive delegate to the State Council, at which convention he has already represented Branch 48 at Eau Claire, Waukesha, Ashland, Oshkosh and Stevens Point. He was president of St. Joseph's Benevolent Society from 1894 to 1897, and represented that organization at the Staats-Verband meeting at Racine, in 1896. At the present time he is president of the Beaver Dam Maennerchor. He has always since his residence at Beaver Dam been a member of St. Peter's congregation, and a member of the board of trustees for the past six years. He has also for some time been secretary of St. Mary's School Board, was elected town clerk of Beaver Dam in the spring of 1884, and reëlected in 1885 and 1886, when he resigned. He was also elected county clerk of Dodge County, in November, 1888, and reëlected in 1890, thus holding the office for two full terms. He was appointed chief clerk of the General Land Office at Washington, D. C., April 6, 1893, continuing in that position till December 20 of the same year, when he resigned owing to urgent personal matters which required his entire attention. While chief clerk, however, he was appointed World's Fair Commissioner for the Interior Department of the World's Fair at Chicago, and had charge of the opening of the Cherokee outlet in Oklahoma, in September, 1893. During the preceding year he was delegated to the Second Congressional Democratic convention, and Chairman of the Congressional Democratic Committee from 1892 to 1894. At the present time he is Chairman of the Thirteenth Senatorial District Committee, and was a delegate to the Thirteenth District Judicial convention, held at Waukesha in 1896, when J. J. Dick was nominated for circuit judge. At the present time Mr. Jacobs is actively engaged in the lumber and coal business at Beaver Dam, owning a half interest in the firm of Roedl and Jacobs. He is also a stockholder and director of the German National Bank, and a stockholder of the Beaver Dam Malleable Iron Company, also a stockholder and director of the South Milwaukee Boulevard Heights Company. His residence on Center Street, Beaver Dam, is one of the handsomest in that city.

L. S. Keeley.

DR. L. S. KEELEY, son of Michael and Catharine (nee Kenney) Keeley, both of County Galway, Ireland, was born on February 7, 1858, and is the third of five brothers. His parents came to the United States in 1847, and five years later removed West to Wisconsin, settling on a farm in the town of Fox Lake, where the mother and one brother still reside. As a child, Mr. Keeley's educational advantages were somewhat limited, all the schooling he obtained between the age of eight and seventeen years being acquired in a term of school lasting four months annually. In spite of this, he became a teacher, and, having passed the necessary examination, taught in the country schools for a couple of terms, in the meantime working on his father's farm during the summer months. He then spent a few terms as student at the Wisconsin Academy at Fox Lake, obtaining, while there, the "Principal's Prize" for excellence in declamation. He also, in 1880, represented Fox Lake at the "Art Loan Oratorical Contest," held in the city of Beaver Dam. On the occasion he received the first prize over nine other competitors from various parts of the county. He next attended the University of Wisconsin and the State Normal School at Platteville, graduating therefrom in 1882. He then became principal of the Highland High School, of which he had charge for two years. In 1884 he became principal of the Fox Lake schools, of which he remained in charge for six years. During this entire period he studied law, and, having acquired the necessary learning for that purpose, passed the examination for admission to the bar before the State Board of Law Examiners at Milwaukee, in December, 1887. In 1890 Mr. Keeley resigned the principalship at Fox Lake, to accept a similar position in Mayville High School, which institution, under his capable direction, soon took rank among the best educational institutions of its kind in the State. He remained at Mayville until the completion of the school year of 1897, when he resigned to enter upon the practice of the law, for that purpose forming partnership with Mr. F. M. Lawrence, a widely known and eminent practitioner. Mr. Keeley is one of the founders of the State Bank of Mayville, and is a member of its Board of Directors. He was married August 9, 1892, to a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Langenbach, of Mayville, the result of the marriage being three children, Marguerite, Clarence and Antonius Keeley.

L. S. Keeley.

T. Knapstein.

THOUGH doubly emphasized in so doing, it needed not the poet's inspiration to tell us how dear is home to every human heart: "Be it ever so humble," it has still the distinction of being the one place on earth, the center and refuge of our lives. It is in truth a most important factor, holding us, as it were, in abeyance, concentrating our energies and drawing out in us those more desirable characteristics which of true manhood form the greater part. So, too, is it with the vocations of life—we must find our level, our sphere, in order that we may become both useful and contented with our lot. And has not Lowell said: "No man is born into the world whose work is not born with him; there is always work and the tools to work withal, for those who will; and blessed are the horny hands of toil." That savant and philosopher Carlyle says: "Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness. He has a work, a life purpose; he has found it and will follow it." How particularly applicable is this to the American mode of procedure, where does a man but trip in one undertaking, it remains his unquestioned right and privilege to test other fields of usefulness in order that he may find his proper and legitimate sphere of action. Under such conditions, untrammeled by the whims or usages of others, how true does it become to say of each alike, "he has a work, a life-purpose."

The subject of the present brief biographical sketch, Mr. Theodore Knapstein, son of Mathias and Margaret (Kreutzberg) Knapstein, is a practical brewer and has been engaged in the brewing and malting business as senior member of the firm of Knapstein and Company at New London, Wisconsin, since 1872. Owing to his thorough knowledge of the art and strict adherence to those principles which ever prove the safeguard of enterprise and industry, he has succeeded even beyond his most sanguine expectations, and is now at the head of one of the mose extensive and prosperous concerns to be found in the interior part of the State. Besides attending to the affairs of a rapidly increasing business, Mr. Knapstein has also found the opportunity to furnish considerable time to other business affairs as well as social matters. Then he has been somewhat active in the political field, and as a result of much excellent work done by him for his party, and the hearty endorsement of a large number of his fellow townsmen, was appointed postmaster of New London, serving as such during President Cleveland's second term of office. He is also an active factor in numerous local Catholic organizations, being a member of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, St. Joseph's Benevolent Society and Family Protective Association. He has besides served in various official capacities, having been president of the Catholic Knights since the organization of that branch, and president of St. Joseph's Benevolent Society. Mr. Knapstein was also a member of the Wisconsin Assembly in 1889-91, and sergeant-at-arms of that body in 1893.

Theodore Knapstein.

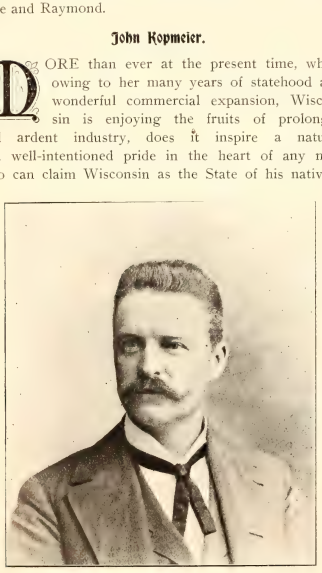
Mr. Knapstein was married at New London September 13, 1875, to Miss Frances Werner, daughter of Frank and Helena (Spitzer) Werner. The result of this union has been eleven children, Maggie, Lena, Mathias, Frances, Hettie, Irene, Henry, William, John, Theodore and Raymond.

John Kopmeier.

MORE than ever at the present time, when, owing to her many years of statehood and wonderful commercial expansion, Wisconsin is enjoying the fruits of prolonged and ardent industry, does it inspire a natural and well-intentioned pride in the heart of any man who can claim Wisconsin as the State of his nativity.



John Kopmeier.

It is a theme upon which one cannot only dwell in silence, but if needs be become grandiloquent; for not alone has he the glorious and many hued pictures which Nature has vouchsafed to this commonwealth to draw upon, there being, aside from such, innumerable evidences, dug from out the very bowels of the earth, which through the insistency, energy and perseverance of far-sighted people have been made subservient to the uses of mankind, and given to the State its present position of commercial prestige. Numerous, indeed, are the localities to be noted throughout this vast domain in which are scattered different interests of most vital importance to the entire nation. Agriculture, the art of dairying and manufactures, all alike vie with each other in their effort to gain prestige, and add by their individual effort to the advantages already gained. Prominent among such in the greatness of its ability and scope of its undertakings, stands Milwaukee, the metropolis of the State, of which city the subject of our sketch has the proud distinction of being a native. It was here that he was born on the 16th day of February, 1854, the family residence at that time being on the corner of Reed and Washington streets. As soon as conformable with the rules attributed to such institutions at that time, he began attending the parochial school associated with Holy Trinity congregation, where he continued to study until twelve years of age. He then entered St. Gall's school, where he continued his studies under the direction of the Jesuit Fathers. A few years later he entered the employ of his father, who was at that time engaged in the ice business under the firm name of John T. Kopmeier. Our subject, however, was by no means satisfied with the education he had thus far obtained, and so at the age of eighteen, as soon as the proper opportunity afforded itself, he took a business course at the Spencerian College in Milwaukee. After completing his business education in that way, he continued in the employment of his father for some considerable time.

On the 26th day of February, 1878, he was married to Miss Dorothy M. Germershausen, of Baltimore, Maryland. To these two have been born four children, John H., Jr., Norman J., Camille Marie, and Waldemar S. J., three of whom are living at the present time; John H., Jr., died in infancy. In addition to the numerous duties pertaining to his business interests, Mr. Kopmeier has also found time to partake of those responsibilities which ever form a portion of the duty pertaining to true citizenship, serving as a member of the city council from the Sixth ward from 1890 to 1893. In 1891 Mr. Kopmeier somewhat changed his business relations by establishing the Wisconsin Lakes Ice Company, from which at a subsequent period originated the firms of Kopmeier Brothers, Sanborn and Haisler, and M. Orth and Son. He is also quite active in a social way, and is a prominent member of the Deutscher Maennerverein. The parents of Mr. Kopmeier, John T. and Mary Adelaide Kopmeier, first settled in Wisconsin at about the time of its admission into the Union. The father died some time ago, but the mother is still living.

Herman Kroeger.

HERMAN KROEGER, the subject of this sketch, was born on the sixteenth day of December, 1831, in the little city of Coesfield, province of Westphalia, Germany, and received his first Communion and was confirmed by Bishop Kaspar Melcher of Muenster, in the St. Jacobi Church at that place. Mr. Kroeger came to this country with his parents in 1844, and located at once in Milwaukee. Here they experienced most of the hardships incident to pioneer life, arriving at their destination with hardly a penny to their name, so that they were at once compelled to work hard and laboriously, in order to obtain a mere subsistence. But they were bound to succeed, and, consequently, no work that was legitimate and honest came amiss to these deserving people. So the elder Mr. Kroeger, in connection with young Herman, undertook the arduous labor of sawing wood, receiving therefor the sum of fifty cents per cord, and most of that, too, in store pay. The mother engaged in the milk business, a generous-hearted drover allowing her the use of a cow until she could afford to pay for one. Thus, helping one another continuously, the Kroegers had soon amassed a sum of money large enough to pay all of their indebtedness, with a surplus of sufficient proportions with which to purchase a lot on the south side, upon which they built a home. To be sure, it was not much of a palace, a shanty, in fact, but nevertheless they thoroughly appreciated it, besides which it was their own, which fact added not a little to the general satisfaction felt by the family. These same premises, which to-day lie in the very center of the business portion of the south side, are occupied by the magnificent trading establishment of Kroeger Brothers Company.

So, from this small beginning, matters went satisfactorily along, while young Herman, being of a bright and studious nature, soon attracted the attention of Milwaukee's leading physician, Dr. Luening, who became greatly interested in the boy, and secured for him a position in the grocery store of Mr. August Ehlebracht, in 1847. Two years later, in the fall of 1849, Mr. Kroeger was tendered a position as clerk by the largest dry-goods store in the city, then owned by Boyd & Ledyard, which he accepted, remaining with them till October 1853. On October 3d of the same year, he, in connection with his brother Caspar, opened up a general store upon the site of their present establishment. As "tall oaks from small acorns spring," this little store grew to wonderful dimensions, until it now commands an envied position among the business establishments of the city.

Although Mr. Kroeger never sought political honors, he has served the people twice, once as alderman, and again as State senator, both of which offices he filled to the entire satisfaction of his constituents. In political faith he is for a party of the people, and reforms, but has at all times voted and worked for the party that offered and effected the most for the laboring masses, who have his entire sympathy. Though strict and methodical in his business, his employes look upon him more as a friend than an employer, as he always exhibits a marked interest in their well-being and advancement. Mr. Kroeger has twice married, his first wife, Miss Mary Artus, having died on the tenth day of May, 1874, leaving him seven children between the ages of six weeks and seventeen years to care for. On the 15th of September 1875, he was united in the bonds of matrimony to Miss Katherine Schmutte, of Morris, Indiana, which union was blessed by one son, now a student of Marquette College, under the auspices of the Jesuit Fathers. One of the daughters, Mary, took the vows, and is now Siser "Lydia" at the hospital of the Poor Handmaids of Christ, at Fort Wayne, Indiana. At the present time four of his sons hold honorable and responsible positions in the Kroeger Brothers' establishments, two being members of the firm.

Herman Kroeger.

Though his opportunities were extremely limited in that regard, Mr. Kroeger has, through his own industry and persistent efforts, acquired a good education, speaking and writing fluently in both the English and German tongues.

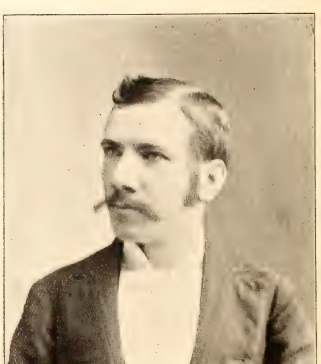
Mr. Kroeger was one of the founders of Holy Trinity congregation, whose first pastor was the Rev. Father F. X. Sadler; was also an ardent admirer and intimate friend of the beloved first rector of the provincial seminary at St. Francis, the lamented Dr. Salzmann.

To-day, at the age of sixty-six, Mr. Kroeger looks back upon a very prosperous and useful, though at times toilsome life. He is president of the Kroeger Brothers Company establishment, which does an annual business of nearly half a million dollars, and employs an average of one hundred and fifty people throughout the year. He is very proud of his business, and never misses a day at the store, except in case of sickness.

Michael Kruszka.

MICHAEL KRUSZKA, a citizen of Milwaukee, was born on the 28th of September, 1860, and is the son of John and Annie (Kluczynska) Kruszka. The place of his nativity was Slabomierz, in the German Province of Posen, or Great Poland. Both his father and grandfather were born on a farm in Slabomierz, which was granted to his great grandfather by the Archbishop and Primate of Posen, for some special services rendered by him to the country. Michael's father, John Kruszka, born in 1820, and father of the subject of this sketch, was a prominent and well-to-do farmer, chairman of the village for a period of twenty years, and the possessor of several fertile farms in that vicinity. He was twice married, and had thirteen children. Offsprings of the first wife, who died in 1866, are a daughter and seven sons, our subject, Michael, being next to the youngest. The oldest son, Simon, is a Catholic priest in the old country, and has (in 1873 and 1874) been several times imprisoned for resistance to what were notoriously known as the "May laws," which he held to be designed to destroy the Catholic religion and Polish nationality within the German Empire. Under such conditions, home was no longer home to him, so he left his native country in the latter year, and in order to avoid further persecution, spent the ten succeeding years in Galicia, Austria. At the end of that period, he again returned to his native place, when he was immediately imprisoned, and only released upon the payment of a heavy fine. He is now the rector of a Polish Catholic church in Ostrowite Pyrmasowskie, in his native province. Of the other brothers, one was a physician, who died in 1891, two are farmers, one an agent, while Michael and his youngest brother, Joseph, are editors of the Milwaukee Kuryer Polski of Milwaukee. The oldest son of the second wife of John Kruszka, Venceslas, is rector of the Polish churches in Ripon and Oshkosh, Wisconsin, both of which were built and the respective congregations organized under his direction; another son and three daughters of the second wife of John Kruszka, the youngest being now (1897) sixteen years of age, live in the old country.

Michael Kruszka, in common with his brothers, received a good collegiate education in Filehne and Wagrowiec, in his native land, and came to this country in 1880, working first in the Singer Sewing Machine factory in Elizabeth, New Jersey, then on a Pennsylvania farm and again in the factory. During the latter employment, he attended an evening business school, adding considerably to his already somewhat extensive knowledge regarding the ways and methods of the world of business, into which he shortly intended to make his entry. Subsequently, he served as agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York for a year or more, when, in the fall of 1883 (September 11), he came to Milwaukee and established himself as local agent for that company.



Michael Kruszka.

In 1885 he started a Polish weekly paper, the Krytyka, devoted especially to the interests of working men, the first of its kind in the country, and it proved a success. In 1887 he formed a company for the publishing of a daily paper, the Dziennik Polski, but, on account of disagreements among the stockholders, the enterprise failed within six months, and Mr. Kruszka lost everything he had. Not disheartened, however, by his ill success, he, with some aid from two friends, started the Daily Kuryer Polski, which was a success from the start, and is the oldest and most influential daily Polish paper in the United States.

Mr. Kruszka always maintained a lively interest in politics while in his native country, his activity and earnestness in that direction bringing him several times into collision with the Prussian authorities, who, it would appear, were far from favorable to the Polish and Catholic parties. Since coming to America, Mr. Kruszka has always been an active and ardent Democrat, excepting that in the fall of 1886 he joined the People's party and gave it the support of his paper. With that one exception, he has, however, ever been a loyal and steadfast Democrat, and an active and energetic supporter of the principles of Thomas Jefferson. With years and experience, he has also developed into a progressive political writer and speaker, and as such his services are always in great demand on each recurring political campaign. In 1890 Mr. Kruszka was a candidate for the State legislature from the district embracing the Twelfth and Fourteenth wards, and was elected by a majority of 2,104, receiving 3,026, against 922 votes cast for the Republican nominee. Two years later, he was a candidate for State Senator from the then Eighth District, and was elected by 527 majority, receiving 4,376 votes, against 3,859 cast for his opponent, Jacob Kubal, a prominent Polish-American. In 1896 he was again candidate for State Senator, but, owing to changes in the district by a partisan Republican reapportionment, he was defeated, receiving 5,600 votes, against 6,681 cast for his Republican opponent, Court Commissioner Julius Roehr. Among the bills which he introduced into the Legislature which became laws, was one regarding fees in the office of register of deeds of Milwaukee County to be turned into the treasury, and giving the register a fixed salary, by which the county can annually save some $15,000. He also managed the passage of the bill regarding street railway companies to provide vestibules for the protection of the motormen and conductors, and was instrumental in the passage of the bill making "Labor Day" a legal holiday. In addition to this, he was an ardent supporter of the Australian ballot law, and manipulated the passage of bills for the reforming of the caucus system and measures beneficial to the interests of his adopted State.

But the better education of his countrymen has been and is his most ardent desire, his ambition being to bring them up to the standard of other educated people. To this end, he secured the passage of the act providing for the publication of the official acts of the City of Milwaukee in the Polish language, as well as in English and German, his object being to make the Polish citizens better acquainted with the public affairs and institutions; to make them feel that this government is their government; in short, to Americanize them while yet they are unable to speak the language of the country. In consonance with this purpose and while a member of the Polish Educational Society, he has advocated and accomplished, together with others, the introduction of Polish books into the public library, and advocated the teaching of the Polish language in the public schools, hoping by these means to secure better and broader education among his countrymen.

All his efforts as a newspaper man have been for the better education of his readers, and to make them the best American citizens possible; and these efforts have been attended with marked success. Owing to the good administration of Polish parishes and schools by able and selfsacrificing priests and teachers, our Polish citizens are not only lawabiding but progressive and thrifty Catholics. The Polish colony of Milwaukee is regarded as the most intelligent and peaceable of all those in this country, and Mr. Kruszka is one of the most prominent secular elements of the nationality. While loving his mother language, he regards this country as his home, and as such its institutions and interests are dear to him as were those of his fatherland. He is president of the Polish Dramatic Circle, director and financial secretary of the Kosciusko Guard Armory, corresponding secretary of the Polish Educational Society, trustee of the Polish Association of America, and a member of the Democratic State Central Committee.

He was married on Easter Sunday, April 9, 1882, at St. Patrick's Church in Bayonne City, New Jersey, by the Rev. Father Killeen, to Miss Jadwiga (Hedwig) Linkewicz, of Znin, Province of Posen, and they have one child, Felicia Aurelia, born on September 13, 1889.

P. H. Lynch.

PATRICK HENRY LYNCH was born March 17, 1869, at Vermont, Dane County, Wisconsin, a distance of about twenty miles southwest of Madison, the capital of the State. His parents were Humphrey and Margaret Dineen Lynch, both of whom were born in Ireland. Patrick Henry's earlier years, like those of many another Western born and bred boy, were spent upon the farm, where, with two sisters and two brothers—he was the youngest member of the family—he enjoyed the healthful occupation and amenities of rural life. Here, then, he spent his earlier years, attending the district schools in the winter months, and assisting in the numerous duties pertaining to the proper care and cultivation of the paternal acres during the rest of the year. In the fall of 1885, however, he began his studies in earnest, entering at that time the High School at Black Earth, where he developed an unusual desire for debating and literary pursuits. In April of the following year he made still another move, entering the Normal School at Whitewater, Wisconsin, where he remained for a period of one year. He then returned to Black Earth, graduating from the High School at that place in June, 1888. On this occasion the subject of his graduating oration was "Ireland under Parnell and Gladstone," pronounced by all who heard it to be the most eloquent and effective effort ever rendered at that place under similar auspices. For two years following his graduation, Mr. Lynch taught school, a vocation for which he was in every respect most eminently fitted. Then, for a year, he conducted the home farm, but towards the fall of 1891 his father disposed of this property and removed to Mazomanie. It was then that Mr. Lynch took up what subsequently was to become the business of his life. At the earnest solicitation of J. W. Leary, then district attorney of Dane County, he entered his law office in the fall of 1891, remaining with him as a student for twelve months. He then took a law course at the University of Wisconsin, receiving at the hands of the Dean the appointment of librarian of that department, in which capacity he became a general favorite. He was at the same time elected president of the Forum, conceded then to be the best literary society in the Northwest. From the law department of the University he graduated as Bachelor of Laws, and was admitted to the Supreme Court on June 20, 1894. From the October following until March, 1895, he practiced his profession in the city of La Crosse, but at the latter time removed to Oconto and formed a partnership with Mr. F. X. Morrow, who had just opened an office in that city. This partnership went into effect on April 25, 1895, and still maintains under the firm name of Morrow and Lynch. This firm at the present time enjoys a large and influential clientage. A few months after moving to Oconto, Mr. Lynch was elected city attorney for one year, and reëlected twice to that position since, the last time being in the spring of 1897. He is a practical Catholic of excellent standing in the community and an active member of the Catholic Order of Foresters and Ancient Order of Hibernians. In politics he is a pronounced Democrat, but though always actively inclined in behalf of the party and friends, he flatly refused the nomination for district attorney on the Democratic ticket which was tendered him preceding the election of 1896.

P. H. Lynch.

Although a young practitioner, Mr. Lynch is the owner of a very large law library and also owns a fine private library. He is a close student and prepares his cases carefully and is brief, concise and eloquent in his argument to court and jury.

He has been associated with some of the best lawyers in the State in the trial of cases, and has tried cases against lawyers of the same class, winning the respect and admiration of all with whom he has come in contact. He is conscientious and frank with his clients, who are growing more numerous daily.

Captain James Martin.

A PROMINENT figure in the marine service of the United States during the past twenty-five years, and with a vista of possibilities opening before him which to any man of sense and understanding would have made life still more acceptable, the late Captain James Martin, subject of this sketch, was called to his last and greatest reward on March 21, 1897.

James W. Martin was born at Mapleton, Waukesha County, Wisconsin, of Scotch and Irish parentage, on May 2, 1857. When but three years of age, both of his parents were taken away, a loss to one of such tender years which, in a great majority of cases, would prove irreparable. Fortunately, however, he was an exception to this rule, being adopted into the family of his paternal uncle, James Martin, of Milwaukee, to whose considerate kindness was due the many opportunities for acquiring an education and general knowledge which served him so well and to such purpose in after years. For some time, then, a number of years, in fact, he attended old St. Gall's Academy in Milwaukee, and, after having completed the course there, entered St. Louis' University, from which institution of learning he graduated in due time. He was recognized as a man of strong convictions and much determination, although so constituted that he was ever beyond the suspicion of even harboring a momentary prejudice. He was always a strong advocate of Catholic education, and an active member of St. Thomas' Society of Gesu Church, an organization which has for its object the promotion of Catholic education, by making the parochial schools free.

Captain James Martin.

Entering the marine service while still quite a young man, he rapidly arose from one position to another until he became master and part owner of the steamer "Roanoke." Five years preceding his death, he was appointed superintendent of the steamship lines of the Flint and Pere Marquette Railroad Company, in which his superior ability quickly manifested itself, attracting wide-spread comment and attention in transportation circles. His last and greatest achievement, however, was the planning and construction of the big car-ferry, the Pere Marquette, a marvel of marine architecture and a monument to his notable ability and skill. Captain Martin was a deep student, well versed in the technicalities of marine law, and very much interested in the various phenomena of the Great Lakes. He was credited by the Weather Bureau at Washington, D. C., with being one of the most expert meteorologists in the Great Lake Region, and he was frequently called upon to furnish information to the chief of this department.

Captain Martin was a man of indomitable will, very energetic, and was possessed of executive ability of a high order. He was exceedingly courteous in manner, and was a most entertaining and instructive talker. Notwithstanding, and probably because of his very active business life, he was devoted to his home, and never happier and more contented than when with his family. At the time of his death, he was a heavy stockholder in two transportation companies operating on the Great Lakes, and also in the Thompson Towing and Wrecking Association, of Port Huron, Michigan.

Captain Martin was married on November 27, 1889, to Elizabeth Moore, daughter of Charles Hayes Moore, a prominent citizen and merchant of Wisconsin in its pioneer days. To these two were born three sons, two of whom are living, James, aged seven, and John, aged two years. Dudley died in 1895.

Patrick H. Martin.

DR. MARTIN is a native of Brown County, Wisconsin, he having been born in the town of Rockland on the 21st day of April, 1862. His education was acquired in the public and private schools of northern Wisconsin, in which he proved an apt and zealous pupil. In 1880 he engaged in school teaching as a profession, and for five years following taught with marked success in various public schools in Brown County. He accepted, in the spring of 1885, an appointment as clerk in the United States railway postal service, being assigned to the run between Green Bay and Milwaukee. In this work he also proved reliable and efficient. In the meantime he devoted all of his spare moments to the study of the law. In July, 1887, he came to Milwaukee and passed the necessary examination before the State Examining Board for admission to the bar. In this, also, he was eminently successful, being one of the three most proficient in the large class of students who took examination at that time. Soon after he resigned his position as postal clerk and was admitted to the bar of the state. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession, proving his capability to such a marked degree that his abilities received prompt recognition at the hands of the Democratic leaders, who in the fall of 1888 tendered him the nomination for district attorney of Brown County, to which office he was elected. Twice subsequently he was reëlected to the same position, thus serving the county for a continuous period of six years. "This service as prosecuting officer of the county," says a local authority, "established firmly and beyond all question his ability as a lawyer, his zeal and skill and wisdom and resource in the trial of jury cases soon became matters of common comment in judicial and legal circles, and Mr. Martin was early marked by all colleagues who knew him as one destined to high professional rank. Mr. Martin left the district attorneyship with a long record of creditable successes won and with a professional reputation established. His discharge of duty as prosecuting officer was accorded and merited popular approval, and on all hands, to the extent that he was known, best wishes were entertained and best prophesies made concerning this brilliant, conscientious and indomitable worker."

P. H. Martin.

The first case with which Mr. Martin went to the Supreme Court was the widely known McLeod will case. In that tribunal it was decided on May 5, 1891, in Mr. Martin's favor, after adverse decisions had been rendered both in the County and Circuit Courts. Here was for him another signal triumph and an added inspiration which was by no means wasted. But little more than a year ago, as counsel for the defendant, Mr. Martin served in the murder case of inter-state notoriety entitled the State of Indiana vs. Barney Van Hoorebeke, in which the defendant was charged with the murder of his wife. The sentiment of the community was largely adverse to the prisoner. His conviction, in fact, of a capital crime was deemed to be a foregone conclusion; yet after a trial long to be remembered, which lasted through many days and bristled at every development with sensational and dramatic incidents, Mr. Martin was enabled to secure an acquittal for his client. But with all of his absorbing and increasing professional success Mr. Martin finds time to be and to prove himself a loyal citizen of Green Bay. He is, in fact, interested in and actively identified with the city's progress in all directions, and has recently contributed no small share to the notable work of improvement, going on there by erecting for his family one of the handsomest and most substantial as well as beautiful residences in the city. He is surrounded by his wife and five children and enjoys all of the comforts of home to the full bent of his genial and considerate nature.

D. E. Murphy.

YOU may search the wide world over and yet it would be difficult to find a country more fruitful in brilliant examples of men, who by self-reliance, energy and determined perseverance have carved out an honorable name and position for themselves, as the United States. The assertion may, we readily appreciate, be on first thought construed as mere bluster; untenable, bearing the ear-marks of prodigality in imagination and vagary of untruth, and yet in spite of all the fact remains, that in war and peace, in the daring race for supremacy, or equally difficult rôle surrounding a life of social distinction, the people of this great, progressive and cosmopolite nation take a distinctive and preëminent stand.

Now in making so broad and seemingly unguarded an assertion, which for all we know may be charged with the crime of ultra verbosity, we wish it to be distinctly understood, that our claims are made in behalf of the few, and not the many, and that our list of heroes, philosophers, administrators, commercial giants and social lions are of a kind that a nation delights to honor and in no way related to those anomalies, the hero who has never smelled powder, the philanthropist who cannot forget self, the official who barters honor for affluence, the king of commerce who would rob the widow or social species of assininity, whose ideas are not above assimilating the worst as well as most ridiculous characteristics of other peoples, and whose actions, manners and very existence are a direct insult to the Creator. In this particular, Milwaukee holds an enviable position among the more prominent cities of the country, having already, during a brief existence of half a century, furnished not a few names to the large and comprehensive roll of those in whom the nation takes a reasonable and honest pride. Of these favored sons of the Badger State, not one affords a better or stronger example of what pluck, energy and integrity can produce, than D. E. Murphy, whose life has been an open page to the citizens of Milwaukee for many a year. Mr. Murphy was born in Ireland in 1843, and received his education in the schools of his native country. It was at an early age that, having studied and partially mastered the possibilities of the New World, he determined to emigrate to that broader field, which, rich in an endless variety of opportunities, offered so much to the ardent and aspiring mind. A mere stripling, with an inexhaustible stock of ambition, and cash capital whose utmost limits did not exceed $20, came to America in December, 1859, and located in Hartford, Conn. Here he started in to learn the carpenter's trade, working faithfully at the same until 1868, his entire time otherwise being devoted to study and general improvement. The course of studiousness thus adopted by him in early life undoubtedly proved to be the turning point in his career. Naturally of a broad-minded and observant nature, omniverous as a reader and ever alert to render due consideration to the opinions expressed by others, he assimilated a fund of general knowledge that was bound to become of unusual advantage to him for all time. His powers of discrimination were also of the keenest, so that he was doubly guarded, as it were, being enabled to readily sift the grain from the chaff and thus avoid loading his mind with a large amount of valueless and extraneous matter. In 1868 he was afforded an opportunity of entering the insurance business, associating himself with the Globe Insurance Company of New York. His next venture was with the Phœnix of Hartford, with which company he remained until 1878, when he removed to Milwaukee and entered the employ of the Northwestern Mutual Life as special agent. He soon resigned from this position and commenced working on commission, in which he was so successful that he soon became recognized as one of the most deservingly prosperous insurance men in the country. Thus, one step after another was taken along the primrose way, until he was appointed general agent of the Northwestern for the State of Wisconsin and Northern Michigan, which position he holds to the present day. Something concerning the magnitude of the business of which Mr. Murphy is the guiding power may be gleaned from the fact that of the seventy general agencies operated by them his ranks by far the highest in the matter of business accomplished. Since his promotion to the management of the above mentioned territory, Mr. Murphy has placed on the books of the Company at least one-tenth of its entire new business, which, it will readily be seen, is a more than ordinarily favorable showing. Especially may this be said to be true of his earlier efforts in this direction, at which time the Company, always reckoned among the best, was still young and more or less untried, with the greater part of its present grand success to be yet accumulated. In the guidance, then, of the Northwestern along the royal road of progress, Mr. Murphy's hand had no uncertain bearing, but with that steadiness and firmness of intent, which is to this day so marked a characteristic of the man who devised both means and measures by which it has achieved the proud distinction of being among the best and safest in the world. In politics Mr. Murphy is a staunch and uncompromising Republican. Locally his zeal has been manifest for many years, he having done yeoman service for the party in his ward—the Sixteenth—on more than one occasion. He has also been a delegate to numerous conventions and otherwise expressed his appreciation of Republican principles, but he has never permitted his name to be mentioned in connection with any public office or emolument.

D. E. Murphy.

B. W. McCarey.

IT is not necessary for a man to climb to the highest pinnacle of fame in order that he may be properly appreciated. Many indeed are the sturdy and humble lives which have given to us the felicitous picture of a career full of usefulness and worth, an example to be followed and admired. It is rather to what a man does than what he is that we look in our desire to form a conservative opinion of his moral as well as material weight. The man to whom a certain piece of work or duty is given to perform, and who, no matter how trivial the matter may be, carries it out with as great a nicety and dispatch as he might have observed in the fulfillment of a more important order, shows his absolute sense of duty, and is therefore to be trusted. It is indeed the little things that count in our material lives, and which as a sum total cry out for or against us in our struggle to achieve. It is wise, then, not to forget the day of little things and to acquire that conservatism and concentration in their doing that is beyond the sphere of even momentary question.

B. W. McCarey.

The subject of the present sketch, Mr. B. W. McCarey has been engaged in active train service for one of our extensive railroad systems for over twenty years. In no walk of life is there greater demand for those characteristics already alluded to than in railroading, where upon the accuracy and promptness of officials depends the life and safety of many thousands of people daily. Such in fact has been the case with Mr. McCarey, who from a painstaking youth has developed into a man to whom these necessary attributes are now as second nature. Gradually then, but surely, he worked along the lines of promotion until he became the conductor of a passenger train in 1883 and has maintained that position ever since.

Mr. McCarey is a native of the state of Wisconsin having been born in Appleton on the 13th day of December, 1859. He is a son of James and Isabel McCarey. The former is still living, but the latter died in the month of January, 1897. He acquired his education in the parochial and public schools of his native city. Mr. McCarey was married to Miss Julia A. Maloney on June 30, 1885, the union resulting in a family of five: Mary Lillian, born in Antigo, June 24, 1886; Edmund Bernard born in Antigo March 24, 1887, died at Antigo June 15, 1897; Arthur James, born in Antigo, September 9, 1888; Earl Vincent, born in Rhinelander January 18, 1893, and Mabel Isabelle, born in Rhinelander May 23, 1895. Mr. McCarey, who has been a resident of Rhinelander for a number of years past, is a member of the Order of Railway Conductors, Catholic Order of Foresters, and Catholic Knights of Wisconsin.

Hon. Frank McDonough.

FRANK M'DONOUGH, one of Eau Claire's most prominent and successful manufacturers, and the founder of the McDonough Manufacturing Company, was born at Ingersoll, Canada, on April 2, 1846, and is the son of Dennis and Rosa (McScoy) McDonough. His earlier years were spent in laboring upon his father's farm, a few months during the winter alone being devoted to educational purposes. Completing this sort of an education while still a youth, he at once entered the world of business, and learned the trade of millwright.

When about seventeen years of age, Mr. McDonough came to Wisconsin and settled in Eau Claire, where he at once entered the employ of Chapman and Thorp as a millwright. He also remained in that capacity with the Eau Claire Lumber Company, who were successors to Chapman and Thorp, continuing in their employ for over twenty years, during which period he advanced to the superintendency of and a part ownership in the concern. Mr. McDonough had barely been three years in the employ of the company before his services became of such remarkable value that he was advanced to the position of manager of the saw-mills, continuing to devote his time and experience to that department, and by so doing, adding largely to the financial success of the firm. In 1878, when a little past thirty years of age, he purchased an interest in this company, and was for ten years subsequently one of its most active and potent forces. During this entire period, as millwright, manager, and owner, he developed a reputation for ingenuity and ability which the efforts and energies of a lifetime but seldom are enabled to secure. When, in 1888, the entire plant of the Eau Claire Lumber Company was sold, Mr. McDonough at once turned his attention to other fields of enterprise, founding the McDonough Manufacturing Company, which was established for the purpose of building and equipping saw-mills.

Having decided upon his line of action, he at once set to work, and in the fall of 1888 began the erection of the company's buildings upon their present site. The sole object and intent of this concern is, not only to construct first-class machinery for saw-mills, but to also erect the entire plant, so that, when complete and turned over to the proprietor, everything is in readiness for immediate use. It was certainly a novel idea, as well as an innovation in the ordinary routine methods previously adopted, and the great success of the undertaking, from its inception, was undoubtedly entirely due to the intimate knowledge of the business displayed by Mr. McDonough.

Frank McDonough.

The company, which organized with a capital of $100,000.00, has gained steadily in popularity and success, and it is a pleasing as well as remarkable fact to note that, young as it is, it has to its credit the fact of having already erected saw-mills in nearly every State in the Union, including some of the very largest plants in the country. Mr. McDonough has a large plant at Eau Claire, where employment is given to over one hundred and thirty men. In addition to his connection with this company, Mr. McDonough is interested in the Street Railway and Light and Power Company, of Eau Claire, being one of the directors of that corporation. He is also a stockholder in the Chippewa Lumber and Boom Company, and has served as President of the Eau Claire Board of Trade, and Vice-President and Treasurer of McCord Lumber Company, of West Superior, Wisconsin.

Politically, he is known as a staunch Republican, and as such served his constituency in 1892-93 in the State assembly. He has also been the recipient of other marks of respect and confidence at the hands of his fellow-citizens, having served for twenty-two years as a member of the school board, twenty years as a member of the city council, and also for a considerable period as president of the Eau Claire Board of Trade.

Mr. McDonough was married on September 28, 1866, to Miss Jennie Horan, a native of Dereham, County of Oxford, Canada, and the union has been blessed with five children, Frank T., now associated with his father in business, Katharina, Pansy, Gilbert T., and Violet. Both Mr. and Mrs. McDonough are members of the Roman Catholic Church.

M. G. McGeehan.

THE subject of this biographical sketch was born in Canada, April 18, 1857, and was educated in the common schools at that time designated as the "Christian Brothers' School." When but a mere child, barely eleven years of age, he removed with his parents to the United States, settling with them in De Pere, Brown County, Wisconsin. Here he attended the public schools for between three and four years, after which, his parents being unable to afford him any further assistance towards establishing himself in a permanent business career, he started out to carve a way for himself. His first efforts in this direction were made in the lumber regions of Northern Wisconsin, where he worked in the woods and "drove" the rivers until he was twenty-four years of age. He was married in the month of May, 1882, and settled at Florence, Wisconsin, where he entered upon the hotel business, in which he remained actively engaged until 1885. In the latter year he disposed of his interest at Florence and removed to Hurley, Wisconsin, where he became engaged in the same kind of business. In 1890, however, he disposed of his interest in the hotel at Hurley and engaged in the handling of flour and feed, carrying also a stock of brick, coal, lime, and general building materials. In addition to this, he carried on an extensive logging business, furnishing large quantities of timbers to the different mines in that locality, and in this particular line of work he still remains. He is, however, also connected with the New York Life Insurance Company, as its local representative at Hurley. In 1891 Mr. McGeehan was elected a member of the town board, to which position he was again returned in 1892. In the latter year he was elected to the Wisconsin Assembly as representative from Ashland County. His principal object in going to Madison was to arrange for the division of this territory into two separate counties, and as a direct result of much protracted effort on his part this undertaking was accomplished in the passage of a bill drafted by him, setting aside that portion of which Hurley is now the county seat, which has since been known as Iron County. What made the work accomplished by Mr. McGeehan at this time as more particularly pronounced and satisfactory, was the fact that a similar bill had been introduced at the three preceding sessions of the legislature, at each of which, owing to bitter and persistent opposition, it had met an overwhelming defeat. Such a result was greatly deplored by many of the people residing in Hurley and vicinity, the prevalent opinion among whom was that such a move could not fail to do lasting good to the community. That their judgment was eminently correct has since been amply verified. Mr. McGeehan was elected chairman of the town of Vaughn in 1893, and was appointed postmaster of that place in October of the same year. He has five children living, three daughters and two sons.

M. G. McGeehan.

James McIver.

JAMES M'IVER was born in County Armagh, Ireland, January 6, 1836, and is a son of Patrick and Elizabeth McIver. When but nine years of age, he removed with his parents to Scotland, in the public schools of which country he received his education. After the death of his father, which occurred in 1855, he went to England, and learnt the iron trade in that country. There, also, he first became acquainted with Miss Sarah A. McCartin, a lady of excellent education, and teacher in the common schools of the country, to whom he was afterward married. Mr. and Mrs. McIver came to the United States in 1861, locating at first in the city of Philadelphia, where he at once found employment in one of the large iron factories of that city. In the meantime, he was devoting all of his spare moments to the study of law, continuing to do so even after his removal west to Milwaukee, to which city he moved in 1870. Upon arriving there, he located in Bay View, where he also procured a situation in the rolling mills. Thus he continued to live and learn, until in April, 1873, he was elected justice of the peace, and in the fall of the same year was selected by his constituents to serve in the State legislature of 1874. In March, 1892, Mr. McIver met with a severe loss in the death of his wife, by whom had been born to him six children. One of these is dead, while one son, Felix, is married, and resides in Minneapolis. There are also two daughters teaching in the public schools in Milwaukee, while two other daughters are filling positions of honor and trust in the same city.

James McIver.

His present wife (nee Mary L. Carroll), is a charming lady, who for a number of years was a highly respected and successful teacher in the public schools of Milwaukee.

In 1871 Mr. McIver called a meeting of the Catholics residing in Bay View, to take action regarding the erection of the present church of the Immaculate Conception, of which congregation, by the way, he was secretary and treasurer for many years. He was also actively interested in this undertaking in many different ways, collecting a considerable portion of the money required for the erection of the structure, taught the first altar boys to serve at Mass, and organized and taught the first choir their duties in connection with the services, and was conductor of the same for several years. In 1876, when the School Board of Bay View permitted the reading of the Bible in the public school, which caused considerable ill-feeling throughout the district, he took an active part in the suppression of that practice, and fought valiantly and openly for that condition of affairs so promptly and emphatically endorsed by the people of the State at the subsequent election. Mr. McIver has, in fact, been an active, energetic and public spirited citizen, who has given vent to a liberal disposition in a most unostentatious manner and contributed often and largely towards numerous commendable benefactions. As a public man, he was at one time State President of the Order of Ancient Hibernians, which position he maintained for many years, and, besides, organized branches of that Order in Racine, Kenosha, Janesville, Oshkosh, and several other of the more important towns throughout the State. He has also held the position of secretary and treasurer for Branch 45 of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin for the past eleven years, and still maintains the office of justice of the peace. He was police justice of Bay View before that village was annexed to the city of Milwaukee, and has for many years been so generally recognized for his thorough appreciation and understanding of the law, that he has been strongly urged to make application for admission to the State Bar, for which position he is most admirably adapted. Although he can by no means be classed as a teetotaler, Mr. McIver has ever been regarded as a most abstemious man, who although appreciating most thoroughly the effects of social intercourse, cares but very little for the exhilirating influence of stimulating beverages. He is also fond of tobacco, but uses it only in but moderate quantities.

A period of many years has past and gone since Mr. McIver first assumed the functions and responsibilities of a Justice of the Peace, yet so impartial have been his renderings, so unqualifiedly well has he fulfilled the minutest details of that important office, that his numerous constituents are unanimous in expressing the hope that he may be spared to maintain it for still many years to come.

Maurice McKenna.

MAURICE M'KENNA, the subject of this sketch, is a son of Maurice and Mary (Mullane) McKenna, who were natives of County Kerry, Ireland, and whose birth-place and residence until they removed to America was close to the beautiful and world-famed lakes of Killarney in that County. After a stormy voyage of seven weeks in a sailing vessel, they landed in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1832. On May 31, 1846, the subject of this sketch was born at Springfield, in the State of Massachusetts, he being the eighth of twelve children. In his infancy his parents removed to the town of Cambria, Niagara County, New York, where at the age of six years he first attended the common school of this township, reading in the Second Reader on his first day at school. In October, 1854, the family removed to Fond du Lac County, Wisconsin, settling on a wild and virgin farm in the town of Eldorado, and about twelve miles west of Fond du Lac, the county seat. Here our subject was educated in school district No. 4 of this town, until at the age of sixteen he passed a satisfactory examination and was admitted to the High School of the city of Fond du Lac. He attended this school in the spring term of each year, assisting his father on the farm during the harvest season and autumn, and in the winters teaching in the district schools, thus earning the money necessary to pay his expenses while attending the High School, and keeping up with his class, although attending said school but one term in each year. He was in the graduating class of the High School when he decided to enter the military service of his country, and on May 21, 1864, he enlisted at the city of Milwaukee as a volunteer in Company I, Thirty-ninth Wisconsin Infantry. He was in the engagement with General Forest on August 21, 1864, when that daring and confederate officer made his dash and raid into Memphis, Tennessee. After breaking through the Union lines and entering the city, Forest was compelled to retreat, and Mr. McKenna was with his regiment in the pursuit of the confederate cavalry. He was also on an expedition with supplies up the St. Francis River, when the boat transporting them struck a snag and sank in the river. On the way up the Mississippi River back to Memphis, while making a landing to take on wood, the expedition was fired at by a band of guerrillas, several being killed and wounded. The party subsequently effected a landing and pursued the enemy, who, however, had quickly beaten a retreat. Mr. McKenna, having served his time, was mustered out at Milwaukee with his regiment, and received an honorable discharge. The service in which his regiment was engaged comprised a portion of the campaign of General William T. Sherman on his memorable march to the sea. Shortly after being mustered out, Mr. McKenna received from the War Department a personal communication courteously acknowledging the efficient and patriotic service of his regiment. This communication, containing the autographic signature of President Lincoln, is still in his possession and very highly prized.

Maurice McKenna.

In 1868, at Chicago, Illinois, Mr. McKenna published a volume of poetry entitled "Elva Lee and Other Poems." In 1890 he published a larger volume entitled "Poems, Rhymes and Verses," which received flattering notice from high sources, and which was in the library of the Wisconsin State Building in Chicago at the World's Columbian Exposition in 1893. At the request of a committee of citizens of Fond du Lac, he also prepared and read the lines on the celebration in that city of the centennial of the inauguration of President Washington.

In 1870, Mr. McKenna was elected clerk of Fond du Lac County, and was twice reëlected to this position, each time with an increased majority, and serving in all six years, proving an efficient officer. With the exception of about two years' residence in the State of Iowa, he has lived ever since 1854 in Fond du Lac County. In 1876 he was elected a member of the Board of Education of the city of Fond du Lac, serving as such for a term of two years. He has also been for ten years a member of the Board of Supervisors of Fond du Lac County, representing the First Ward of the city of Fond du Lac. For the last four years he has been, and still is, chairman of that body.

At his last election, June 7, 1898, to this place, although Mr. McKenna is a Republican, and although the thirty-two members present of this board, voting for chairman, were politically evenly divided, there being sixteen Republicans and sixteen Democrats, still he was complimented with an unanimous rising vote by that body. He is the only person in the history of Fond du Lac County who has ever been elected to this office without opposition, no matter what the political complexion of the board may have been.

Mr. McKenna is a lawyer by profession. In 1865 he began the study of law in the office of Messrs. Blair and Colman, and the next year in the law office of Mr. Henry F. Rose in the same city. He was admitted to the bar in the circuit court of Fond du Lac County in June, 1876; to the supreme court of the State of Wisconsin, October 12, 1886, and to the district and circuit courts of the United States, July 12, 1887. He enjoys a large and lucrative practice in the county of his residence as well as in many other counties of the State, and he has successfully tried cases in courts of record in Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa and Kansas, as well as in the courts of the State of Wisconsin.

Mr. McKenna is a member of a number of Catholic and other organizations, among them being the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, Grand Army of the Republic, and Wisconsin Academy of Science, Arts and Letters. On August 19, 1875, he was married to Miss Nellie Fagan. They have an interesting family of two daughters, Minnie and Nora, a third one, Estella, having died December 28, 1895, when but a few months more than six years of age, and is buried in the Catholic cemetery of Calvary, near the city of Fond du Lac.

Thomas J. Neacy.

THE subject of the present sketch, Mr. Thomas J. Neacy, has been general manager of the extensive manufacturing establishment of the Filer and Stowell Co. of Milwaukee for a number of years past. He was born on January 17, 1848, at Dunmahon, County Louth, Ireland, his father being Laurence Neacy of that place, and his mother Miss Rose O'Byrne of Salterstown, also in the same county. His education first and last was almost entirely acquired in the schools of his native place, where he attended the Hagerstown National School until sixteen years of age. Though a reasonably studious youth and always exhibiting a proper desire to acquire knowledge, he also was distinguished for much activity and energy in other directions, and while a school boy, was noted as a leader in sports as well as for many boyish pranks, for which, in the home town, his name is still famous.

When in his eighteenth year, Mr. Neacy came to America and Wisconsin, locating at East Troy, in this State, where he at once entered upon a course of study at the East Troy High School. At a later date he also attended the Spencerian College in Milwaukee, completing a course in commercial studies at that institution. Having now reached his twenty-second year, he engaged in the active duties of a business career, entering the employ of the Filer, Stowell Co. as an apprentice, and with that institution, in one capacity or another, from then until the present day he steadfastly remained. But few in the city of Milwaukee or State of Wisconsin, for that matter, have a better record for so short a period of time as the subject of this sketch. From the lowly position of an apprentice he, by perseverance and strict attention to business, gradually worked his way onward and upward until he assumed the onerous and responsible position of general manager of one of the largest and most important of Milwaukee's numerous manufacturing concerns, in which, also, he is largely interested, owning one half of the stock. There is no concern of this kind in the Northwest that has acquired a more enviable and extended reputation in its own peculiar line than has that of the Filer and Stowell Co., and in connection with this, it is but right as well as highly gratifying to note that it is owing to the energy, perseverance and business tact of Mr. Neacy that is largely due the growth, prosperity and enviable notoriety obtained by that concern during its existence of forty years.

Thomas J. Neacy.

Mr. Neacy was married on April 16, 1885, to Miss Mary Conway of Milwaukee, and together they occupy a very desirable and pleasant home on Queen Anne place on the west side of the city. Mr. Neacy is a great admirer and advocate of the Temperance cause, he having taken the total abstinence pledge when but eight years of age, to which he has remained faithful ever since.

Hon. John Noonan.

IF there is one thing perhaps more than any other to which the average well intentioned American citizen likes to refer and upon which he honestly as well as consistently loves to dwell, it is that absolute absence of show and ostentation which marks the onward and upward progress of his equally so or even more fortunate fellows. By some it has ofttimes been alleged, and by many it is doubtlessly believed, that the American is prone to bluster and boast—unnecessarily so, in fact—while in truth his only attempt at doing so (if it can thus rightly be termed) is in a plain, sturdy, determined allusion to that condition of personal equality and absolute freedom of action and of speech which is his inalienable right as a native born or adopted citizen of the country. And it is in every respect a condition of which he may at all times feel justly proud. This fact, at least time is still proving in the thousands upon thousands who annually emigrate to America, to make a part of its industrial and social systems, and sinking the individual characteristics known but to their fatherland, become heart and soul one of that grand amalgamation which is fast approaching its place as first and foremost among the nations of the earth. To a certain few it has ever been a subject of wonder that one could willingly transfer his allegiance from his native to his adopted land, and yet how many instances are there of men who in doing so have done honor to both, and who, unhampered by endless limitations and restrictions, which barred his way and fettered his actions at home, found in this new field the proper scope for his ambition, the helping hand, the friendly recognition, the generous assistance which genuine merit can always find. It is, sometimes, through such means that the power within the man, his greatness and ability, have first been made known to those dwelling in the land of his nativity; and then, while mourning his loss as loyal subject, associate or fellow countryman, they at least feel proud of the fact that he at once belonged to them, and never fail to honor him for what he may have done. Nor do all such instances, nor even a majority of them, for that matter, apply to but the most exalted achievements. There are other conditions equally satisfying, fully as desirable, when a man's sphere, though necessarily limited, earns for him an abundance of returns in the well merited appreciation of those who know him. To expect more than this,—to fill the part allotted in life's drama,—were too much, even ungracious in the face of the fact that we are all, to a great extent, creatures of chance. Hence Thomas Heywood has most truly said: "The world's a theater, the earth a stage, which God and nature do with actors fill;" as such, therefore, must we fulfill our parts unquestioningly and as well as the power within us for so doing will permit of.

Hon. John Noonan.

The subject of the present sketch, the Hon. John Noonan, is one of those who, although of alien birth, has striven with and conquered his destiny in America. He was born in Ireland in 1846, but was brought by his parents to the United States during the following year. Upon arriving they immediately started West, locating permanently in Chicago, in which city Mr. Noonan remained until eighteen years of age. After learning the machinist trade he in 1867 removed to Oconto, Wisconsin, where he entered the employ of the Oconto Company, and there he has remained ever since. Mr. Noonan soon proved himself a first-class and reliable artisan, as a result of which he was given complete control of the company's mills at Oconto, Wisconsin, and Bay de Noque, Michigan. He was also called upon to fill other responsible positions, being chief of the Oconto fire department or alderman for twelve consecutive years. He retired from the mayoralty in 1894.

Mr. Noonan was married to Miss Mary Moroney in 1869, and the result of that union has been a family of seven children, four boys and three girls. One daughter is now a professed Sister of Notre Dame, and one son, Herbert, is a member of the Society of Jesus, and is located in Florissant, Missouri.

Mr. Noonan is at present county president of Division No. 1, Ancient Order of Hibernians. From 1884 to 1896 he was a trustee of St. Joseph's parish, and as such took an active part in the building of the new church which was completed in Oconto in 1897. Politically he is a staunch Democrat, and has attended all of the state conventions as a delegate since 1890.

Patrick Henry O'Brien.

PATRICK HENRY O'BRIEN was born in the mining village of Phoenix, Keweenaw County, Michigan, and was raised in the copper region of the Upper Peninsula of that State. His earlier education was obtained in school at Calumet, where he remained as pupil until fourteen years of age. He then entered upon an active business career as workman in a copper mine, at which he continued for nearly three years. He then entered the High School at Calumet, where he completed his studies, graduating with honors at the age of nineteen. For a couple of years following, Mr. O'Brien taught school, after which he entered the Law Department of the Northern Indiana Normal School at Valparaiso, Indiana, from which institution he graduated and was admitted to the bar in April, 1891. During the month following, he located at Superior, Wisconsin, and has been a resident and practitioner there since that time.

Shortly after locating in Superior, Mr. O'Brien formed a partnership with H. J. Loud, under the firm name of Loud and O'Brien, doing a very excellent and extensive business. This firm was dissolved in May, 1896, after which he associated with him Mr. John H. Vaughn, his present partner, under the firm name of O'Brien and Vaughn.

In a quiet and unobtrusive manner, Mr. O'Brien has succeeded in making himself both prominent and popular throughout the section in which he has resided for a number of years past. A staunch Catholic and firm upholder of all of the tenets of that Faith, he still exhibits a broad-mindedness of character, which has won for him the friendship and esteem of people in general, no matter to what denomination they may belong. As a public orator, he has also gained considerable reputation, and is in fact in much demand, having made himself exceedingly popular throughout the Upper Peninsula, where his speeches have always been looked upon as a feature at every public gathering of importance.

In the field of politics, where are to be found so many questions of a vexed and uncertain character, Mr. O'Brien is regarded as an advanced and even radical

P. H. O'Brien.

Democrat. This assertion may indeed be said to have been emphasized by his attitude during Mr. Cleveland's last term as President, during two years of which period he affiliated with the People's Party. Since the retirement of President Cleveland, however, he has returned to his first love, always having unlimited confidence in the ability of the people to manage and control their own affairs.

The present firm of O'Brien and Vaughn, of which he is the senior partner, is engaged in what is commonly known as general law business, but makes a specialty of damage suits for personal injury, and have to-day undoubtedly the distinction of maintaining the largest clientage in this particular channel of professional duties at the head of the Lakes.

Mr. O'Brien was united in marriage to Miss Bessie Kelly of Ottawa, Canada, on the 23d day of June, 1897.

J. L. O'Connor.

DR. O'CONNOR was born at Hartford, Washington County, Wisconsin, on a farm and was educated in the country school district of his native place, and the High School of Hartford, Wis. After having completed a course at the High School he divided his time between teaching and working on the farm and doing day labor on the railroad and at other employment.

In 1876 he entered the Wisconsin State University, through which, by his own exertions and such assistance as his parents could afford him, he continued his studies in all for nearly five years, graduating from the law department of the State University in the year 1881.

He located in the practice of law at Madison, Wis., selecting that place, as he expressed himself, "because of my poverty," which fact of course made it impossible for him to own a library necessary for the proper conducting of a law business. In fact at that time his entire possession in the way of books consisted of an old copy of the Revised Statutes which was presented to him by a personal friend. By locating in Madison, however, he overcame the difficulties of attempting the practice of law without an ample library, as there he had ready access to the great law library of the State, where he spent much of his time in further preparing himself for the duties of his profession during the waiting, or as it is sometimes designated "the starvation period" of his profession.

J. L. O'Connor.

In 1884 he was nominated by the Democrats of Dane County, without opposition, for the office of District Attorney, and was elected with the entire county ticket. Two years later he was renominated, and thoroughly canvassed the county, appealing to the law-abiding element and the taxpayers of the County for their support, based upon the successful performance of his duties during the first term, and although the balance of the ticket was most gloriously defeated by a majority ranging from 500 to 2,000, he was again reëlected to fill the duties of that important position.

In 1887 Mr. O'Connor formed a partnership with R. M. Bashford and T. A. Polleys, this partnership relation continued until the fall of 1896.

In the famous campaign of 1890 Mr. O'Connor was the nominee of the Democratic party for the office of Attorney General of the State, and with the balance of the ticket was elected. He was reëlected to this office in 1892, and held the office in all for four years.

Prior to these events, however, that is, towards the latter end of 1889, Mr. O'Connor was married to Anna L. Wood of Madison, Wis., and it was during his absence on his wedding tour that he was without any knowledge whatever of the matter elected city attorney of the city of Madison. During his incumbency of this office, several of the aldermen and the chief of the fire department were accused of boodling in the purchase of hose for the fire department. On the strength of the evidence produced in these cases Mr. O'Connor brought impeachment proceedings, in the doing of which, however, he met with violent opposition on the part of the daily press as well as the friends of the accused aldermen. But he sturdily maintained his position, and so thoroughly did the defendants become convinced of the fact that he was in deadly earnest that they secured the very ablest counsel the city afforded to assume charge of their case. The result of the trial fully vindicated Mr. O'Connor in the position he had taken, as it resulted in the impeachment of the chief of the fire department and two aldermen upon the charge of bribery.

It was during his term of office as Attorney-general that Mr. O'Connor acquired a position of prominence for so young a man among the members of the bar (he is the youngest that ever held that office in the state) who watched with growing interest his seemingly unequaled contest against the most brilliant and erudite minds in the profession. It was during his administration, in fact, that the noted treasury cases involving nearly a million of the people's money were tried. In each of these cases though bitterly contested the decisions were favorable to the prosecution, and when carried to the Supreme Court of the State for final disposition, that court affirmed the findings of the lower one. So intense was the feeling in regard to these trials, so many personal interests were involved, that some time later an energetic effort was made by both Democrats and Republicans to reimburse the several defendants with at least a portion of the moneys refunded by them to the state. But this nefarious scheme was also defeated by means of an able argument made by him before the Joint Committee on Claims.

Mr. O'Connor is at the present time the proud and happy father of three sturdy sons, Arthur, Clarence and Jerome.

M. O'Malley, M. D.

THE subject of this sketch was born at Westport, Dane County, Wisconsin, in October, 1858. As will be seen by the following, he was favored by special advantages in laying a well-grounded foundation for the life work of a professional man. During his earlier years, he attended the public schools, acquiring general proficiency in all of the branches pertaining to a common school education. Well grounded, then, in all of the elementary departments, he, when fourteen years of age, entered the Sacred Heart College, at Watertown, Wisconsin, where he devoted three years in pursuit of the higher branches. Completing his course at Watertown, he then entered Niagara University, New York, where he devoted six years to the classical course. Finishing his philosophical studies in 1882, in addition to a fair knowledge of the Latin, Greek, and French languages, he then returned to Wisconsin and the Sacred Heart College at Watertown, where he remained as professor of Latin for one year, at the same time devoting all of his spare moments to study. In the summer of 1883, he accompanied his father on a trip to Europe, and while in Edinburgh, Scotland, first conceived the idea of taking up medicine as a profession. Even then he was slow and cautious in making a final decision as regarded his life's work, so that it was not until 1885 that he arrived at a definite understanding in regard to the matter, and began the study of medicine in the office of the late Dr. William Fox, of Milwaukee.

Dr. M. O'Malley.

In September of the same year, he entered Rush Medical College, of Chicago, and took the longest and most thorough course at that time given in that institution, remaining at the college and Cook County Hospital during his summer vacations, in order that he might obtain all the practical information these institutions were offering. While in Rush Medical College, he was appointed assistant in the clinic of the late Professor Gunn, then chief surgeon of that institution. During his second year at the college, he was chosen pro-sector by Professor Charles T. Parkes, then professor of anatomy, and often spent till one o'clock in the morning alone in the college, working out some difficult dissection on a body, which Professor Parkes would use in his lecture before the students next morning. By an almost unanimous vote of his fellow students, he was elected president of the class of 1888, consisting of one hundred and forty-two graduates, and began the practice of his profession in April of the same year, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Since that time, his practice has steadily as well as rapidly increased, until he has been compelled to admit that the life of a physician is one continuous round of labor and anxiety. Dr. O'Malley has on several occasions been requested to occupy a professor's chair in the medical college of this city, but has always declined, feeling that it is impossible for a physician engaged in general practice to do justice to his patients, and at the same time devote himself to college work.

Dr. O'Malley was married in June, 1890, to Elizabeth Sweeney, of Watertown, Wisconsin. In the spring of 1894, accompanied by his wife, he made a pleasure trip through the Western States and Old Mexico, where he gained much valuable information regarding the different health resorts for persons suffering from pulmonary troubles. The knowledge thus obtained has also proved of great assistance to him in his practice, enabling him from practical observation to direct patients in selecting the different altitudes and atmospheres for their individual conditions. Dr. O'Malley is at the present time living in the same locality where he started practice nearly ten years ago, and with justice prides himself on having one of the best family practices in the city.

W. B. Quinlan.

AMONG the younger generation of men who quietly and unostentatiously are making enviable history for the state of Wisconsin as well as building up an enduring and commendable reputation for themselves, is the subject of the present sketch, Mr. William Barclay Quinlan of Marinette. He has in addition to this the distinction of being a native of the state, having been born at Pewaukee, Waukesha County, on the 24th day of March, 1869. Mr. Quinlan is a son of Thomas Quinlan, a native of County Cork, Ireland, who, learning of the many material advantages afforded in the rapid development of the western hemisphere, emigrated to the United States when but nineteen years of age. Upon his arrival in this country, Mr. Quinlan at once proceeded west and located in the city of Milwaukee, remaining there until 1866, when he removed to Pewaukee, Wisconsin. There he embarked in an active business career in which he succeeded to such an extent that after thirty years of diligent application to the duties pertaining to his calling, he was enabled to retire permanently and enjoy pleasures of a well earned and merited rest. The mother of William Barclay Quinlan, whose maiden name was Anna Elizabeth Coleman, was also a native of Ireland, having been born in the county of Sligo. Her associations with this country also date back to an early period in her existence, she having come to the United States with her parents when still but a very young child. They at first located in the city of New York, but later removed West, locating permanently in Waukesha, Wisconsin. It was in the "Spring City" that she subsequently met Thomas Quinlan, and there she was married to him on the 12th day of October, 1863. She died on January 10, 1880.

W. B. Quinlan.

The youth of William Barclay Quinlan was spent, like that of a majority of boys of his day, in acquiring the elementary part of an education which was afterwards to prove the basis of his life's work. He then became a student at the High School in Pewaukee, graduating from that institution with the class of 1887. Naturally of a studious and persevering turn of mind these characteristics were amplified and strengthened by the fact that he had already fully decided upon the law as his future profession and hence readily appreciated the necessity for cultivating these mental qualifications of assimilation and retention which are such invaluable qualifications in one of that calling. Having there completed his scholastic course at the High School, he at once entered the office of Carney and Ryan at Waukesha, with whom he remained as a student until the latter part of 1889.

Young Quinlan had evidently acquired a most proper appreciation of Pope's well turned adage: "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." He recognized to a full extent the seriousness of the work before him and the absolute necessity of a proper and thorough understanding of the duties of his calling before launching his craft upon the fickle sea of chance. He believed in being on intimate terms of acquaintance with the vessel upon which he purposed risking his earthly all, and with laudable determination set forth to acquire what he might of the steerman's art the better to avoid those hidden dangers which ever confront the ardent and venturesome spirit in its efforts to advance. So, having obtained somewhat of a grasp upon his subject, he next entered the literary department of the State University, completing the English course in that institution in the month of June, 1892. Following this, he, in the fall of the same year, entered the law department of the University, from which after much diligent application he graduated with the degree of L.L. B. with the class of 1894. Following this he was sometime after admitted to the practice of his profession in the state bar, United States Circuit Court and Supreme Court of Wisconsin. Thus thoroughly prepared and equipped for the pursuit of his chosen calling Mr. Quinlan at once located in Marinette, Wisconsin, where in the month of February, 1895, he formed a law partnership with Mr. Charles C. Daily under the firm name of Quinlan and Daily.

Conrad K. Reichert.

DR. REICHERT was born in St. Lawrence, Washington County, Wisconsin, on December 5, 1855. His parents, John G. and Barbara Reichert, both natives of Bavaria, emigrated from that country to the United States in 1844, coming almost direct to Wisconsin. Young Reichert acquired his education in the public and parochial schools of his native city and Milwaukee, having removed to the latter place in 1868. Here, after graduating from the First Ward School, he entered the employ of John Traudt, who was at that time engaged in the dry goods business, remaining with him for nearly three years. Subsequently, in 1871, he engaged in the wholesale leaf tobacco business, continuing to develop the same until 1879. In that year he took as a partner Michael A. La Boule, the firm name becoming Reichert and La Boule, and as such it has since remained, and at present is acknowledged to be one of the largest and best known houses of the kind in the West. Aside from this, however, Mr. Reichert is largely interested in Milwaukee real estate and Colorado mining properties.

Conrad K. Reichert.

In 1877, Mr. Reichert was married to Miss Susan La Boule, of St. Lawrence, who is a sister of the Rev. Joseph

S. La Boule, John La Boule and Michael La Boule, of Milwaukee. Mr. Reichert was an active factor in bringing about the erection of the new St. Michael's Church in Milwaukee, he being a prominent member of the congregation and one of the trustees of the parish. He resides on Highland Boulevard. Mr. Reichert's father still lives in the city of Milwaukee and is a member of St. Joseph's congregation. His mother died about twenty-five years ago.

Anthony V. Romadka.

AMONG those who have been long and prominently identified with the Catholic cause in the city of Milwaukee is the subject of this sketch, Mr. A. V. Romadka, a member of the well-known firm of Romadka Brothers of that city. He was born June 13, 1839, at Sedelcan, Bohemia, Austria, and in the schools of his native country he was also fortunate in obtaining an excellent education. In 1853 his parents, Wenceslaus and Mary (Hashek) Romadka, emigrated to the United States, young Anthony accompanying them. Upon arriving he immediately struck out for himself, locating at first in Cleveland, Ohio, where he remained for about a year, learning the trade of a stone-cutter. He then removed farther west to Milwaukee, where he acquired some knowledge of the carpenter trade. In 1862 he entered into another field of usefulness, having obtained an appointment with the Prairie du Chien Railroad as timekeeper, his duty being to note the arrival and departure of all trains at the company's principal station, which, together with the company's shops, was located on Third street and St. Paul avenue. After serving for some time in this capacity, he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and obtained employment in the shipyards at that place. In the meantime his brother Charles had become interested in the trunk business, and, recognizing the many possibilities for the future of that industry, obtained an option on the already established business of John Cocop, and invited his brother Anthony to join him in the enterprise. As a result of this, Anthony Romadka severed his relations with the shipyard people at Cincinnati, returning to Milwaukee in 1864, when he immediately entered into partnership with his brother, under the firm name of Romadka Brothers. From this time on the affairs of the concern prospered in the most gratifying and satisfactory manner, and before the close of the following year, besides the business already acquired on Broadway (then Main street), they bought Mr. John Clark's business on Wisconsin street and on Grand avenue, and a few years later they purchased the Third street property.

Always a zealous and consistent Catholic, Mr. Romadka was much disquieted, upon taking up his residence in Milwaukee, to note that no provision whatsoever had been made for the spiritual care and direction of the Bohemians belonging to that belief, of whom there were now within the city's limits quite a number. This, of course, proved anything but satisfactory to a majority of them, who, owing to their want of familiarity with other languages, were thus debarred from many religious privileges to which, at home, under more satisfactory conditions, they had been accustomed. So he set about arranging for the organization of a Bohemian congregation in Milwaukee which might be placed under the immediate personal administration of a priest of their own nationality. To this end a meeting was called, the Bohemian families from all around meeting there and holding a series of divine services at St. Joseph's Church under the direction of the Rev. Father Holzhauer, who was pastor of St. Joseph's and who kindly allowed them the use of his church. The Bohemian Catholic congregation once established, with the Rev. Father Zastera, of Chicago, as resident pastor, permission was granted by the Ordinary for them to hold services for the time being in old St. Peter's Cathedral on Martin street. In the meantime, however, they purchased a residence from Mr. Hozee on Jackson street for their pastor. The next progressive step taken by these people was in 1866, when they bought a lot on the corner of Sixth and Cherry streets, upon which, however, owing to a marked want of harmony among the members, a church as intended was not erected. They next contemplated the purchase of an old Episcopal Church building on the east side of the city, but, owing to the Bishop's objection to that location, the project was dropped. Finally they purchased the corner lot on Fourth and Cherry streets, which property is at the present time occupied by St. Nepomucene Church.

Anthony V. Romadka.

But the efforts on the part of our subject for the advancement of Catholic interests among the people of his own nationality were by no means limited to this particular undertaking. Some years previously, while a resident of Cincinnati and a regular attendant at one of the Catholic churches there, Mr. Romadka joined the Young Men's Sodality, of which he became an earnest and active member. It was, indeed, through his energy and influence that this Sodality was organized in Milwaukee, he advising Father Lalumiere of the beneficial results accruing from the maintenance of a similar organization in Cincinnati. This Sodality is now one of the numerous organizations connected with the Gesu congregation, and is, in fact, regarded as one of the strongest and most active in the city. It was also before going to Cincinnati that he assisted in the organization and establishment of the Gesellenverein at St. Mary's, the name of which was afterwards changed to the Deutscher Maennerverein in 1858. In 1881, when the Rev. Father Van der Erden established a school society for the purpose of organizing a free school system in Milwaukee, he found an ardent supporter and zealous assistant in Mr. Romadka.

Timothy E. Ryan.

THE subject of the present sketch, Mr. Timothy E. Ryan, present postmaster of Waukesha, as well as a prominent and widely known member of the bar of that city, was born in the town of Greenwich, Washington County, New York, in the year 1859. Mr. Ryan is a son of Jeremiah and Johanna (Cronin) Ryan, both of whom were natives of the County of Tipperary, Ireland. They came together to the United States in 1849, settling at first in Troy, New York, but soon afterwards removed to the town of Greenwich, Washington County, New York, where Mr. Ryan found employment as foreman in an extensive lime business conducted by R. W. Loeber, with whom he remained for nearly a quarter of a century. Desirous, however, of improving his condition and advancing still more rapidly the interests of his family, Mr. Ryan removed West to Wisconsin in 1872, locating in Waukesha County, on what was then known as the Dorothy farm, which was located in the town of Pewaukee, where he died in December, 1887. His widow survives him and is still living on the old homestead

Young Ryan, who was a lad of thirteen years when his parents moved West, had already been given the advantages of an ordinary education in the public schools in Washington County, New York, and for some time, also, in Greenwich Academy, in the same state. Coming West, he continued his studies for a while at Pewaukee High School, and afterwards taught country schools for six successive winters, while one year he devoted entirely to the completion of a course at the Spencerian Business College in Milwaukee. This done, he began the study of law in the office of Van Dyke and Van Dyke in Milwaukee, with whom he remained for one year. He then entered the law department of the University of Wisconsin, where, after completing a course of two and one-half years, he graduated with the class of 1885. Having been admitted to the bar, he now formed a partnership with Judge P. H. Carney of Waukesha, continuing his business relations with that gentleman until 1889, when the connection was dissolved and he assumed similar relations with Mr. E. Merton of Burlington, Wisconsin, under the firm name of Ryan and Merton. These gentlemen at once established an office in Waukesha, and the business, as well as the partnership established at that time, continues until the present day. As a practitioner Mr. Ryan has been engaged in many important cases, most prominent among which were the Waukesha Pipe Line suits, which have created considerable interest throughout the country for some time past. Mr. Ryan was appointed postmaster of Waukesha by President Cleveland on January 10, 1895, but that has not made it necessary for him to neglect his large law practice. In politics he has always been a staunch and outspoken Democrat, and as such was recognized by his party in the campaign of 1888, when he was nominated for attorney-general of the State. Cautious and conservative, yet liberal in his views, free from all taint of rabbidness or extreme partisanship, yet an energetic and tireless worker, he has in many ways proved of much value to his party, both as a counselor and campaigner. He is a prominent member of the Catholic Church as well as of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin and the Catholic Order of Foresters. Mr. Ryan was married to Miss Mary E. Bannon of Waukesha, on October 5, 1887. Five children have resulted from this union, Margaret, Francis, Agnes Josephine, Paul Joseph, deceased, and T. E. Ryan, Jr.

Timothy E. Ryan.

Philip Sheridan.

DR. SHERIDAN is not only a product of the state of Wisconsin, but also of Green Bay, or at least of what has since become a part of Green Bay, having been born at Fort Howard on September 28, 1869. It was there also that he spent the early years of his life, attending as soon as practicable the public and parochial schools of Green Bay, where he acquired the elementary portion of his education. When sixteen years of age, Mr. Sheridan entered the Sacred Heart College at Watertown, Wis., remaining there for three years. Then an intense desire to forward his material interests in the world induced him to discontinue his studies and almost immediately set forth for the mining regions of Lake Superior, to which section of the country many venturesome spirits were at that time wending their way, following as it were the pace set for them by thousands of hardy pioneers who had already established themselves in that particular locality. There he prospected extensively as well as successfully, one of his first undertakings being the development of the Sheridan mine at Iron River, Mich. Young as he was, his energy and business instincts made him a leader among men, and so in 1890 we find him organizing the Sheridan Mining Company at Escanaba, Mich. These earlier experiences were followed by others of increasing importance, and closely following upon his development of the enterprises already mentioned we find him engaged in a similar business in Northern Minnesota along the Vermilion and Mesaba ranges, where for two years he devoted almost his entire time to the location of mineral and timber lands both as a personal speculator and as a matter of business in behalf of others who had secured his services for that specific purpose. In 1891 Mr. Sheridan returned to Green Bay and there began to carry out in a practical manner the plans for his future career. He had, in fact, long before decided upon engaging in the practice of law, and now a suitable time having arrived, he entered the office of that well known and justly famed member of the profession, the Hon. Thomas R. Hudd, with whom he remained as a student for one year. He then entered the Law Department of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, graduating from there with the class of 1895. Following his graduation, he returned to Green Bay and was formally admitted to the bar. Then began the actual struggle for a business existence; and here it was that the perseverance and dogged energy developed in his previous career among the mining regions of the north stood him well in stead. He opened an unpretentious office in Green Bay, where for several months following he conducted a successful and remunerative business. He then formed business relations with his present partner, Mr. William Lincoln Evans, and they have since practiced together under the firm name of Sheridan and Evans.

Philip Sheridan.

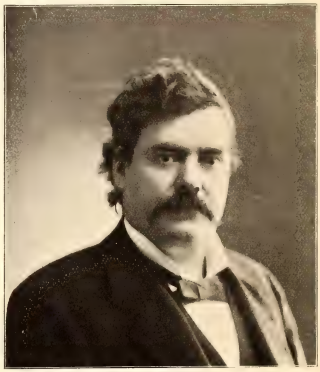
Mr. Sheridan's first law case did much towards establishing his reputation as a conservative adviser and successful practitioner—in fact, a safe man. It was the well-known action of the State of Wisconsin vs. Forsyth in which Mr. Sheridan was appointed by Judge

Hastings of Green Bay to take charge of the defense. The charge was one of gross criminality, and public feeling against the prisoner was exceedingly strong. So successful, however, did the defendant's lawyer handle the case that the verdict returned was merely for simple assault. The case in fact was fought most ably, as a result of which Mr. Sheridan acquired a most desirable reputation among the members of his profession throughout the state. Both as a progressive citizen and somewhat extensive property owner, Mr. Sheridan was one of the most active in agitating the union of Fort Howard and Green Bay, and in fact it may in all truth be said that his personal influence had much to do with the bringing about of that desirable arrangement. He is married and has a very pleasant and desirable home in the down town region of Green Bay.

Hon. P. J. Somers.

THE subject of this sketch was born in Waukesha County, Wisconsin, on the 12th day of April, 1850. For some years following he derived all of the benefits pertaining to a life of pastoral simplicity, living upon his father's farm. The parents of Peter J. Somers were both born in Ireland but came to America in 1837, some thirteen years previous to the birth of Mr. Somers. After remaining in New York for a brief period they started towards the West, finally locating in Wisconsin, settling at once at Menomonee, Waukesha County, where they resided for the rest of their lives. Having assimilated most of the educational benefits to be derived from a somewhat prolonged attendance at the district school, young Somers attended the Whitewater Normal School for three years, and subsequently an Academy. In 1872 he removed to Milwaukee, where he began the study of law in the office of the late Chief Justice Ryan; there he remained for two years, at the end of which time he was admitted to the bar. Since then he has practiced his profession continuously in the city of Milwaukee. Mr. Somers had not long been engaged in practice before it became generally understood that he was eminently well qualified for the professional duties he had thus early assumed; his ability was unquestionable. So energetic and painstaking did he prove and so trustworthy was he considered that he was elected city attorney of Milwaukee in 1882 and maintained that office for two years following. In the spring of 1890 he was elected to the Common Council from his ward by a large majority, though heretofore the ward had always been represented by a Republican; he was also during this period of service president of the Council. In the fall of 1890 he was nominated by the Democratic Convention and elected by a large majority to the office of Mayor, made vacant by the election of Mayor George W. Peck as Governor of Wisconsin. Mr. Somers was again nominated and elected to the Mayoralty in 1892. Before his term of office had expired he was elected to Congress from the Fourth District to complete the term for which John L. Mitchell had been elected in the previous fall, but upon which he had failed to enter owing to his election to the United States Senate. At the expiration of his term as member of Congress he declined renomination and reëlection, as his private business and law practice demanded his entire attention.



Hon. Peter J. Somers.

In 1878 Mr. Somers was married to Miss Catherine F. Murphy, a native of Milwaukee, and to them have been born eight children, five boys and three girls. As one intimately acquainted with him has been wont to remark, Mr. Somers has many of the elements of a successful and popular public man, and had he chosen to remain in public life, and but for the changing phases of political affairs, there is little doubt that he would have had a long lease of political power. His success in business has been very noticeable, while as a lawyer his reputation has long been well assured. As a speaker Mr. Somers also ranks high, being both logical and convincing, while a fund of latent humor seems ever ready at his command. His efforts in this direction are, in fact, spontaneous, and thus being entirely free from the labored attempts of the average orator are most highly appreciated. Mr. Somers in religion is a Catholic and in politics a Democrat.

John Toohey.

WE may watch with wonder and surprise the meteoric flight of some of unknown quality and position, notice their evident and striking success in the active arena of professional or business life, even be led to thinking well of their achievements, and yet, in and through all there is a measure of uncertainty—want of faith, as it were—which even our best wishes, and honest desire to do unequivocal justice to the person involved, is entirely beyond our control.

Somehow or another it has always been the fashion among men of mature judgment and conscientious principles to look for something more suitable in character, more positive, more actually real than the rush and glitter surrounding such a career, preferring them to those evanescent characteristics which mark the life and progress of one of less sterling and reliable qualities. In other words, then, we are proud to give honor where honor is due, feeling that in so doing our judgment will not be impaired, neither will our confidence be misplaced.

Among the younger, better known and most progressive of Milwaukee's active business men of to-day, is the subject of the present sketch, Mr. John Toohey, who, although having fully a decade to travel before arriving at the zenith of life, has already acquired a widespread and enviable reputation in his chosen profession. Mr. Toohey is a native of the Buckeye State, having been born in Greenwich, Ohio, July 6, 1856. The name of his father was Martin Toohey, and the maiden name of his mother Mary Cauley, both having been born in Tipperary, Ireland, where they lived for a number of years prior to coming to this country. Mr. Toohey is absolutely and emphatically a self-made man, the many advantages accruing to him as master of the intricacies of his profession being due entirely to his own energy and industry, as the education afforded him by his parents was, owing to unavoidable circumstances, limited to that to be acquired in the common schools. At an early age Mr. Toohey, having located in Wisconsin, entered the employ of the Bay View Rolling Mills, where he worked for a number of years and became a most reliable and skillful craftsman. In the meantime he labored assiduously, accumulating the necessary knowledge to perfect him for his chosen profession. In the undertaking he was finally successful, graduating from the law school of Wisconsin University in 1884. From that time his success has been uninterrupted and secure. He was elected District Attorney for Milwaukee County on the Republican ticket in the Presidential campaign of 1888, and was renominated for the same office in 1890, but, like others, made one of the many victims who were smothered in the overwhelming landslide experienced in that campaign as a result of the Bennett Law fight. While officiating as District Attorney of Milwaukee, he was an exceedingly busy man, being interested as prosecuting attorney in over three hundred cases, particularly noticeable among them being the Cooper murder case, Hatchard case, and now celebrated Gun Wa case. He was one of the leading counsels in the case of conspiracy charged against the architects and contractors in the $300,000.00 almshouse litigation, which was tried but a short time ago, in the Municipal Court of Milwaukee, he at that time acting as counsel for the defendant. He also successfully prosecuted the suit for little Leo Slensby against the Milwaukee Street Railway Company in a suit for $11,000, recovering judgment for the full amount.

John Toohey.

Mr. Toohey was married on October 9, 1889, to Elizabeth C. McGuigan, daughter of Ambrose McGuigan, Superintendent of Milwaukee Postal Station D, and has one child, Marie Toohey, now six years of age. He is now engaged in the general practice of his profession in partnership with Mr. J. L. Gilmore, with whom he became associated in March, 1886, and it is needless to say that the large circle of friends and acquaintances he has gathered around him in his thirty years of residence in this community has aided largely in the up-building of the present very satisfactory business of which the firm is in control. Mr. Toohey is a prominent and consistent Catholic, a communicant of the Gesu congregation, and an active member of the Cardinal Gibbons Reading Circle, and a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters.

Nicholas Treis.

NICHOLAS TREIS was born in the city of Milwaukee, on April 19, 1860. His father was a native of Reinboeln, near Coblenz, Germany, in which place he first saw the light on the 24th day of August, 1822, while his mother was born in the latter city on the 24th of September preceding. These two were married on the 24th of August, 1844, removing to the home of the husband, where they remained until April, 1855, at which time they emigrated to the United States, arriving finally in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on the 10th day of July in that year. Here the life of young Treis was similar to that of a majority of boys, his education being obtained at St. Mary's parochial school, where he continued to study until fourteen years of age. He then entered actively upon a business career, being apprenticed to the plumbing and steam fitting trade, serving his time in that capacity for a period of four years. Having concluded his apprenticeship, during which period he had by diligent and strict attention to business acquired a thorough knowledge of the trade, he assumed charge of the steam heating and hot water heating departments of the extensive wholesale and retail establishments then and now conducted by the firm of Rundle and Spence. After serving in this capacity for a period of nearly ten years, during which time he superintended the construction and erection of extensive steam plants in all portions of the city of Milwaukee, State of Wisconsin, and elsewhere, he associated himself with Mr. Robert Cordes, and, purchasing the interests of Rundle and Spence in this particular department, commenced a partnership business in steam and hot water heating under the firm name of Cordes and Treis. Since that, to him a notable experience in his career, Mr. Treis has by strict attention to business and those progressive instincts which maintain to a person of thoughtful and observant character, obtained for himself a reputation as a master in his particular craft. This condition alone has been the means of securing to him many valuable business contracts for the supply of hot water and steam heating apparatus throughout a territory to which there may be said to be hardly any limit. Of the numerous notable contracts carried out by him, however, the parties interested in which are within the knowledge of most residents of Milwaukee, may be mentioned those completed in the residence of Archbishop Katzer, for Notre Dame Convent, St. Joseph's Convent, Convent of St. Francis, the Kneipp's Water Cure Sanitarium of Milwaukee, St. Anthony's Church, St. Mary's Church and school, St. Michael's Church and school, St. Mary's School at Ashland, St. Mary's Church at Marquette, Mich., St. Agnes' Hospital at Fond du Lac, St. Peter's Hospital at St. Louis, Mo., St. Mary's Hospital, Oshkosh, St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum at St. Francis, and others.

Nicholas Treis.

Mr. Treis was married to Miss Kitty Mullenbach at St. Mary's Church, Detroit, Michigan, on February 23, 1884, and their family at the present time consists of four children, Richard, George, Millie and Flora. Mr. Treis has been a member of the Family Protective Society for the past eighteen years and for half that period has belonged to the Society of St. Bonaventura; he has also been a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters for the past eight years, and of the Orphan Society for five years.

John H. M. Wigman.

JOHN H. M. WIGMAN, senior member of the law firm of Wigman and Martin, of Green Bay, Wisconsin, and son of James B. and Matilda (Doorenboos) Wigman, was born in the city of Amsterdam, Holland, on the 15th day of August, 1835. He attended the schools of his native city till he was nine years of age, and was then sent to the Catholic College in the Province of Limburg, where he remained till the fall of 1847, on December 9th of which year his mother died. It also became evident, at about this time, owing to his father's rapidly failing health, that a change would be necessary in the affairs of the family. At this time, the Rev. Theodore Van den Broek, a Dominican missionary, was on a visit to Holland, and he, being an old acquaintance of Mr. Wigman's father, induced him to let the subject of this sketch and his brother, Henry J. Wigman, go to the United States with him. They left the city of Rotterdam on the 18th day of March, 1848, on the ship "Maria Magdalena," which did not sail, however, until the 25th day of March. After a voyage of forty-two days, they landed at New York on the 6th day of May, and arrived at Little Chute (where Father Van den Broek had a mission) on the 9th day of June following. Mr. Wigman remained with Father Van den Broek until the end of July, 1849, during which time he was employed in teaching the ordinary branches of a common school education, as well as the Catechism, to a number of half-breeds, Canadians and Indians. Fortunately for the interests of his undertaking at this time, as well as for those of his pupils, Mr. Wigman was well versed in the German and French, as well as his native tongue. Towards the end of July, 1849, at the close of the school term, he left Father Van den Broek, and engaged in farming in Wrightstown, Brown County, where again his leisure hours were occupied, at the request of Father Van den Broek, in teaching the Catechism to the Indians and half-breeds, of whom there was quite a settlement there, and preparing them for their first Communion.

Mr. Wigman continued in the occupation of farming and other manual labor until the year 1854, when he entered a dry-goods store as clerk, which position he occupied for a little over two years, when he was induced to take charge of the public school in the town of Scott (then town of Green Bay); the town of Green Bay was then composed of the towns of Scott, Preble, Humboldt and Green Bay. Mr. Wigman was also elected Justice of the Peace in the spring of 1857, at which time he began the study of law. In the following year he was elected clerk of the town of Green Bay, and in 1859 town treasurer.

In the meantime, the subject of our sketch had assumed another responsibility of greatest importance to all parties concerned, he having been married on August 30, 1857, to Matilda Lyonnais, the union resulting in a family of nine children. In spite of his many and diversified duties and family responsibilities, Mr. Wigman, however, continued his study of law, borrowing books for that purpose from the lawyers of Green Bay, and practicing, whenever the opportunity offered itself, before the Justice Courts.

At the breaking out of the Civil War, his brother enlisted in the Sixteenth Michigan Infantry, and was killed in the battle of Fredericksburg, on the 11th day of December, 1862, the day of his promotion to a second lieutenancy. It was also during that year that Mr. Wigman's father died, as a result of which he was compelled, in the following spring, to make a visit to Holland and settle up the estate. This he did, returning in July of the same year, and bringing with him his sister, Helena M., now Mrs. L. Berendsen. He now took up his residence in Appleton, entering the law office of T. R. Hudd as a student. Finally, in February, 1864, having fulfilled the necessary requirements, he was examined in open court and admitted to the bar. Almost immediately following his admission, a partnership was formed with Mr. Hudd, under the firm name of Hudd and Wigman.

J. H. M. Wigman.

During his first year in practice, Mr. Wigman was elected District Attorney of Outagamie County, to which position he was twice reëlected. In 1868 the firm opened an office in Green Bay, to which city Mr. Wigman removed with his family in 1870, having built the commodious residence which he still occupies. This, with a selected and one of the finest private libraries in the city, numbering more than two thousand five hundred volumes, consists in making a home life that is most desirable, a heart place where the parents are ever found in the bosom of the family.

The firm of Hudd and Wigman continued in business till November, 1889, when it was dissolved, Mr. Hudd moving to Chicago. Mr. Wigman continued the business, taking into partnership his son-in-law, P. H. Martin, and it is since known as the firm of Wigman and Martin.

Mr. Wigman has always been a hard worker. As a member of the firm of Hudd and Wigman, he was always found in the office from early in the morning till late at night. He was considered among the ablest, as he is one of the most successful lawyers in the State, having very frequently been victorious when defeat seemed imminent. Among many leading cases which appear in the Wisconsin Reports, from Volume 18 to the last volume, in which he was most active, is notable that of the State of Wisconsin on the relation of Frederick Weise, et al., against the District Board of School District No. 8 of the city of Edgerton, in which he was associated as counsel with Mr. Winans, who was the Attorney of Record, and which resulted in excluding the reading of the Bible in the public schools. In 1885 he became one of the organizers of the Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, a benevolent association, starting with seven members and now composed of one hundred and seventy-five branches, with a membership of nearly nine thousand. There has, since its organization, been paid out to the widows and orphans of deceased members, up to January 1st, 1898, the sum of $785,585.90. The annual expenses of the Order, including the salaries of the officers, do not exceed $2,500.00. At the Eau Claire council, in 1888, Mr. Wigman drafted the present reserve fund laws, and surrounding it with safeguards preventing any officer from turning the funds to other purpose than that intended. This fund now amounts to $90,000, and is invested in securities bearing interest at the rate of five and six per cent. He was elected its first president, and reëlected every two years up to the present time. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Church, and, as a recognition of services rendered, was made, by the Papal authority at Rome, a Knight of St. Gregory the Great on March 1, 1887. The official notification was received by the Most Rev. Archbishop Katzer, then Bishop of Green Bay. The Breve containing the title was sealed with the Pope's Seal, the Fisher's Ring, and signed by Cardinal Ledochowski, prefect in the congregation of the Breves. The Cardinal of the Propaganda, Cardinal Simeoni, sent him an autograph letter of congratulation.

On April 15, 1893, Mr. Wigman was appointed United States District Attorney for the Eastern District of Wisconsin, which office he held for four years, the term expiring April 15, 1897.

During his term of office he tried several very important cases, among others the strike cases, and the case of the United States versus John Hoey and others, who were indicted for breaking into the Byron Post Office, the testimony pointing to their guilt being purely circumstantial. They were defended by a Chicago attorney, assisted by members of the Wisconsin Bar. In fact, a remarkable effort was made in their behalf, which resulted in a disagreement of the jury. The case, however, was followed up, and on being brought to trial the second time, the prisoners were convicted and sentenced to the State's prison at Waupun for the term of five years each. Shortly after his appointment, all of the business relating to the Fox and Wisconsin overflow cases, and the cases of the Green Bay and Mississippi Canal Company, which had heretofore been in the hands of a special assistant, were turned over to Mr. Wigman, who succeeded in bringing all the former issues to a successful termination, besides establishing the permanent rights of the United States in the navigation of the Fox River by enjoining the mill owners on that river from using the water below a certain level. Although Mr. Wigman was also personally interested in the suits brought by his predecessor, Mr. Colman, against the Government, he successfully defended the United States in said suits, both in the Circuit Court for the United States and in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and, under date of April 9, 1895, Richard Olney, the United States Attorney-General, wrote him: "It is a personal gratification to me to find the Government so well represented, and a vexed question of law so well represented. I desire to compliment you on your success in the defense of these cases, and to assure you that the anomaly and incongruity of the position of yourself in common with other District Attorneys in defending the Government in cases where your own personal interest is adverse to it, is not overlooked by this department, and that it is a source of much gratification to find entire loyalty in the performance of the public duty, notwithstanding the adverse private interest." He was also instrumental in getting Congress to abolish the fee system and fix a salary for the United States District Attorneys and United State Marshals.

Mrs. Wigman, the mother of nine children, died in 1876. Mr. Wigman married, in the same year, Miss Jane Meagher, his present wife, the fruit of this union being two sons and two daughters, of whom one son and one daughter died in infancy. Of the thirteen children born to Mr. Wigman, eight are still living, John, Mary (Mrs. P. H. Martin), Ellen (Mrs. Watermolen), Elizabeth (Mrs. Heart), Anna, Josephine, James and Margaret, the two latter being still at school, James at Pio Nono College, St. Francis, and Margaret at Green Bay. Alexander Wigman, the second eldest, a very promising young man, died at Milwaukee August 20, 1890.

George Ziegler.

DR. ZIEGLER was born in Halsheim, Unter Franken, Bavaria, Germany, on the twenty-seventh day of September, 1830. When he was about fifteen years of age, his parents, seeking for wider opportunities by which to improve their material condition, emigrated to America, bringing young Ziegler with them. Reaching the port of New York in safety on August 2, 1845, they immediately proceeded west, arriving at Milwaukee, their prearranged point of destination, on the twenty-eighth day of the same month. Imbued with the laudable desire to advance himself in the world, young George at once sought for some permanent employment with which he might begin life's struggle. In this, as people usually are when in earnest, he was successful, securing a position with Louis Pieron, who was at that time engaged in the retail grocery business and as a manufacturer of cigars and dealer in tobacco. Steady in his habits, dutiful, zealous and anxious to please, even though maintaining an humble position he was regarded as a reliable as well as a useful addition to his employer's forces, and was therefore retained by him, in one capacity or another, for three years and a half. Then George Ziegler decided to become a shoemaker and learned the trade, remaining actively engaged in the same for a period of seventeen years. This was not a business in which a fortune was to be rapidly acquired, but rather one where patience, diligence and earnest purpose and honest work were to a great extent the necessary components. These conditions were admirably adapted to a man of his forceful habits and unquestionable integrity, and so it is not surprising that where others might have faltered and despaired at the slowness and uncertainty attending the growth and gradual upbuilding of such an enterprise, he worked steadfastly and contentedly along, slowly but surely accumulating the means with which in after years he was destined to establish a business of much value and importance.

So after nearly two decades of persevering and faithful effort, he found himself in a condition warranting the attempt to develop an ambition that he had silently nurtured for some considerable time. In 1865, then, he engaged in his present business, though in a rather small way, for he was prudent and frugal, well knowing the value of money laboriously earned and therefore adverse to venturing all in this first invasion of an untried field. As it was, however, he invested $3,000 in the enterprise which was established on January 11, 1865. Under his careful and judicious management, this business prospered from its very beginning, and as a result the firm, now one of the largest of its kind in the West, furnishes constant employment to a force of two hundred and fifty people. Mr. Ziegler is the president of this establishment, being ably assisted in its management by his five sons. So much for honesty, energy and pluck.

In 1851, Mr. Ziegler was married to Miss Barbara Boll, at St. Mary's Church, in Milwaukee. The result of this union has been nine children, five boys and four girls. These, in the rotation of their birth, are, George P., Marguerite, Frank P., Theo. I., Pauline, Josephine, Charles S., Andrew I., and Anna Barbara. The eldest daughter, Marguerite, died at the age of twenty-eight years, leaving two children, Barbara and Theo. Rolfs. All of Mr. Ziegler's sons and daughters are now married, and the patriarch of the family, though still in the sixties, prides himself upon the possession of thirty-three living grand-children.

George Ziegler.

Mr. Ziegler was one of the founders of St. Joseph's Church, and four years after the establishment of the congregation became the secretary of that organization and as such remained for thirty-three consecutive years. A consistent and zealous Catholic, he has in a quiet and unostentatious way done much for the advancement of Christianity as well as in aid of the deserving poor.

As a highly respected and deserving citizen, Mr. Ziegler has also been called upon by his fellow-townsmen to fulfill numerous duties of local importance. Hence he represented the Ninth ward in the City Council for two years and was a member of the Milwaukee Board of Education for a like period. In politics he is and always has been a staunch Democrat.

Mrs. Ziegler died on May 10, 1878, and for some years past Mr. Ziegler's household has been administered by his grand-daughter Barbara Rolfs. His grandson Theodore Rolfs, also a member of his immediate family, is preparing himself for the medical profession.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART XV.

Catholic Art and Architecture.

TO those who have witnessed the growth and expansion in influence of the Catholic Church since its first introduction into that area of territory now known as the State of Wisconsin, the change, though gradual, must have indeed appeared quite marvelous. Even in later times, since the advent of more modern buildings and appurtenances, many striking and valuable innovations have been made, so that to-day one's duty to his religion, always a pleasure to the properly trained and well ordered mind, can be observed with absolute physical comfort also, a contingency unknown to the average worshiper of half a century ago. There is an inspiration alone in the outward appearance of a sacred edifice, which, once assimilated, adds fervor and relish to the Christian mind; for as one loves to dwell upon the comforts and the beauties of his home, so, too, does the layman become exalted in the knowledge of the many sensible, necessary and artistic appurtenances which now surround him at his devotions. The bell that reminds him of his higher and more sacred duties, the large commodious seats that greet his coming, the temperature regulated with a nicety to suit each changing season, the brilliant interior lighting, the beautiful windows, the soft colorings in which subdue the fiercest rays of summer's heat, the handsome statuary and decorations, rich vestments of the officiating clergy and soft, soul-stirring tones of the melodious organ and handsome paraphernalia which mark the thorough equipment of a modern house of worship, all are here, each in its respective station impressing him with the grandeur, power and beauty of the observances. The work of decorating and fitting interiors of churches has, in fact, become an art, demanding the most exquisite judgment and excellent taste. This has called forth the best efforts of numerous bright inventive minds whose ingenuity has given to us so many startlingly pleasant effects for which to-day we are devoutly thankful. Of some of these it will now be our privilege to speak at length.

Church Goods.

At best human nature is one-sided and inclined to be perverse, and yet there is within the breast of almost every man, be it dormant or otherwise, a sense of gratification at the merited and well-earned success of his fellows. Nor is this characteristic to be regarded as the product of any particular country or clime, but rather as the generous and beneficent gift of Providence to the progressive, and, therefore, appreciative, people of Christendom.

When, as successors to the old and established business of M. Schuerbrock and Co., the young and untried forces of M. H. Wiltzius and Co. engaged in the religious goods business, there were many who regarded the undertaking as almost presumptuous, and did not hesitate to warn and deprecate. Of a certainty, it was a most serious venture, and as such regarded by the company itself, who, however, engaged in business under the mental reservation, that if zeal, energy, persistence and good common sense had anything to do with the case, they would ultimately succeed.

The original concern to engage in the sale of religious goods was that of Odenbrett and Abler, who did business in a small way near the site at present occupied by Browning, King and Co. This business was then sold out to Messrs. M. Schuerbrock and Co., who removed to a store opposite the old St. Charles Hotel, where they continued to conduct a very successful business until the spring of 1889, when Mr. Schuerbrock died. M. H. Wiltzius and Co. purchased the business, entering into possession of the same in the month of April, 1889. New blood and additional vigor soon made itself known in the broadening out of the enterprise and noticeable addition of new and attractive lines. Under these conditions the business flourished, prospering, in fact, to such an extent that the quarters occupied became entirely inadequate, and M. H. Wiltzius and Co. removed in 1896 to their present location. The change lent a new impetus to the business, so that almost within a year more space was added to that originally arranged for, and to-day the company occupies the entire area, upstairs and down, at Nos. 429-431 East Water Street.

The moving genius in this concern is its head, Mr. M. H. Wiltzius, a man of great energy and business tact, who is ably and efficiently seconded in his efforts by Mr. William J. Diederich, who has been with the company since it first started. Attorney J. F. LaBoule of this city is the silent partner of the firm.

There may be some older concerns engaged in the religious goods business in this country that are larger than the Milwaukee one, but M. H. Wiltzius and Co. have the distinction of being the largest individual or independent American house in this branch of business.

Mr. Wiltzius makes not less than one annual trip to Europe's most noted art centers in France, Germany, Austria and Switzerland, where the most perfect manufactories in ecclesiastical art are to be found. Thus, in turn, each of these places is visited and its art quarters are carefully searched for new ideas; for not only is the carver's art a feature here, but also the beautiful embroidery which enriches and adorns so many of the vestments worn. Many specimens, in fact, can be seen of this class of work, where the shading is so delicately perfect as to challenge even Nature's grandest effort. In these countries, indeed, are to be found an endless variety of religious and ornamental articles, vestments and regalia worn by the priests, statuary, gold and silver ware for the adornment of altars, such articles of service as chalices, ciboriums, ostensoriums, and all other altar vessels. Many thousand dollars' worth of these goods are indeed annually imported by M. H. Wiltzius and Company into this country.

A very noticeable feature, and, in fact, one of the principal articles handled by the Wiltzius Company, is the imported hand-carved woodenware specialties, which work is individual to the district of Oberammergau, a place made famous from the fact that there, once in every decade, is produced with natural surroundings and in actual life that greatest of the world's great tragedies, the "Passion of Christ."

In a literary way M. H. Wiltzius and Co. have also developed an exceptionally satisfactory clientage; hence to-day we find them carrying a large and comprehensive line of works including those of the most noted Catholic writers whose subjects pertain to the classical, philosophical, liturgical and meditative; they have also an admirable assortment of prayer and sermon books, and make a specialty of school books for public as well as parochial schools. In addition to these is also to be found a complete line of general Catholic literature.

There is possibly no business extant in which a greater diversity of goods is required than in this line, especially so at certain seasons, when some particular line of novelties comes into great demand. For such occasions, however, the firm of M. H. Wiltzius and Co. are always well and fully prepared, and it is a rare occasion, indeed, when this enterprising concern is not the first to introduce an innovation in art or literature and place it upon the market. The store at the present time is replete with a handsome and almost exhaustless line of vestments in all church colors, many being both beautiful and costly. But what appeals most strongly to the good sense of the visitor is the fact that equal care has been taken in providing for the wants of those of most limited means. So, too, as regards the gold and silver vessels and ornaments, which range in value from $700 to $3,000.00. All of the articles referred to, as well as numberless others, are to be found on the first floor, which has been given over entirely to show-room purposes, excepting a space in the rear of the building, where the general offices are found. The basement is used for storing a large amount of duplicate goods, some of which are kept packed and ready for immediate shipment. On the second floor is the shipping room and store room for books, pictures, silk ornaments and regalia. The third floor is used for storage purposes, while a part of it is occupied by a force of employees who are kept busy changing, arranging and setting up of "Hoffmann's Catholic Directory," of which M. H. Wiltzius and Co. are now sole proprietors.

Progressive, energetic, determined to succeed, and with the natural ability to do so, there is no reason whatever why M. H. Wiltzius and Company should not look forward to a long period of usefulness and prosperity.

Church and School Supplies.

In all probability there is no individual business associated with the building, furnishing or supplying of churches and schools that requires such close and accurate attention and so diversified a stock as the one which carries a full line of church and school supplies. In a well conducted establishment of this character is to be found the thousand and one articles comprising a proper selection of what have been designated as "supplies" from the most important educational work or appurtenance to the daintiest bijou of religious art. In the United States, perhaps more than any other country, the demand is most diverse, owing, undoubtedly, to the fact that here are gathered people from every civilized quarter of the globe; people whose peculiar training, as well as tastes, are as widely different as the nationalities they represent. To each alike, however, the supply man is required to cater with equal avidity, nay more, he must know understandingly of each article required; this, would he be successful, is imperatively necessary. The man, in fact, who undertakes the handling of church and school supplies must be one of wide experience, with knowledge that is practically unlimited and whose word is beyond question. Such a one will succeed.

Mr. John P. Daleiden, of Chicago, Illinois, first engaged in the supply business in a small way. He began, in fact, by making extended journeys through the country, passing along from one Catholic school to another, stopping at each one long enough to introduce the numerous school books and religious works placed by well-known publishing houses at his disposal. Always courteous and gentlemanly in his dealings, the little business began to thrive and grew apace until it was not long before he had secured the good will and patronage of nearly every one of the school Sisters and Catholic teachers in the English, German, Polish and Bohemian congregations in Chicago. At this time (1879) Mr. Daleiden had established himself in snug little quarters at 347 East North avenue, where, with the assistance of his good wife, he was enabled to conduct a small retail Catholic book store while still attending to business on the road. Thus everything went well with the undertaking, and in 1881 he assumed the agency of Kroue Brothers, of New York, the extensive dealers in writing and drawing books. And so matters progressed favorably for this enterprising concern so that in 1884, for absolute want of room, Mr. Daleiden was compelled to remove to his present commodious quarters at 299-301 East North avenue. The sterling methods adopted by Mr. Daleiden from the very first in his dealings with the public have gained for him the lasting approbation and good will of all; no better evidence of this, perhaps, can be given than in the fact that many of the Sisters (former customers), although transferred to other and far distant fields of usefulness, still send their orders to him to be filled, so great is their confidence in the man.

John P. Daleiden.

Mr. Daleiden does a quite extensive business in artificial flowers of every description, church fixtures, ornaments, books, banners, badges, regalia, imported as well as self made. The demand, in fact, for most of these goods is rapidly increasing, owing, undoubtedly, to the fact that the most of them are made under the personal direction of his family, which fact insures both excellence in construction and moderation in price.

In addition to his large home trade, Mr. Daleiden also does an extensive business throughout Wisconsin, and is indeed well and favorably known to a majority of the Catholic clergy in the State. A few years ago he published what is believed to be the most thoroughly illustrated work on Holy Hill yet given to the public. Mr. Daleiden now issues a quite pretentious catalogue of three hundred and twenty pages, in which, besides much other needed information, are to be found a full line of handsome illustrations, representing all lines pertaining to the business and handled by him.

Architects and Superintendents.

Most necessary indeed is the architect and superintendent to the proper erecting and construction of a building. To him, if he is as he should be, the matter of form and figure is as an open book. Not only is he aware of what is artistically correct, but what is of still greater importance, he knows to a nicety just how to avoid all of those incongruities and applications of unscientific principles, which not only mar the beauty of the structure, but ofttimes make it absolutely unsafe. In no point is this particular statement more applicable than in considering the erection of a church. The firm of H. Messmer and Son, of Milwaukee, have long been identified with the ecclesiastical architecture of Wisconsin. Many of the most symmetrical and imposing structures now to be found within the limit of the state were designed by them. The work, in fact, is highly appreciated, and has become a vogue in many Catholic parishes. The senior member of this firm, Mr. H. Messmer, was born in Rheineck, Canton St. Gallen, Switzerland, on August 25, 1839. After acquiring the ordinary education in common with the youth of his day, he became a student in the Herzogliche Braunschweig Bauschule, from which institution he graduated in 1860; this was supplemented by a three years' course in the Polytechnic Institute at Zurich. Four years later, that is, in 1867, he came to the United States, associating himself with Mr. S. S. Shipman, at Madison, Wis., with whom he continued in business for four years. He then removed to Milwaukee, and entered into business relations with C. Schmidtner, this arrangement continuing for three years. In 1873 he started in business alone, opening an office in the Pabst Theater Building, where he has been located ever since. In 1886 he entered into partnership with his son Robert, and since that time the firm name has been as at present, H. Messmer and Son.

Mr. Robert Messmer, junior member of this firm, received his education and experience as an architect under the immediate direction and supervision of his father. Among the many church structures designed and built under the direction of this firm are those at Schleisingerville, St. Anna, St. Kilian, Random Lake, Two Rivers, Dotyville, Port Washington, East Bristol, Richland Center, Neosho, Newburg, Johnsburg, St. Hedwig's, St. Vincent de Paul's, SS. Peter and Paul's, St. Josaphat's, and St. Casimir's at Milwaukee, and St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum, Green Bay.

Church Architecture.

The firm of E. Brielmaier and Sons, Milwaukee, make a specialty of designing churches, schools and convents, besides manufacturing all kinds of church furniture, altars, pulpits and many other necessary features. They are also prepared to procure high-grade works of religious subjects in oils for decorative purposes.

The senior member of the firm who first established the business, and to whom is due a large amount of credit for its present prosperous condition, Mr. E. Brielmaier, is a native of Germany, born in 1841. In 1850 he came to America, locating at Cincinnati, Ohio, in which city he learned his profession of architect. He removed to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1873, and since then has devoted a considerable portion of his time to designing and superintending the construction of churches, schools and convents. Several handsome structures have already been placed to his credit in Ohio and throughout the Northwestern States, besides a large number of schools, convents, and public and private buildings. Since 1895 the firm has consisted of himself and two sons, Bernard and Joseph, who have proved of valuable assistance in caring for this business of healthful growth and almost unlimited possibilities

St. Josaphat's Church, E. Brielmaier, Arch. and Supt.

A slight idea of the business accomplished by this enterprising firm may perhaps be gained by a glance at the following list, which comprises but a few of the buildings lately completed or still in course of construction, from designs drawn and under the personal direction of them: St. Josaphat's Catholic Church, Milwaukee, Wis.; St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum, St. Francis, Wis.; St. Francis Assissi Convent, St. Francis, Wis.; St. John's Deaf and Dumb Institute, St. Francis, Wis.; St. Wendel's Catholic Church, St. Wendel, Wis.; St. Catharine's Academy, Racine, Wis.; St. Ambrosius Convent, St. Nazianz, Wis.; St. Ignatius Catholic Church, Houghton, Mich.; St. Francis Xavier's Cathedral (Towers), Green Bay, Wis.; main entrance of the Calvary Cemetery, Milwaukee Wis., besides several smaller churches throughout the state.

Mr. Brielmaier is the architect and superintendent of the new St. Josaphat's Church in Milwaukee (built from material taken from the old Chicago Custom House and Court House), which, when completed, will be one of the largest and most striking edifices in the United States, in addition to the distinction of having the sixth largest dome in the world.

Altars, Pulpits and Statuary.

The art institution conducted by the E. Hackner Art Institution, of La Crosse, Wisconsin, is making a specialty of designing and manufacturing high-grade church furniture, statuary and fine wood carvings, and has gained a national reputation on account of the superior quality of work accomplished for an almost innumerable number of the most important church edifices throughout the country. Everything undertaken by this concern is finished in a first-class and workmanlike manner, particular attention being paid to the quality and condition of the material used, as well as the character of design employed. It has, in fact, been the desire of the Hackner Institution to bring this particular department of Christian art to the highest possible stage of perfection. In addition to this line of work, the Institution has also entered into competition with other well-known manufacturers of pulpits, the work offered by them meeting with the most gratifying success, and receiving at no less than four public exhibitions of national importance awards and diplomas as a recognition of their exceeding merit. At the wood carving exhibit, also, made at Atlanta, Georgia, in 1894, this Institute succeeded in obtaining the diploma of honor and gold medal offered for the most perfect exhibit in that department.

Design by the E. Hackner Art Institution.

The E. Hackner Art Institution was established by Mr. E. Hackner a number of years ago. The senior member of the concern entered upon this business as soon as he had completed a common school and collegiate course in his native country, studying under the guidance and direction of many of the most noted masters of the craft in different European cities, and especially in the great art center of Munich, Bavaria, where he also took a course in the famous art school. Mr. Hackner removed to the United States in the fall of 1880, engaging in the business of altar building and church furnishing at La Crosse, Wisconsin, in 1881. Since then, by careful and persistent effort on his part, the business has continued to grow, until, at the present time, the concern employs a force of thirty men, most of whom are artists, designers and mechanics of exceptional skill. In spite of this fact, however, the work turned out by the Institution is exceedingly reasonable in price, a feature which has aided largely in extending the business of the Instituion.

Church Bells.

As to when, where or by whom the first bell was made, no accurate or reliable data is forthcoming, although we have it on Biblical authority that Aaron and his sons in the priesthood had bells on the skirts of their robes.

As to large bells, such as church bells, it is claimed by many that Bishop Paulinus, of Campania in Nola, first used them in the year 400, A. D., but nothing is said of them in his own detailed account of the churches in his diocese or under his charge.

There are others who say that Pope Sabinianus first used them about 600, A. D., and yet it is known that bells were used in 550, A. D., in church towers. It is an utter impossibility to tell, at the present time, who first invented or made a bell, although the origin of the name itself is by many accredited to Bishop Paulinus.

The largest bell in the world is called "Czar Kolokol," and is commonly known as the "Great Bell of Moscow." This bell measures about twenty-two feet in diameter, and from the bottom rim, or edge, to the top of the cross above the bell it is twenty-one feet. The bell is estimated to weigh 440,000 pounds. The bell is covered on the outside with magnificent raised figures, lettering, etc.

There are a great many bells scattered throughout China and Europe that can properly be called immense or monsters in size. Russia has quite a number of large bells, ranging from 30,000 up to as much as 70,000 pounds. The fact is that Russia is so immense in area and population that very little is really known of it. For example: It would seem that a city as large as Milwaukee or Cincinnati could not be overlooked by map makers, yet it is a fact that the city of Nijni-Novgorod, situated on the Volga River, almost in the center of European Russia, is almost entirely overlooked or little known of in this country, and yet it is a city fully as large as Cincinnati, having about 74,000 inhabitants. It has a bell in its cathedral weighing upwards of 100,000 pounds. The authority for this statement is Mr. Kennan, who traveled extensively through Russia some years ago.

A truly correct bell is moulded according to several Empirical rules and proportions and curves. A bell is decided and designed first on the diameter. All of the other shapes, lines, etc., are in proportion to that diameter. If, for instance, the bell is forty-eight inches in diameter, then it will be found that, if the bell is correctly made, that it will measure thirty-six inches from the mouth to the top crown outside. It will also be found that the thickness where the clapper strikes will be three and three-fourths inches thick, and that at the base of the crown inside it will be twenty-four inches diameter. Any bell that varies from that seriously is not a truly correctly shaped bell. Of course, there are rules for making these curves and producing the same result, and no founder is willing to give away to the public the rules upon which or by which he works or designs a bell. The merit of the bell itself tells the story, and to an experienced eye the bell is a real alphabet, as easily read by a thoroughly practical and experienced bell founder as a common reader is to a scholar.

The Buckeye Bell Foundry of Cincinnati, Ohio, of which the E. W. Vanduzen Company are proprietors, was founded in 1837, right where it is located to-day, by Mr. George W. Coffin, and was called at once the "Buckeye Bell Foundry." That name has never been changed. George W. Coffin some years later took into partnership Mr. G. R. Dudley, the firm name then being George W. Coffin & Co., and so it remained until March, 1865.

Mr. E. W. Vanduzen was employed in the foundry since April, 1838, and Mr. C. T. Tift had been employed since 1861 as bookkeeper in the place, and by frugality and carefulness and economical disposition, they were enabled to form a co-partnership in 1865 and purchase the George W. Coffin Co.'s interest in the business, the firm then being known as "Vanduzen and Tift," and it so remained until the death of Mr. Tift in February, 1890, when Mr. E. W. Vanduzen bought out Mr. Tift's interest in the concern, and he allotted a number of shares to several of his grown children who were engaged in the business with him, formed a corporation and incorporated under the laws of Ohio as "The Vanduzen and Tift Co." In May, 1894, the corporation voted to change the name to "The E. W. Vanduzen Co." During all these years, however, the Company has been known as the "Buckeye Bell Foundry," and from the foundry have gone out a great many of the finest bells that are ringing to-day in this country and elsewhere.

Among its productions are bells that are ringing in the land of the Turk in Thracia, Turkey. Another is ringing within twelve miles of Rome, Italy, and that bell weighs nearly a ton. Besides these, there are bells from this concern ringing in the heart of India and in Japan and Egypt, and several are down in South America. One weighing nearly a ton, complete, is ringing from the Trinity Episcopal Church at Monrovia in Liberia, the church in which nearly all the high state officers worship. There are bells of this make, also, in Australia and Hawaii.

The city of Milwaukee and nearby vicinity have in their towers at least 40,000 to 50,000 pounds of these bells. Three bells weighing, complete, nearly 6,000 pounds are in Trinity German Evangelical Church, Milwaukee, Wisconsin. They are in the key of E flat; St. Vincent De Paul Church, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, has three of these bells, weighing, complete, nearly 13,000 pounds, and are in the key of B flat; St. Hyacinth (new) Church, Milwaukee, has three weighing, complete, about 6,200 lbs, key of E flat; Marathon County Court House, Wausau, Wisconsin, has two bells weighing 1,800 pounds in the key of A flat; the Catholic church at Hilbert, Wisconsin, has two bells weighing, complete, about 3,000 pounds, in the key of F sharp; Immaculate Conception Church, New Richmond, Wisconsin, has four bells weighing, complete, 5,300 pounds in the key of E; St. Gabriel's Church, Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, has three bells weighing, complete, 3,000 pounds, in the key of G; St. Mary's Catholic Church has three bells weighing, complete, about 6,200 pounds, in the key of D; the German Catholic Church at Appleton, Wisconsin, has four bells weighing altogether about 3,200 pounds, in the key of G; St. Mary's Church at Port Washington, Wisconsin, has three bells weighing altogether nearly 7,000 pounds and are in the key of D; St. Joseph's Cathedral, La Crosse, Wisconsin, has three bells weighing altogether nearly 10,000 pounds, in the key of C; St. Charles Borromeo Church, Charlesburg, Wisconsin, has three bells weighing altogether nearly 6,400 pounds in the key of D; SS. Peter and Paul Church, Independence, Wisconsin, has three bells weighing altogether 3,300 pounds, in the key of F sharp.

The Company has also furnished the Cathedral at Sacramento, California, with four bells weighing altogether 12,000 pounds, which are in the key of C, and are the gift of Bishop Manogue. A pathetic incident in connection with this gift is the fact that between the time they were ordered and their first ringing, the Bishop died unexpectedly, and the bells were tolled for the first time at his funeral.

There are five magnificent bells of this manufacture in St. Wenceslaus Church, Cleveland, Ohio, the largest weighing over 7,000 pounds. These, together, with fixtures complete weigh 16,000 pounds. St. Willibrord's Church of Green Bay, Wisconsin, has a 4,000 pound bell; the Rev. H. Kampschroer of Watertown, Wisconsin, has just received three bells weighing altogether nearly 7,000 pounds; St. Ann's Church, St. Anna, Wisconsin, has four bells weighing 7,000 pounds, and there are many others of similar size in the State.

Outside of Wisconsin the Buckeye Bell Foundry has within the past two years furnished four bells for St. Mary's Church, Buffalo, New York, three bells for St. Wendelin's Church, near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, four bells for St. Francis Church, Traverse City, Michigan, three bells for St. Wendelin's Church, Luxemburg, Minnesota, and, most prominent of all, the greatest bell in America for St. Francis de Sales Church, Cincinnati, its weight with hangings, complete, being 40,000 pounds.

Centennial Bell Foundry.

Already we have had cause to make extended mention in the preceding pages of church bells, but the story would not be complete were we to fail in referring to the Centennial Bell Foundry, of which the well-known firm of Gardiner Campbell and Sons of Milwaukee are proprietors. This institution was founded in the year 1876 by the late Gardiner Campbell and his two sons, George G., who died quite recently, and Henry E., who now constitutes the sole remaining member of the original firm. Beginning in a very small way, the Centennial Bell Foundry has outgrown the most sanguine expectations of its inceptors, prospering and expanding until acquiring its present extensive dimensions and importance; indeed, bells of this make are not only shipped to every part of the United States, but also to Canada, Mexico and other foreign ports. The company's reputation for first-class work is such that the placing of one order is sufficient guarantee for further demands made upon them whenever necessity requires. An evidence of the perfection of the system employed by this company is to be noticed in the fact that the large chime of five bells made by them for St. John's University, Collegeville, Minnesota, were cast in the correct tone on the first attempt, being neither turned nor tuned, a feat, the company assures us, never before accomplished. The very perfect results also obtained by them in the casting of the monster bell for Milwaukee's new City Hall has given them a world-wide reputation. At the present time they are engaged in making a chime of five bells for St. Joseph's Catholic Church at Appleton. Among the chimes furnished by the Centennial Bell Foundry in the State of Wisconsin are those now in use in St. Hyacinth's Polish Church, Milwaukee (3); St. Boniface Church, Milwaukee (2); Fussville, Wisconsin (2); Eau Galle, Wisconsin (3); Mayville, Wisconsin (3); Roxbury, Wisconsin (3). Other bells manufactured by this concern and in present use are located throughout the State as follows: St. Rose's Church, Milwaukee; Gesu Church, Milwaukee; Elkhart Lake, Richland Center, Mt. Horeb, Brillion, Sullivan, Dane, Berlin, Racine, Middleton, Ridgeway, Duplainville, South Milwaukee, Mequon, Medford, City of Green Bay, Stevens Point, Colby, Juneau, Marinette, Edson, Wausau, Cazenovia, Reedsville, St. Peter's Church, Milwaukee; Neenah, Pt. Washington, West DePere, Notre Dame Convent, Milwaukee, Mt. St. Phillips, Kenosha, Lyons, Glenwood, Whitewater, Little Chute and others.

Church and Tower Clocks.

There is, perhaps, nothing that adds more to the dignity and character of a church tower than its clock, some of which have a very unique and attractive appearance. A mechanism particularly adapted to this class of work was invented some years ago by Mr. M. Schwalbach, of Milwaukee, and so successful has it proved that the result has been the permanent establishment of an extensive and satisfactory business by him, not only in Wisconsin, but, in fact, throughout many other portions of the country. From all parts of the United States the inventor has received the highest commendation, and to-day it is probably the fact that a majority of the clocks to be found in the towers of Catholic edifices in Wisconsin are of his make. The construction of this clock is so simple that any one can easily understand its working, take care of it, and keep it in good order.

Church Organs.

The pipe organ is a paramount feature of interest in all thoroughly equipped churches of the present day. For a fact it has come to be regarded as absolutely essential, adding, by the grandeur and beauty of its effect, to the impressiveness of the service as well as to the pleasure and comfort of the worshiper. To give absolute satisfaction, however, it is necessary that the instrument be a perfect one and entirely free from those numerous defects which too often are to be found in ones of irresponsible and imperfect manufacture. In the purchase of an instrument, then, it behooves those upon whom the duty has devolved to see that they have dealers and makers only of irreproachable record, whose ability to do as well as to make what is right has become evident in the work already accomplished by them. To do otherwise, indeed, were the height of imprudence, if not an unnecessary exhibition of willful waste. One in every way such as we would advise the prospective purchaser to cultivate is that well known and progressive maker of pipe organs, Mr. William Schuelke of Milwaukee, who has been continuously engaged in the business since 1874, and is the patentee and inventor of some of the most remarkable improvements which have been made to pipe organs during the past quarter of a century. One of the latest inventions upon which he has secured a patent has resulted in the erection of an almost perfect instrument. It is a pneumatic organ in which all of the complicated mechanism of the old style action organ is done away with, and by a simple contrivance the most responsive instrument which has ever been built has been secured. Mr. Schuelke's invention, indeed, may be regarded as revolutionizing organ building, simplifying, as it does, the business to a very marked degree. Another notable invention of his is one which by the mere pulling of a stop the key of the music may be raised or lowered to suit the requirements of the performer. Mr. Schuelke is the builder of some of the largest organs in the Northwest, among the number being those now in use in St. Mary's, St. Stanislaus', St. Antonius', St. Francis' (Capuchin Fathers), Holy Trinity and others.

Heating Buildings by Hot Water.

The heating of buildings by hot water is not of recent origin, but it is only within a few years that the system has been extensively used and apparatus devised to give full effects to its advantages. The theory of hot water heating is very simple. Suppose a circuit of piping to extend from the basement of a building up through the different floors and back again to the basement. In the basement connect a heater with the piping in such a way that it shall warm the water in that part of the circuit. When water is heated its particles expand, and as they increase in size without gaining in weight, they become relatively lighter than the more solid particles of cold water. The heavier particles of cold water settle down and push the warm water to the highest part of the system. Circulation is thus established, and as the water which has made the ascent and is returning to the heater will always be cooler than that which has just passed the heater, the circulation will continue until the fire is out and the water all cooled to a uniform temperature. If radiators are connected with the piping at various points and the hot water made to pass through them, the heat from the water is given off through the radiators to the rooms. The water passes on down to the heater, where it is again warmed, and rises, thus furnishing the radiators with a constant flow of hot water.

The advantages of this system are many, and it is the most satisfactory method yet devised for heating residences, hospitals, schools, etc. A very important consideration is the healthfulness of the system. It is well known that the cooler the heating surfaces by which air is warmed, the more completely does the air retain its natural purity, vitality and agreeable quality. Steam radiators burn the air more than hot water radiators because they get hotter. Water boils and makes steam at a temperature of 212 degrees, while in hot water apparatus the temperature does not often exceed 180 degrees. Larger radiating surfaces are required in hot water heating, but none of the air in the rooms is super-heated. There is none of the dust which often comes from hot air registers, and none of the gas which often escapes from a furnace and comes up into the rooms above.

Hot water apparatus makes it possible to maintain a much more uniform temperature than is possible with a steam plant. Where steam is used there must be either steam heat, which is often excessive, or no heat at all. In moderate weather, when only a little heat is required, this is very annoying, because the rooms will be either too hot or too cold, and the alternation from one to the other, as well as the draughts caused by hot steam pipes and open windows, are productive of colds and general discomfort. With a properly constructed hot water plant, all this is done away with. If only a little heat is required, just that little can be had, because any amount of fire in the heater gives just the corresponding amount of heat from the radiators, and a fire that would not make steam at all will often furnish all the heat that is wanted. This point is also important as affecting fuel consumption. In a steam plant fire may be maintained continuously, but if it is not sufficient to get up steam, all the fuel burned is wasted, whereas in a hot water plant every pound of fuel burned sends heat to the radiators. Even a small wood fire, which would have no effect whatever in a steam apparatus, will raise the temperature of the water to eighty or a hundred degrees, and make the house comfortable for many hours in the chilly days of fall and spring. When the fire gets low in a steam plant heat fails quickly, whereas, in a hot water apparatus, the water cools gradually and will circulate for a long time after the fire is completely out. For this reason, the hot water heater requires less care than any other, and attention morning and night is usually all that is necessary.

One of the leading companies engaged in the manufacture of hot water apparatus is the United States Heating Company, of Detroit, Michigan. This company was organized in 1892 to manufacture the Capitol hot water heater. There were at that time two leading types of house heating boilers made. In one type proper principles of construction, as now recognized, were generally followed, but the material—wrought iron or steel—was lacking in durability for this purpose. In the other type—cast iron—the proper material for durability was used, but imperfect foundry methods seemed to render it necessary to depart from the superior lines of construction shown in the wrought iron boilers. The Capitol was designed with a view to combining the superior features of both the old types, and improved foundry methods were devised which overcame the difficulty in casting iron in the proper forms. The first year a few heaters were made, and dealers in different parts of the country were induced to try the new construction. After a winter's trial they were unanimous in declaring that the Capitol was superior in point of efficiency, economy and durability to any other house heater then made. The following year the company was unable to fill the orders received. Larger quarters were obtained, and the working force increased and the business of the company continued to grow even during the late hard times, until, in 1895, they were compelled to build a new plant adequate for the requirements of the business. This factory is fitted up with all modern machinery and appliances for the manufacture of heaters, and is said to have the most complete equipment in the country for this work. Branch offices of the company are maintained in Chicago and New York, and a large traveling force of experienced heating engineers is always in the field.

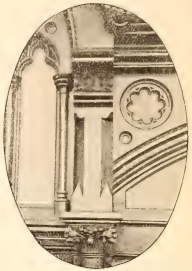
Besides the Capitol, the company now manufactures the Capitol-Mascot, a heater having the same general principles of construction as the Capitol, but somewhat lower in price. In all varieties of both heaters, the company's catalogue shows more than eighty different constructions and sizes The output is very large, and the heaters go all over the world. Many are used in Great Britain and on the Continent of Europe, and even in Japanese schools the Capitol heater is known and appreciated. It is used in every State in the Union, and in Wisconsin, besides a vast number of private residences, it is successfully heating many larger buildings. Among the Catholic institutions might be mentioned the Convent of St. Francis, St. Francis, Wisconsin; Orphans' Asylum, St. Francis, Wisconsin; St. Agnes' Hospital, Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, and St. Mary's Hospital, Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

Church Seating and Woodwork Decorations.

Detail of Ornament for Head of Pew End.

In connection with the growth of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin, it is but fitting to call attention to the Manitowoc Seating Company, Manitowoc, Wisconsin, builders of altars, pulpits, confessionals and pews. This concern is unquestionably the largest and has undoubtedly the best equipped factory for the manufacture of this special line of work in the United States, and is far ahead of any similar institution in the State; in fact, there is no other institution in Wisconsin where you can go for all the wood furnishings of the church, knowing that each part of the work will be properly executed, and the entire order correspond in all its parts.



Detail of Confessional—Early English Gothic—Church of St. Francis Xavier's, St. Louis.

This factory was established some ten or eleven years ago, and at that time was organized by men who had had a long experience in building this particular line of goods; and while it is easy to imagine that with an experienced force of men turning out a high grade of church furniture this factory would witness a phenomenal growth, the expectation of the most sanguine has been more than realized. From a factory employing some twenty or twenty-five hands, this plant has grown to an establishment of the largest magnitude, employing many hundred workmen, all of them being skilled artisans and of long experience, and while it would seem that the splendid facilities for the manufacture of these goods, embracing large buildings, new and improved machinery and modern methods of manufacture, together with immense lumber yards stocked with the finest raw materials, would enable this concern to meet easily all demands made on them for this particular line of goods, it is a fact worth mentioning that their capacity is at all times taxed to the utmost, so popular are their goods. To the minor details of the work, as well as in the greater, the same thought and care is given. The selection of the lumber is carefully looked to by experienced men, so as to match pieces as accurately as possible, both in color and grain. The machine work is particularly well done, great care being taken to see that all machine cuts are sharp and clear. In the cabinet shop the work is thoroughly gone over by hand, and great care is exercised to see that all joints are perfect.

Gothic Arm Ornamentation, Renaissance Effect.

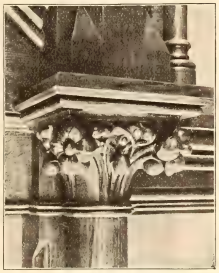
The carvings executed by this company are of particular merit, and we show a few cuts made direct from photographs of some of the work. It will be noticed that these carvings, while extremely bold and pronounced, are particularly artistic and dignified, and to this branch of the work, as much as to any other, is due the enviable reputation enjoyed by this factory for the turning out of high grade, artistic and churchly church furniture. Pastors may safely entrust this company the execution of any design, resting assured that when the finished product is seen, it will be thoroughly artistic in every particular, architecturally correct in the most minute detail, expressive and churchly in the fullest sense of the term.



Detail of capital—Early English Gothic.

The Manitowoc Seating Company, while being of purely Wisconsin origin and thoroughly a home concern, is well and favorably known all over the United States, their product going from Portland, Oregon, to Portland, Maine, and from Lake Superior to the Gulf of Mexico. Not only do they enjoy this extensive home trade, but, in addition, are doing considerable business in foreign countries, a number of orders each year being manufactured for export trade.

One of the very recent contracts secured by this company outside of this State, the securing of which is in itself a great recommendation for this company, is that for the furnishing of the church of St. Francis Xavier, St. Louis, Missouri, with a very large bill of goods, and when it is understood that this contract includes the pewing, cabinets, vestment cases, and twelve confessionals, all in early English Gothic style of architecture, it will be readily seen that this is no small endorsement of the high grade of work this company turns out. We are able to show, in the cuts accompanying this description, some of the details of the carving and work on confessionals.

In our own State they have furnished some of the very finest churches; in Milwaukee alone the Gesu Church, St. Patrick's and St. Michael's Churches offer evidence of their skill. St. John's Evangelical Church in Oshkosh, and St. Peter's Church in Neenah, together with other churches throughout the State too numerous to mention, have all been furnished with goods manufactured by this company.

Cresting and Finial.

While issuing catalogues showing designs of their own on which they are always pleased to send out estimates, this company makes a specialty of getting out designs conforming exactly to the idea of those having the purchase of furniture in charge, or carrying out in general the architectural effect of the church, although they are always ready to estimate on special designs furnished by architects and builders.

It is little to be wondered at, when account is taken of the high grade of work that the Manitowoc Seating Company turns out, that they seat on an average every year over four hundred churches, not to mention the altars, pulpits and confessionals which are frequently furnished separate, and more often furnished in connection with the seats.

While the facilities which the Manitowoc Seating Company have for turning out this work are such as to enable them to easily execute any order entrusted to them, no matter of what magnitude or how elaborate, yet it should be remembered that these same facilities enable them to compete successfully for the smallest and most modern outfit, and no order is too small to demand and receive their careful and conscientious attention.

The Manitowoc Seating Company also manufacture a complete line of assembly chairs made with or without folding kneelers. They also manufacture the Oxford Adjustable and Oxford Automatic school desk, which have been endorsed by all of the large and more prominent cities in the State and which are in use in many of our own schools.

Art Glass.

A most important feature in the furnishing of a church is the art glass, without which no sacred edifice of modern times is considered as really complete. This class of work, in fact, lends tone and character to a building, in addition to affording a pleasing, restful condition of mind by its vaguely softening effects. An institution paying particular attention to this line of work is the Northwestern Art Glass Works of Oshkosh, Wis., of which Mr. R. F. Strauss is proprietor. This concern was established on May 1, 1896, since which time it has furnished the windows for ten churches. Special designs for memorial windows are also drawn free of charge, all necessary change in same being made so as to carry out in detail the wishes of the purchaser.

Among the many patrons of the Northwestern Art Glass Works are: The Morgan Co's. sash, door and blind factories; R. McMillen and Co., and the Rev. Father Wibbert, all of Oshkosh. In addition to the work already mentioned, the Art Glass Works have completed contracts at Loyal and Superior, Wis.

Art Decoration.

A special feature in the interior furnishing of a church of modern times is the artistic decorations such as those designed and carried out by A. Liebig and Co., of Milwaukee. These people make church decoration a specialty, and have succeeded in reducing that class of work to such a science that it may well nigh be regarded as absolute perfection. The interior decoration of churches is carried out in strictly ecclesiastical style and to suit the form and character of the building, hence, may be seen equally to advantage in Byzantine, Romanesque, Gothic, or church Renaissance.

Figurative decoration an exclusive feature in this class of work is executed by special artists, men of unquestionable skill and ability who have graduated from the best and most celebrated art schools of Europe. These artists in addition to their technical skill have made sacred history their chief study, and hence are enabled to go about such work in an intelligent and appreciative manner unknown and unsuspected by those to whom such subjects are meaningless as utterances in an unknown tongue.

Besides the common water and oil colors, the usual method of decoration, the Liebig Company is now introducing a new process in regard to the use of color material known as the permanent tempera color, which as an economical and enduring force, should become both popular and interesting with the public. This color is comparatively new in America, but in Europe has been universally adopted in public buildings, churches and other monumental buildings. Indeed, owing to its entirly different composition it is not affected by dampness, growing firmer the longer it stands. In this respect it is regarded as even preferable to oil color. Only the best and fast colors are used in this composition although there is little if any difference in price as compared with that usually charged for water color work. Further information regarding this really remarkable material will be cheerfully furnished by the company, who are anxious that its desirability should become widely and generally known. The offices and studies of A. Liebig and Co. are in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

European Statuary Company.

To the southern portion of the city of Milwaukee is due the credit of maintaining the European Statuary Company, an institution that is widely known among the Catholic clergy and laity of Design by the European Statuary Co.

the state of Wisconsin. The company devotes its entire time and interest to the manufacture of composition religious statues, stations of the Way of the Cross and ornamental stucco work. In this they are very thorough as well as artistic, as a result of which they have acquired an extensive patronage among the clergy of Wisconsin, to many of whom they refer in greatest confidence as knowing the efficiency and perfection of their work. Among such who heartily endorse this concern are men of no less prominence than the Rt. Rev. James Schwebach, D. D., Bishop of La Crosse, and the Rev. H. Willmes of Milwaukee. The business of the European Statuary Company was first established in the year 1893, since which time it has furnished a large number of churches with statuary and stations. Prominent among such institutions thus supplied may be mentioned the church of St. Matthew at Neosho, which was furnished with seven altar statues and fourteen stations, St. Mary's church at Belgium, and others. The European Statuary Company also disposes of many of its goods direct to M. H. Wiltzius and Co., of Milwaukee.

Altar Wines.

A pure, perfect and altogether satisfying stock of altar wines is an especial feature maintained by the August Greulich Company of Milwaukee, a concern universally and favorably known throughout the State of Wisconsin. The August Greulich Company is one of the oldest institutions of its kind in the West, having been established as a general store in 1842 under the firm name of Greulich and Haertel. Some eighteen years subsequent to that time, August Greulich and Julius Kersting purchased a large stock of foreign and domestic wines and liquors owned by Mr. Finkler, and continued the business under the firm name of August Greulich and Co. At a later date, and after the decease of Mr. Kersting, Andrew F., son of the senior partner, secured an interest in the business, the firm name becoming that of August Greulich and Son. In this manner affairs continued until 1891, when Mr. John Sieben secured an interest in the business, which was then incorporated under its present name of The August Greulich Co. The present officers of the concern are: John Sieben, president; Mrs. C. Kersting, vice-president, and Andrew F. Greulich, secretary and treasurer.

The August Greulich Company is known to carry one of the largest and best stocks of native wines and liquors in the Northwest, the capacity of their cellars being not less than one hundred and fifty thousand gallons. Their experience of many years has been of unusual benefit to them in obtaining a thorough knowledge of the most desirable districts in which to look for their wines. By this means they have become acquainted with the most popular and reliable vineyards, as a result of which their patrons have always been well and satisfactorily served. The Company makes it an object to purchase only good, sound, young wines, which are matured in their cellars, so that at the present time a visit there will afford a view of wines of many different varieties, which, in age, vary from one to eighteen years.

Education and School Literature.

Pio Nono College.

Pio Nono College is situated at St. Francis, Wisconsin, about half a mile south of the city limits of Milwaukee. The cars of the Milwaukee Street Railway Company pass near the college. The school building is roomy and tasteful in its proportions. Its corridors, study-halls and class-rooms are spacious, well ventilated and comfortable. The grounds are carefully kept and adorned. In every respect this is a delightful place for study and recreation.

Pio Nono College is both a boarding school and a day school. Its course of study comprises all the branches of a thorough and practical education founded on the principles and practices of religion. Only Catholic students are admitted. The terms are very reasonable and afford even those of limited means an opportunity of obtaining an education. German and Latin are taught without extra charge. A preparatory class has been established for those whose attainments are not sufficient to allow them to enter the regular first year's course.

Pio Nono College is justly famous for its excellent school of music, under the direction of Chevalier John Singenberger, president of the American Caecilian Society.

On application to the president of Pio Nono College, catalogues and further information will be cheerfully furnished.

School Literature.

In none of the departments of our great American educational system have more noticeable advances been made than in the text books and literature adopted by Catholic institutions and parochial schools. This is undoubtedly largely due to the wise and judicious administration of affairs by the heads of the Church, who are ably assisted in all such matters of vital importance by the advice and experience of those who have the care and training of the Catholic youth under their immediate supervision.

Directly interested in supplying the enormous demand for such publications, is the American Book Company, of Chicago, Illinois, the largest exclusively school book publishing house in the world. In fact, this concern may be said to furnish by far the larger portion of such works used, and therefore, being thoroughly in touch with the progressive ideas of those to whom they sell, are constantly on the alert for something new, interesting and instructive. Only recently, indeed, have they given force to this statement, in the addition of a large and comprehensive list of publications pertaining to all branches of school instruction.

In order that the affairs of this department may be facilitated to the utmost, and the interest and convenience of patrons more thoroughly and consistently subserved, the American Book Company is personally represented in Wisconsin by Messrs. Adolph Dueber and T. J. McDonough, who, by their uniform politeness and evident endeavor to please, have become familiarly and favorably known to the clergy and teachers of the State.

Births.

Marriages.

Deaths.

History of the Catholic Church in Wisconsin.

PART XVI.

Chronological Table of Historical and Parochial Events.

General History.

1604—Pierre de Gaust, Sieur de Monts and Samuel de Champlain complete the exploration of Acadia, and then discover the southern coast of Canada; the same year they established a settlement on the Isle de St. Croix.

1605—Champlain explored the Kennebec River opposite Cape Cod near which has since been built the city of Boston; the first permanent French settlement in North America was established at Mount Royal.

1607—Founding of Jamestown, Virginia.

1608—On the third July, Champlain founded the city of Quebec, capital of New France, on the northern shore of the River St. Lawrence.

1609—Champlain entered upon his first campaign against the Iroquois, and discovered the lake which still bears his name.

1610—Champlain returned to New France and at once started on his second expedition against the Iroquois.

1612—Prince de Conde becomes Viceroy of the Colony; Champlain visits France, remaining there till the following year.

1613—Champlain returns to New France.

1615—Four Recollects, Fathers Dennis Jamay, John D'Olbeau and Joseph le Caron, with Brother Pacificus du Plessis, arrive at Tadoussac; Champlain makes a third expedition against the Iroquois.

1616—Champlain and Father Joseph le Caron return to Quebec.

1617—Discovery of a plot arranged by the Indians to destroy all the French settlers.

1620—Prince de Conde transfers the Viceregal authority to his brother-in-law, the Marshal de Montmorenci, for a consideration of 11,000 crowns; the Iroquois undertake to destroy the French colony, but are defeated in their plans; the Pilgrim Fathers land at Plymouth.

1622—The French company is suppressed by the King of France, and its rights and titles vested in William de Caen and his nephew, Emeric de Caen.

1625—Five Jesuit missionaries are sent to the Canadian mission.

1626—Death of Father Nicholas Viel.

1627—The Jesuit Fathers Philibert Noyrot and Anne de Noue, and a brother, came to Quebec, bringing with them some twenty mechanics; the management of colonial affairs passed into the hands of a new organization entitled the Company of One Hundred Associates.

1628—Beginning of hostilities between England and France.

1629—Quebec surrenders to the English.

1632—Canada is restored to the French; Champlain is made Governor; Fathers de Brebeuf, Masse, Le Jeune and Anne de Noue arrive in Canada.

1634—A French colony is established among the Hurons; Fathers de Brebeuf and Daniel entered upon their duties there.

1635—First permanent mission established among the Hurons; foundation of the college at Quebec by Rene Rohault; death of Champlain at Quebec, December 25th.

1636—M. de Montmagny becomes Governor of New France.

1637—Fathers Garnier and Chatelain labor among the Indians at Lake Nipissing.

1638—Serious epidemic among the Hurons; foundation of the Indian settlement at Sylleri.

1639—Establishment of the Hospital Nuns at Sylleri and the Ursulines at Quebec; Father Bartholomew Vimond and a number of priests come to Quebec.

1640—War between the Hurons and Iroquois; conversion of the first Iroquois to the Christian faith; death of de Sillery; an association of thirty-five members take possession of the Island of Montreal.

1641—de Maisseneuve declared Governor of the island of Montreal.

1642—A large number of Indians attend religious services on the island; Fathers Jogues and Raymbault plant the cross at Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan; first captivity of Father Jogues.

1643—D'Ailleboust comes to Canada.

1648—Murder of Father Anthony Daniel, S. J.; Royal Regulation, known as the first Canadian Charter, introduced.

1649—Father de Brebeuf cruelly put to death by the Iroquois on March 16th; March 17, Father Lalemant, S. J., tortured to death; December 7, death of Father Charles Garnier, S. J., December 8, death of Father Natalis Chabanel; Huron December 8, death of Father Natalis Chabanel; Huron mission destroyed.

1651—Proposal of an alliance between New England and New France.

1653—The Governor brings an additional force of one hundred settlers to the colony, among them being Margaret Bourgeois; the Iroquois attack the settlement.

1654—The French traders, Grosseilliers and Radisson, pass St. Ignace on their way to Green Bay; they are discovered in a starving condition on Madeline Island; visit the Hurons on the headwaters of the Black River, Wisconsin, and the Sioux in Minnesota; return to Quebec in 1660.

1656—Death of Father Leonard Garreau, S. J.

1660—October 15, Father Rene Menard, S. J., arrives at Keweenaw Bay, Michigan.

1661—First Mass said in Wisconsin by Father Menard, between the first and tenth of August; he perishes or is killed at the headwaters of the Black River, Wisconsin, about August 10.

1663—Great earthquake in the St. Lawrence Valley.

1665—October 1, Father Claude Allouez arrives at Chequamegon Bay and begins the mission of the Holy Ghost on La Pointe du Saint Esprit at the head of the Bay; Nicholas Perrot visits the Pottawattomies at Green Bay.

1667—Father Allouez returns to Quebec and brings back with him Father Louis Nicholas to La Pointe du Saint Esprit.

1668—Father Marquette, S. J., stationed at Sault Ste. Marie.

1669—Father Claude Dablon, S. J., arrives at the Sault; Father Marquette stationed at La Pointe du Saint Esprit; Father Allouez founds the Green Bay mission of St. Francis Xavier on December 3.

1670—Father Allouez founds the mission of Saint Mark above Lake Winneconne, Wisconsin, April 25; the mission of St. James, not far from Portage city, May, 1; the mission of St. Michael among the Menominees near the mouth of the Menominee River, and on May 8, another little mission near Sturgeon Bay, among the Winnebagoes and Pottawattomies; Fathers Dreuillettes and Andre are sent to the Winnebagoes.

1671—June 14, great mass meeting at Sault Ste. Marie; the mission of La Pointe du Saint Esprit abandoned.

1672—Allouez plants a cross at St. James of the Mascoutens and opens his chapel to the different tribes there.

1673—Father Marquette and M. Joliet discover the Mississippi.

1674—Chapel at Sault Ste. Marie burnt by Pagan Indians.

1675—Death of Marquette.

1677—Marquette's remains are exhumed and deposited in a vault in the mission church of St. Ignace at Mackinaw; Father Nouvel goes to the Mackinaw mission.

1678—Father John Enjalran goes to the Ottawas.

1679—Father Hennepin, O. S. F., and La Salle, arrive at Mackinaw; Du Luth visits the Sioux, and the following year goes up the Bois Brule and down the St. Croix River, Wisconsin; Father Dreuillettes returns to Quebec.

1680—Father Hennepin ascends the Mississippi to the Falls of St. Anthony; September 18, Father Gabriel de la Ribourde, O. S. F., killed in Illinois by some Kickapoo Indians.

1687—Church and mission house at De Pere burned by Pagan Indians.

1695—A French trading post established at Chequamegon.

1705—Mission of Mackinaw abandoned; the Fathers with a sorrowful heart burn their church to prevent its desecration by Pagan Indians.

1721—The Historian Charlevoix visits Green Bay; Father Chardon, S. J., stationed there at that time.

1728—French and Fox war; probably during that war two Jesuit Fathers (names unknown), were put to death by Pagan Indians at De Pere, Wisconsin.

1741—Father Peter du Jaunay stationed at Mackinaw.

1745—Augustine de Langlade and his son Charles settle at Green Bay.

1754—Commencement of the Old French War.

1759—Quebec taken.

1776—July 4, Declaration of Independence.

1783—End of war between Great Britain and the United States.

1790—Diocese of Baltimore erected; Rt. Rev. John Carroll consecrated August 15.

1793—May 25, first ordination in the United States, that of Rev. Stephen T. Badin.

1799—Rev. Gabriel Richard visits Arbre Croche; death of Washington.

1810—November 4, Rt. Rev. Benedict Joseph Flaget consecrated Bishop of Bardstown, Kentucky; Pope Leo XIII. born March 2.

1815—December 3, Archbishop Carroll, Baltimore, died.

1822—January 13, Rev. Edward Fenwick, first Bishop of Cincinnati, consecrated.

1823—Rev. Gabriel Richard visits Green Bay; a combination church and school built; destroyed by fire in 1825.

1825—Rev. J. V. Badin visits Green Bay, also in 1826-28.

1828—Rev. P. S. Dejean, of Arbre Croche, Michigan, visits Green Bay.

1830-1831—Rt. Rev. E. Fenwick visits Green Bay; also Very Rev. Frederic Rese; Father Baraga arrives in New York, December 31, 1830.

1831—First Catholic Church in Wisconsin built at Menomineeville, near Green Bay; destroyed by fire in 1846. (?)

1832—Revs. Sanderl and Hetscher, C. S. S. R., take charge of the Catholic congregation in Green Bay; Bishop E Fenwick, of Cincinnati, dies of the cholera at Wooster, Ohio, September 26; Father Van den Broek arrives in Baltimore August 15.

1833—Rev. Fathers Sanderl and Hetscher go to Arbre Croche; Rt. Rev. Frederick Rese, first Bishop of Detroit (and first German Bishop of the United States), consecrated October 6.

1834—July 4, Father T. J. Van den Broek arrives in Green Bay; cholera there that same year.

1835—Rev. Frederic Baraga arrives in La Pointe, Madeline Island, July 27; he builds a chapel at Middlefort.

1836—The Redemptorist Fathers take charge of Green Bay for the second time; Father Van den Broek goes to Little Chute.

1838—Rev. Florimond Bonduel takes charge of the Green Bay congregation; visit of Bishop Rese to La Pointe, Wisconsin; Wisconsin divided into thirteen colonies.

1839—Father Van den Broek completes his church in Little Chute.

1841—Present church of La Pointe, built by Father Baraga; Rt. Rev. Peter Paul Lefevre, Coadjutor of Detroit, consecrated November 21.

1843—Rev. Peter Carabin takes charge of Green Bay; Father Baraga removes to L'Anse, Michigan.

1844—Rt. Rev. John Martin Henni, of Milwaukee, consecrated March 17; created Archbishop in 1875; August 16, 1844, Bishop Henni confirmed 122 Indians and French at La Pointe.

1845—October 4, the Rev. Otto Skolla, O. S. F., arrives in La Pointe; first ordination in Wisconsin, that of Frank Mazzuchelli.

1846—Milwaukee was incorporated, Solomon Juneau becoming its first mayor.

1847—The Rev. A. Godfert takes charge of Green Bay; Father Van den Broek goes to Holland; college opened at Sinsinawa Mound by the Indian missionary, Samuel Mazzuchelli; St. Mary's church, Milwaukee, dedicated by Archbishop Henni; foundation stone of St. John's Cathedral laid.

1848—First settlement of Catholic Hollanders in Wisconsin.

1849—The Rev. Fathers Anderledy and Brunner take charge of Green Bay; Provincial Council held at Baltimore; Holy Trinity congregation, Milwaukee, organized and church built; ordination of Father Gernbauer on July 25; St. Gall's church dedicated December 8.

1850—The Rev. A. Anderledy leaves Green Bay; Wisconsin's first railway is built.

1851—Father Van den Broek dies at Little Chute on November 5; first Catholic paper, the "Seebote," published in Milwaukee.

1852—Bishop Henni went to Mexico and Cuba and brought back with him the Jesuit missionary F. X. Weninger; May 9th; Bishop Henni attended the first Plenary Council held at Baltimore; July 9th, he confirmed one hundred and one persons in St. Mary's church, Milwaukee; July 13, Michael Obermueller was ordained; October 21, Martin Weiss and Sebastian Seif were ordained.

1853—St. John's Cathedral, Milwaukee, dedicated July 31.

1854—Thomas Keenan and H. J. Holzhauer ordained.

1856—The Priests' Seminary at St. Francis dedicated January 24.

1860—Bishop Henni makes his first visit to the northwestern portion of his diocese; death of Rev. George Rehrl.

1863—The first Bohemian congregation organized in Milwaukee.

1865—On July 29th the tenth General Convention of the German Roman Catholic Central Society held its annual session in St. Gall's Academy, Milwaukee.

1866—Plenary Council held at Baltimore, at which Bishop Henni petitioned that Wisconsin be divided into three dioceses.

1868—Wisconsin is divided into three dioceses, Rev. Joseph Melcher being consecrated Bishop of Green Bay and Rev. Michael Heiss of La Crosse.

1869—Celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the episcopal consecration of Bishop Henni; The "Star of Bethlehem," a Catholic publication, first published.

1869-70—St. John's Catholic School and Bishop's Hall erected; Teachers' Seminary at St. Francis built.

1870—The "Catholic Citizen" and "Catholic Vindicator" established.

1871—The "Star of Bethlehem" consolidated with the "Catholic Vindicator."

1873—The American Caecilia Society founded at the Seminary by Mr. John Singenberger.

1875—Bishop Henni consecrated Rev. F. X. Krautbauer second Bishop of Green Bay; Bishop Henni consecrated Archbishop.

1879—February 6, Celebration of the Golden Jubilee of Archbishop Henni in the Cathedral; March 6th, Vicar-General Martin Kundig died and was succeeded by the Rev. Leonard Batz.

1880—Bishop Heiss was appointed Coadjutor of Archbishop Henni.

1881—On August 24th the Rev. Kilian Flasch consecrated Bishop of La Crosse; September 8th, Archbishop Henni died and was succeeded by the Rt. Rev. Michael Heiss.

1883—The Most Rev. Michael Heiss went to Rome to attend a convocation of Archbishops; The "Excelsior," a German Catholic newspaper, established.

1884—Archbishop Heiss attends the Plenary Council at Baltimore.

1886—Archbishop Heiss presides at the Provincial Council in Milwaukee; on September 21, Rev. F. X. Katzer consecrated Bishop of Green Bay.

1888—The La Crosse "Patriot" founded.

1890—The "De Volkstern" (Hollandish), a Catholic publication, established at De Pere; death of Archbishop Heiss; Bishop Katzer appointed as successor to the Archiepiscopate; on August 3, Rt. Rev. Kilian Flasch died; August 21, Rt. Rev. Katzer assumed the duties of his new office; December 14, Rev. Sebastian Messmer appointed Bishop of Green Bay.

1891—A Freedom of Worship bill, drawn by H. J. Desmond, became law; Bishops' Protest against the Bennett Law; the "Catholic Citizen" incorporated and H. J. Desmond became proprietor.

1892—The Columbian Catholic Summer School organized; on February 25, the Rev. James Schwebach appointed Bishop of La Crosse as successor to the Rev. Kilian Flasch.

Archdiocese of Milwaukee (Parishes.)

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1847—The corner stone of St. John's Cathedral laid on December 5th; 1849—Bishop Henni brought several beautiful paintings from Europe to adorn the interior; 1853—St. John's Cathedral completed and dedicated; 1860—a number of the members of the Cathedral congregation perished on the steamer "Lady Elgin" on Lake Michigan; 1875—Bishop Henni made an Archbishop; 1878—Bishop Heiss made Coadjutor to Archbishop Henni; 1879—Father Kundig died and was succeeded by Father Donahoe; 1880—Father Keogh made pastor at St. John's parish; 1881—Archbishop Henni died, and was succeeded by Bishop Heiss; 1890—Archbishop Heiss died and was succeeded by Bishop Katzer; 1892—the Cathedral tower remodeled and the interior of the church improved; 1893—a High School for girls opened; 1897—December 5th anniversary of the Cathedral celebrated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1894—St. Ann's congregation organized and incorporated; 1895—church completed and dedicated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1872—St. Anthony's congregation organized by the Rev. A. I. Decker and a church, school and parsonage built during that year; 1882—a new church erected; 1883—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1887—St. Augustine's congregation incorporated and parochial school opened.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1888—St. Boniface congregation organized and incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1894—St. Casimir's church erected, school established, and parish incorporated; 1896—Sisters' house built.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1893—SS. Cyril and Method congregation organized by Father J. F. Szukalski; 1893—parochial school erected and parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1869—Monastery and chapel of St. Francis of Assissi built; 1870—church erected; 1876—new church built.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1847—St. Gall's congregation established; 1849—church built and dedicated in honor of St. Gall; 1868—new church built; 1875—Holy Name (branch of St. Gall's) church and school house built; 1892—consolidation of St. Gall's and Holy Name congregations and steps taken towards the erection of Gesu church; May 21, 1893—cornerstone of Gesu church laid; 1894—Gesu church erected; October 21, 1894—last services held at St. Gall's; December 16, 1894—dedicatory services.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1871—St. Hedwig's congregation organized; church built; 1872—school established; 1879—brick school erected; 1888—new church built.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1885—Holy Rosary congregation organized by Archbishop Heiss.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1849—Holy Trinity congregation organized; 1867—school house erected; 1883—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1882—St. Hyacinth's congregation organized; 1883—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1870—Immaculate Conception congregation organized and church built; 1886—school built and parish hall erected; 1888—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1888—Congregation of St. Josaphat's established and incorporated; 1889—church destroyed by fire; rebuilt same year.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1875—St. John de Nepomuc (Bohemian) congregation organized; 1883—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1855—St. Joseph's congregation organized by Father Holzhauer; school established same year; 1883—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1588—St. Lawrence congregation organized; 1892—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1846—St. Mary's church built; 1851—parochial school opened by Father Salzmann; 1851—Notre Dame Convent established by Sister Caroline Fries; 1883—parish incorporated; 1893—April 17, attempt made to burn the church; 1891—new school building erected.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1893—St. Matthew's congregation organized by the Rev. J. M. Naughtin.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1883—St. Michael's congregation organized; new church built; 1884—new school opened; Sisters' house erected; 1887—new school built; 1889—addition built to same; 1893—new church completed.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1876—St. Patrick's parish organized; 1883—parish incorporated; 1895—new church erected.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1889—SS. Peter and Paul congregation organized; 1892—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1887—St. Rose's congregation established; 1888—parish incorporated; 1889—new church erected; 1893—new school and Sisters' house built.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1862—St. Stanislaus congregation organized; 1889—parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1888—St. Vincent de Paul's congregation organized; church and school erected; Sisters' house erected and parish incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1893—St. Wenceslaus' congregation organized and incorporated; church and school built.

Addison, Wis.: 1840—Mission of SS. Peter and Paul established; 1848—first church built; 1855—St. Anthony's congregation organized and church built at Addison; 1873—second church built.

Alverno, Wis.: 1874—St. Joseph's church erected; 1883—parish incorporated; 1888—Franciscan convent built.

Ashford, Wis.: 1847—Congregation of St. Martin's established.

Ashton, Wis.: 1861—St. Peter's congregation established and church built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Barton, Wis.: 1857—Immaculate Conception congregation organized.

Beaver Dam, Wis.: 1875—Polish congregation of St. Michael's established; 1883—parish incorporated; 1885—school house built.

Beaver Dam, Wis.: 1860—Congregation of St. Patrick's organized by the Rev. J. De Berge; 1883—parish incorporated.

Beaver Dam, Wis.: 1853—St. Peter's congregation organized by Father Kundig and church built; 1862—second church built and parochial school organized; 1865—school house built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Beloit Road, Wis.: 1851—St. Mathias congregation organized and church built; 1854—parsonage (log) erected; 1861—addition of 22 feet built to the church; 1866—Sisters' house built; 1883—present church erected; 1870—new parsonage built; 1895—new school house built.

Beloit, Wis.: 1846—First Mass celebrated by Father McKernan; 1854—first church built by Father Norris; 1883—parish incorporated; 1884—church destroyed by fire; 1885—second church built by Father Ward.

Benton, Wis.: 1847—Congregation established; 1851—academy established by Sisters of Dominican Order; 1852—mission of St. Rose's, Cuba, established; 1844—Mission of St. Augustin, New Diggings, established; 1883—parish incorporated; 1895—academy destroyed by fire.

Brighton, Wis.: 1845—Parish established; 1850—first church built by Father Etschmann; 1866—school erected and placed in charge of Sisters of Notre Dame; 1883—church destroyed by cyclone; 1884—St. Francis Xavier church erected.

Brodhead, Wis.: 1863—Mission of St. Patrick's at Albany established; 1868—school at Brodhead purchased and fitted up for place of worship; 1875 mission of St. Augustine's at Footville established.

Burlington, Wis.: 1841—Parish founded by Father Kundig; 1847—first church built by Father Kendeler; 1883—parish incorporated; 1891—second church built by Father Jacobs.

Byron, Wis.: 1846—First Mass celebrated; 1847—frame church erected; 1864—present church erected.

Caledonia, Wis.: 1857—St. Louis' congregation organized and church built; missions attached: Holy Family at Lower Caledonia and St. John Nepomuc at Racine; 1883—parish incorporated.

Cascade, Wis.: 1859—St. Mary's congregation established; 1860—St. Michael's mission established at Mitchell by Father Petit; 1893—new church built by Father Burke.

Cassville, Wis.: 1852—Mission of St. Charles established; 1857—first church erected by Fathers Hobbs and Zuber; 1876—school built by the Rev. Father Gmeiner; 1883—parish incorporated; 1889—the present church erected; 1893—a new school built, conducted by the Franciscan Sisters.

Cedarburg, Wis.: 1844—First church built; 1870—second church built.

Charlesburg, Wis.: 1866—St. Charles' congregation organized; 1866—St. Martin's mission organized; 1876—stone foundation for the present church laid; 1877—building completed and blessed; 1890—school built.

Clyman, Wis.: 1861—Church of the Holy Assumption built by the Rev. Joseph Smith; 1883—parish incorporated.

Columbus, Wis.: 1856—St. Jerome's congregation established by Father Kundig; 1857—first church built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1893—Elba became a mission of Columbus.

Cross Plains, Wis.: 1854—St. Francis Xavier congregation founded; 1855—Church completed, parsonage built and cemetery laid out; 1857—church enlarged and improved; 1859—parochial school built; 1861—new parsonage built; 1873—new church completed; 1883—parish incorporated; 1897—new stations erected.

Cudahy, Wis.: 1896—St. Frederick's church incorporated.

Dacada, Wis.: 1848—Parish established by Father Laufhuber; church of St. Nicholas erected.

Dane, Wis.: 1863—First Mass celebrated at Vienna; 1875—St. Michael's church at Dane built; 1884—parish incorporated; 1885—congregation at Lodi established.

Darlington, Wis.: 1861—First priest visited Darlington; 1883—parish incorporated.

Dayton, Wis.: 1870—Congregation organized by the Rev. James Farrell; 1872—addition to church built by Father Colyin; 1854—mission of St. Bernard established by the Rev. F. X. Etschmann; 1880—St. Bernard's attached as a mission to Dayton.

Delavan, Wis.: 1858—Mission established and dedicated to St. Andrew; 1883—parish incorporated; 1892—new church erected.

Dodgeville, Wis.: 1883—St. Joseph's congregation organized; missions attached to St. Joseph's church: St. John the Baptist and St. Peter's in Iowa County, and St. Michael's at Yellowstone, Lafayette County; 1898—new church built.

Dotyville, Wis.: 1855—First church built by Father Salanus; 1894—second church built.

Eagle, Wis.: 1852—St. Theresa's founded; 1868—addition to church and tower built; 1870—parsonage built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1896—second church and school built.

East Bristol, Wis.: 1847—St. Joseph's congregation organized; 1868—second church built by the Rev. Fr. Foeckler and consecrated by the Most Rev. Archbishop Heiss; 1871—school house erected; 1887—church, Sisters' house and school built at Pine Bluff; 1883—parish incorporated.

East Troy, Wis.: 1848—Congregation of St Peter's organized by Father Kundig; 1870—new church built by the Rev. Thomas Bergen; 1896—mission of St. James, Mukwonago, established.

Eden, Wis.: 1847—mission of St. James established; 1883—parish incorporated; 1895—St. Mary's parsonage erected.

Edgerton, Wis.: 1852—St. Joseph's congregation organized; missions attached; St. Michael's at Portertown, St. Ann's at Stoughton; 1883—parish incorporated.

Elkhorn, Wis.: 1846—Mission at Sharon established and church built; 1848—first services held at Elkhorn; 1880—St. Patrick's church incorporated.

Elm Grove, Wis.: 1844—Congregation of the Visitation of St. Mary's organized; 1859—St. Mary's Convent founded by Mother Caroline; 1891—church remodeled and re-dedicated by Archbishop Katzer.

Farmersville, Wis: 1857—Congregation of St. Andrew's organized; 1874—church built on Holy Hill.

Fennimore, Wis.: 1861—First Mass celebrated at Boscobel; 1872—church erected at Boscobel; 1884—St. Mary's church at Fennimore erected; 1898—parsonage erected.

Fond du Lac, Wis.: 1847—St. Joseph's parish first visited by Father Bonduel; 1874—corner stone of the present church laid; 1891—parish incorporated.

Fond du Lac, Wis.: 1862—Congregation of St. Louis organized; 1868-70—church built by Father Perrodin.

Fond du Lac, Wis.: 1866—St. Mary's congregation established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Fond du Lac, Wis.: 1855—St. Patrick's church built by the Rev. Father Dale.

Fort Atkinson, Wis.: 1884—Congregation of St. Joseph's established; 1892—church of the Immaculate Conception, Milton Junction, erected by the Rev. R. J. Roche; 1895—parish incorporated.

Fox Lake, Wis.: 1845—Mission established; 1850—first church erected; 1892—second church erected by Father Blackwell; parish incorporated.

Franklin, Wis.: 1847—Parish of the Holy Assumption founded by Father Kundig; 1842—Mission of St. Mary at Greenfield established by the Rev. Father Kelley; 1883—parish incorporated; 1887—church destroyed by fire and rebuilt during the same year; 1897—parish incorporated.

Franklin, Wis.: 1858—Congregation of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary established; two parochial schools in connection placed in charge of Sisters of St. Francis; 1883—parish incorporated.

Fredonia, Wis. (Kohler P. O.): 1847—Congregation of the Mother of Sorrows established; 1868—second church built; 1888—school house erected and placed in charge of two Sisters of St. Francis of Assissi; 1868—congregation of St. John the Baptist at Waubeka, a mission of Fredonia, established.

Fussville, Wis.: 1847—St. Anthony's church built; 1857—parochial school established; Englesburg: 1846—congregation of St. Marin's established.

Germantown, Wis.: 1845—Congregation established; 1849—second church built; 1886—parish of St. Boniface incorporated; 1855-58—St. Mary's of the Assumption congregation in Richfield township established.

Grafton, Wis.: 1849—Congregation of St. Joseph's organized; 1869—second church erected at St. Francis Xavier's mission; 1897—parish incorporated.

Granville Center, Wis.: 1855—Congregation of St. Catherine's established and church built; 1845—mission of St. James at Mequon established; 1891—church built by Father July.

Gratiot, Wis.: 1869—Church of St. Joseph built by the Rev. J. J. Kinsella.

Hartford, Wis.: 1863—Parish of St. Kilian established by the Rev. Father Deisenrieder; 1876—new church built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1891—school house erected and placed in charge of Franciscan Sisters.

Highland, Wis.: 1860—Parish of St. John's founded; 1865—school established and placed in charge of Sisters of St. Francis; 1897—parish incorporated.

Highland, Wis.: 1846—Congregation of St. Philip's organized; mission of Otter Creek attached.

Hollandale, Wis.: 1864—First church built; 1869—addition built to same; 1870—parsonage built at Ridgeway; 1872—parsonage built at Walwick.

Holy Cross, Wis.: 1845—Holy Cross congregation organized.

Janesville, Wis.: 1876—First church built; 1883—incorporation of St. Mary's congregation.

Janesville, Wis.: 1850—Congregation of St. Patrick's organized; 1870—Sisters of Mercy established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Jefferson, Wis.: 1859—Congregation of St. John the Baptist founded; 1866—present church built and dedicated two years later; 1883—parish incorporated.

Jefferson, Wis.: 1850—St. Lawrence's congregation received its first resident pastor; 1862—church erected; 1864—Franciscan convent established; 1869—school erected; 1883—parish incorporated; 1888—church enlarged; 1894—rectory built.

Johnsburg, Wis.: 1845, September 26—Congregation organized by the Rev. Caspar Rehrl; 1846—first church built; 1845—school established; 1856—new school erected and placed in charge of Sisters of Notre Dame.

Kendaltown, Wis.: 1855—Immaculate Conception congregation organized; 1856—church erected; 1883—pastor's house built; 1835—parish of the Holy Assumption at Willow Springs established.

Kenosha, Wis.: 1845—First church erected by Father Kundig; 1870—first school built; 1883—St. George's parish incorporated; 1883-1887—Father Cleary built a new church, parsonage and school; 1890—Convent of the Most Precious Blood founded by the Dominicans.

Kenosha, Wis.: 1837—St. James' Parish established; 1845—Church erected by Father Kundig; 1883—parish incorporated; 1892—school built.

Kewaskum, Wis.: 1861—Holy Trinity congregation established; 1878—addition to church built; 1856—mission of Bridget's at St. Wayne, established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Kiel, Wis.: 1892—Congregation of SS. Peter and Paul organized; it was first attended as a mission from St. Ann's by the Rev. Father Schleier; Holy Trinity church at Meeme and Holy Trinity congregation at Schoolhill attended by the pastor from Kiel.

Kieler, Wis.: 1855—Congregation organized; 1869—new church erected by Father Oeschger; 1873—mission established at Dickeyville; 1883—parish incorporated.

Lake Geneva, Wis.: 1845—St. Francis of Sales' congregation organized; 1847—received its first resident pastor; 1849—Beloit and Delavan added as missions.

Lancaster, Wis.: 1846—St. Clement's congregation organized; 1851—Chapel erected; 1859—Rock church erected; 1859—Sisters' school and residence erected; missions attached at Mount Hope and Patch Grove; 1883—parish incorporated.

Lomira, Wis.: 1870—St. Mary's of the Nativity congregation established.

Lost Lake, Wis.: 1865—St. Mary's church built.

Lyons, Wis.: 1870—St. Joseph's congregation founded; frame church and parsonage erected; 1886—steeple added to church; 1889—brick school built; 1895—new parsonage erected and church enlarged.

Madison, Wis.: 1843—First Mass said by Father Kundig; 1848—Mass celebrated in the new capitol building; 1849—church erected; 1850—parochial residence erected; 1854—new church erected; 1856—Holy Redeemer congregation seceded from the mother parish; 1857—Holy Redeemer church built; parochial school opened; 1869—new church erected; 1873—steeple damaged by storm; 1864—bell purchased for church and a plot of land secured and arranged for a cemetery; church improved; 1875—pipe organ built and windows improved; 1880—church edifice renovated; 1883—parish incorporated; 1885—pastoral residence built.

Madison, Wis.: 1888—parish incorporated; 1889—St. Patrick's church built.

Madison, Wis.: 1842—First Mass celebrated by Father Kundig in the old capitol building; soon after St. Raphael's congregation organized and church built; 1854—the present church built; 1850—first school house built; 1870—school building on Henry street erected and subsequently one on Fairchild street; 1883—St. Raphael's parish incorporated.

Manitowoc, Wis.: 1853—Parish of St. Boniface established and church erected; 1868—new church built and parish school established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Manitowoc, Wis.: 1870—St. Mary's parish established and church built; 1887—parish incorporated.

Mapleton, Wis.; 1847—St. Catherine's congregation established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Marytown, Wis.: 1849—Church of the Visitation of the B. V. M. founded; 1870—second school house built; 1880—second church built.

Mayville, Wis.: 1856—St. Mary's of Perpetual Help congregation organized; 1881— new church built.

Mazomanie, Wis.: 1862—St. Barnabas church built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1891—new church erected; mission at Mill Creek attached.

Meeme, Wis.: 1850—Chapel built by St. Isidore's congregation; 1864—church built; 1884—parish incorporated.

Middleton, Wis.: 1889—Congregation of St. Bernard organized, church built and parish incorporated.

Mineral Point, Wis.: 1870—Congregation of St. Mary's founded, church built, pastoral residence and school erected; 1883—parish incorporated.

Mineral Point, Wis.: 1839—St. Paul's congregation organized; 1842—first church built; 1877—new church, parsonage, school house and barn built.

Monches, Wis.: 1842—St. John's congregation established and church built; 1883—parish incorporated; mission attached: St. Columba, Lake Five.

Monroe, Wis.: 1861—St. Mary's congregation established and church built; 1872—parochial school established.

Monroe, Wis.: 1860—St. Victor's congregation organized and church and parsonage erected; 1892—church destroyed by fire; church and parsonage rebuilt.

Mt. Calvary, Wis.: 1848—Holy Cross congregation founded by Father Rehrl; 1867—monastery erected; St. Peter's mission organized at Summit station; 1870—mission established at St. Cloud.

Mt. Hope, Wis.: 1860—St. Lawrence church built; 1883—a new church erected and parish incorporated; 1845—St. John's mission established; 1850—church built by Father Galtier.

Muscoda, Wis.: 1859—St. John the Baptist congregation established and church built; 1875—parsonage built; 1884—new church built; 1888—school house erected.

Neosho, Wis.: 1848—St. Matthew's congregation organized, and church erected; 1863—new church built; 1867-71—school house and parsonage built. Woodland, Wis.: 1862—St. Mary's mission established and church built. Rubicon, Wis.: 1870—Mission of St. John established by Father Thill.

New Berlin, Wis.: 1855—Holy Apostles' congregation organized and church built; 1876—school erected; pastor's residence erected; 1890—new church built; 1896—new school erected.

Newburg, Wis.: 1855—Holy Trinity congregation organized; first church, school and parsonage built; 1882—brick parsonage erected; 1887—new school house erected.

New Cassel, Wis.: 1864—St. Mathias' congregation established; church erected; 1862—mission of St. Mathias' organized.

New Coeln, Wis.: 1847—Parish of St. Stephen founded; 1857—mission of St. James, Oak Creek, established; 1883—parish incorporated.

New Muenster, Wis.: 1840-45—St. Alphonsus congregation organized; 1851—first church built; also parsonage; 1883—parish incorporated; 1885—new church built and addition added to school house. Wilmot, Wis.: 1856—Holy Family congregation organized by Father Schraudenbach.

Northeim, Wis.: 1868—St. Casimir's congregation organized and church erected; 1880—church destroyed by fire, rebuilt same year; 1874—parochial school established.

Oconomowoc, Wis.: 1866—St. Jerome's congregation established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Oregon, Wis.: 1856—Holy Mother of Consolation congregation organized; 1857—church and parsonage built; 1889—new church erected.

Osceola, Wis.: 1857—Our Lady of Angels' congregation established; 1880—present church built; 1894—parsonage burned; 1895—a new parsonage built.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1868—St. Vincent de Paul's congregation established; 1869—first church built; 1891—school house built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1893—St. John the Evangelist congregation organized; 1894—parsonage erected; 1896—parish incorporated; 1897—church dedicated.

Paris, Wis.: 1859—Church of St. John the Baptist built.

Pewaukee, Wis.: 1843—St. Mary's congregation established; 1845—church built at Brookfield; 1883—parish incorporated.

Pine Bluff, Wis.: 1852—St. Mary's congregation organized; 1868—parsonage erected and school established.

Platteville, Wis.: 1845—Church built; 1870—second church built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Plymouth, Wis.: 1861—Congregation of St. John the Baptist established; 1865—Glenbeulah, St. Fridolin's congregation established; 1896—school opened and parish incorporated.

Port Washington, Wis.: 1849—St. Mary's congregation organized, church built and parochial school opened; 1860—second church built; 1863—new school house built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Potosi, Wis.: 1846—Congregation of St. Andrew's organized and church built; 1875—new church built by the Rev. N. A. Thill; 1883—parish incorporated.

Racine, Wis.: 1884—Holy Name congregation organized; 1885—parsonage built.

Racine, Wis.: 1896—St. John Nepomuc's congregation established; 1897—congregation incorporated.

Racine, Wis.: 1862—St. Joseph's congregation organized; 1883—parish incorporated.

Racine, Wis.: 1841—St. Mary's church built; 1845—new church built; 1856—St. Patrick's congregation seceded from St. Mary's; 1883—parish incorporated.

Racine, Wis.: 1856—St. Patrick's congregation organized; 1883—parish incorporated.

Racine, Wis.: 1885—St. Rose's congregation organized; church erected; 1886—parish incorporated.

Random Lake, Wis.: 1854—St. Mary's congregation established and church built; 1873—new church built; 1895—parish incorporated.

Richfield, Wis.: 1846—Congregation of St. Hubert organized and church built; 1875-80—second church built by Father Raess; 1890—school house built by the Rev. B. Weyer; 1846—congregation of St. Augustin organized.

Ridgeway, Wis.: 1840—Mission established by the Rev. Joseph Causse; 1878—first church built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1888—mission at Barneveld organized.

Ripon, Wis.: 1858—St. Patrick's congregation organized; 1883—parish incorporated.

Ripon, Wis.: 1896—Congregation of St. Wenceslaus organized, church built and parish incorporated.

Roxbury, Wis.: 1845—St. Norbert's church built; 1857—new church built; 1864—school house built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1896—Golden Jubilee of St. Norbert's.

St. Anna, Wis.: 1847—Congregation established; 1894—new church erected by the Rev. J. B. Froehlich; 1883—parish incorporated.

St. Francis, Wis.: 1886—Congregation of the Sacred Heart established; parochial school in charge of the Sisters of the Order of St. Francis attached.

St. George, Wis.: 1861—Congregation of St. George established.

St. Kilian, Wis.: 1847—St. Kilian's congregation established and church built; 1862—second church built.

St. Lawrence, Wis.: 1846—Congregation of St. Lawrence organized; 1848—mission of St. Mathias, West Bend, established; 1883—parish incorporated; 1889—school house erected.

St. Michael's Wis.: 1846—St. Michael's congregation organized; 1847—first church built; 1853—new church built; 1884—parish incorporated; 1894—parsonage erected; 1896—church improved; congregation celebrated its Golden Jubilee.

St. Nazianz, Wis.: 1854—Congregation established by the Rev. Ambrose Oswald; 1858—convent for the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis built; 1864—one erected for Brothers of the same Order; 1883—parish incorporated; 1896—mission of St. Gregory organized.

St. Wendel's, Wis.: 1861—St. Wendel's congregation established; mission of St. George at Centerville established; 1864—frame church built; 1872—mission of St. Fidelis at Meeme established; 1894—church destroyed by fire; 1895—brick church erected.

Saukville, Wis.: 1847—Immaculate Conception congregation organized; 1875—new church erected; 1883—congregation incorporated.

Schleisingerville, Wis.: 1856—St. Peter's congregation organized; church built same year; 1896—parish incorporated.

Sheboygan, Wis.: 1845—First Mass celebrated in the house of Alban Kent; 1847—Holy Name congregation established; 1850—missions at Wilson, Plymouth, Mitchell, Lyndon, Rhine and Mosell established; 1851—mission held at St. Magdalene's by the celebrated Jesuit Father F. X. Wenninger; 1853—parochial school established and school built; 1853-58—missions of Lyndon and Herman erected into parishes; 1862—new stone church erected; 1883—parish incorporated; 1886—Holy Name congregation divided, parish established, church built and dedicated in honor of St. Peter Claver; 1890—St. Nicholas hospital, conducted by Sisters of St. Francis, established.

Sheboygan, Wis.: 1888—St. Peter Claver's congregation organized, church and school built, and parish incorporated.

Sheboygan Falls, Wis.: 1896—St. Mary's Help of Christians church built and congregation incorporated; January 1, 1897—the church dedicated by the Most Rev. Archbishop Katzer, who on July 2 appointed Rev. C. F. Keyser first resident pastor.

Shullsburg, Wis.: 1835—St. Matthew's congregation established; 1841—first church erected; 1875—parochial school established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Sinsinawa, Wis.: 1837—St. Joseph's congregation organized; 1842—log church built; 1845—this church moved to the Mound and dedicated to St. Dominic; 1882—present St. Joseph's church erected; 1846—college for boys erected at Sinsinawa; 1867—St. Clara's academy and Mother-house of the Dominican Sisters established at the Mound; 1877—parish school erected.

South Milwaukee, Wis.: 1893—St. Mary's congregation (Polish) organized.

South Milwaukee, Wis.: 1860—St. Matthew's church erected; 1883—parish incorporated.

Springfield Corners, Wis.: 1850—St. Martin's parish established; 1869—first church built; 1873—school house, Sisters' dwelling and parsonage built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Sullivan, Wis.: 1854—First frame church built; school built; 1887—mission at Weimer established.

Sun Prairie, Wis.: 1866—Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary congregation organized; Cottage Grove, Wis.: 1850—St. Patrick's mission established; 1883—new church built and parish incorporated.

Templeton, Wis.: 1842—St. James' congregation organized; 1842-44—church erected at Brookfield; 1865—new church built.

Theresa, Wis.: 1849—Congregation of St. Theresa founded by Father Schraudenbach.

Waterford, Wis.: 1848—St. Thomas Aquinas Catholic congregation established and church built; 1851-52—Catholic school opened; 1858—parsonage erected; 1864—new school built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Waterloo, Wis.: 1868—St. Joseph's congregation established by Archbishop Henni; 1869—church erected.

Watertown, Wis.: 1843—St. Bernard's congregation established; 1844—church built; 1846—parochial residence built; 1857—church enlarged and improved; 1876—new church completed; 1877—organ and main altar added; 1883—new parsonage erected; 1891—new school house erected.

Watertown, Wis.: 1853—St. Henry's congregation organized; 1883—parish incorporated.

Waukesha, Wis.: 1840—St. Joseph's congregation organized; 1883—congregation incorporated.

Waupun, Wis.: 1858—St. Joseph's church erected; 1883—congregation incorporated.

Wauwatosa, Wis.: 1879—Holy Cross congregation founded.

West Bend, Wis.: 1849—Holy Angels congregation established; 1852—first church built; 1880—parochial school erected and dwelling built.

Westport, Wis.: 1865—St. Mary's congregation established and church erected; 1874—mission of St. John's at Waunakee established; 1882—Sisters' dwelling erected; 1883—congregation incorporated; 1886—new church built; 1896—school house built at Waunakee.

Whitewater, Wis.: 1845—St. Patrick's parish first visited by a priest; 1853—first baptism; 1867—new church built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Diocese of Green Bay (Parishes.)

Green Bay, Wis.: 1851—St. Mary's congregation organized; 1854—new church completed; 1860-62—new school erected.

Green Bay, Wis.: 1889—St. Francis Xavier Cathedral congregation incorporated; 1890—Rev. F. X. Katzer elected to the Archiepiscopate; 1891—new parsonage erected; 1893—Cardinal Satolli visited Green Bay and celebrated Mass in the Cathedral; 1893—statues added to the church furnishings; 1895—two pictures added.

Green Bay, Wis.: 1831—Congregation of St. John the Evangelist organized and church built; 1847—church destroyed by fire; 1872—church again destroyed by fire; 1883—parish incorporated.

Green Bay, Wis.: 1865—St. Patrick's church erected by Father Ver Boort; 1873—parochial residence built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1893—new church erected.

Green Bay, Wis.: 1875—SS. Peter and Paul's church built by Rev. Edward Daems; 1895—parish incorporated.

Green Bay, Wis.: 1864—Parish of St. Willibrord's at Green Bay organized; 1864—new congregation organized; 1891—new church erected.

Algoma, Wis.: 1872—Immaculate Conception church erected; 1883—parish incorporated; 1892—school erected and church improved; 1894—Sisters' house erected.

Amherst Junction, Wis.: 1884—Congregation of St. Mary's organized and church built; 1887—parish incorporated; 1893—second church built.

Antigo, Wis.: 1879—St. John's congregation established by the Rev. Ph. St. Louis; 1885—parish incorporated; 1893—church, parsonage and school built.

Antigo, Wis.: 1895—St. Hyacinth's congregation established; 1896—parish incorporated.

Appleton, Wis.: 1868—December 13, St. Joseph's congregation organized by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Melcher of Green Bay.

Appleton, Wis.: 1849—First Mass celebrated; 1859—St. Mary's congregation organized and church built; 1864—parochial school opened; 1883—parish incorporated.

Askeaton, Wis.: 1877—Congregation of St. Patrick's organized.

Bay Settlement, Wis.: 1840—First church (log) built by French Canadians; 1851—first resident priest, Father Daems, came from Belgium; 1853—Holy Cross church built; 1855—parochial school built; 1876—Convent of the Community of Franciscan Sisters established by Father Daems; 1884—parish incorporated.

Bailey's Harbor, Wis.: 1862—St. Mary's congregation organized; 1870—first church built; 1895—pastoral residence built; Egg Harbor, Wis.: 1876—Mission of St. John in the Desert established by Father Blume; 1878—first church built. Jacksonport, Wis.: 1874—Congregation organized and church built by Father Rhode.

Bear Creek, Wis.: 1860—St. Mary's parish organized and church built; 1875—location of church changed and new church built; 1887—church blown down by a tornado, being almost entirely destroyed; church rebuilt the same year; 1889—parochial school and Sister's dwelling built.

Berlin, Wis.: 1851—First Mass celebrated, St. Joseph's congregation organized and church built; 1857—new church erected.

Berlin, Wis.: 1895—St. Michael's parish organized.

Briggsville, Wis.: 1851—St. Mary's Help of the Christians organized; 1887—parish incorporated.

Buchanan, Wis.: 1850—Congregation of the Holy Guardian Angels' organized; 1855—church erected; 1857—church dedicated and Sacrament of Confirmation conferred; 1864—parsonage built; 1871—present church erected; 1883—parochial school established.

Carlton, Wis.: 1878—St. Joseph's congregation organized. West Kewaunee, Wis.: 1864—St. John Nepomuc's mission established.

Chilton, Wis.: 1850—Mission of St. Augustine established; 1855—first church built by Father de Becke; 1879—second church built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Chilton, Wis.: 1878—Church of St. Mary's built; also school and residence; 1883—parish incorporated.

Clark's Mills, Wis.: 1865—Immaculate Conception congregation established; 1875—new church built; 1878—parsonage built; 1883—school and Sisters' residence built; 1885—parish incorporated.

Clintonville, Wis.: 1871—St. Rose of Lima's congregation established and church built; 1885—parish incorporated; 1893—present church erected.

Coleman, Wis.: 1881—St. John the Baptist congregation organized; 1884—first church built; 1889—new church erected; 1892—pastoral residence erected; 1882—mission of St. Charles Borromeo established by Father Bellmare; 1890—parish incorporated.

Cooperstown, Wis.: 1850—First church erected (St. James'); 1854—parish house built; 1871—new church erected; 1882—school established; 1883—parish incorporated; 1893—church unroofed by cyclone.

Custer, Wis.: 1874—Congregation of the Immaculate Conception organized and church built; 1857—congregation of St. Martin's at Sharon established; 1892—parish incorporated.

Delwich, Wis.: 1860—Church of St. Mary's built; 1890—school established; 1890—church rebuilt; 1894—school and Sisters' house built; 1869—mission of St. Francis de Padua established at Marchand by Father Daems; 1880—mission of St. Francis Xavier established at Brussels; 1896—parish incorporated.

De Pere, Wis.: 1883—St. Boniface church built; 1885—parsonage erected; 1893—school house built; 1893—parish incorporated.

De Pere, Wis.: 1857—St. Francis Xavier's congregation established; 1883—congregation incorporated.

West De Pere, Wis.: 1870—St. Joseph's church built; 1870-73—parsonage built and bell purchased; 1889—new church built and Archconfraternity established; 1890—congregation incorporated.

De Pere, Wis.: 1869—St. Mary's congregation established; 1896—parish incorporated.

Duck Creek, Wis.: 1849—St. John's congregation organized and church built; 1877—new church erected and school built; 1886—parish incorporated; 1894—pastor's house destroyed by fire; 1888—St. Leo's parochial school established.

Dykesville, Wis.: 1863—St. Louis' church built; 1888—second church built.

Eagle River, Wis.: 1890—St. Peter's church erected and blessed by the Rt. Rev. F. X. Katzer, Bishop of Green Bay; 1891—school building erected; 1894—St. John's congregation at Eagle River established.

Eaton, Wis.: 1872—Flemish and Walloon congregation of the Immaculate Conception established and church built; 1884—parish incorporated.

Flintville, Wis.: 1886—SS. Edward and Isidore's mission incorporated; 1895—SS. Edward and Isidore's congregation organized and church built.

Florence, Wis.: 1881—Immaculate Conception congregation organized; 1884—congregation incorporated; 1892—church built.

Francis Creek, Wis.: 1848—St. Ann's congregation organized by Father Joseph Brunner; 1869—Holy Cross mission at Mishicot established.

Franklin, Wis.: 1862—St. Lawrence congregation organized and church built; 1877—parsonage built; 1874—mission of St. Mary of the Seven Dolors established; 1877—church built; 1873—mission of St. Wenceslaus, Montpelier, established and church built.

Freedom, Wis.: 1851—First church erected; 1861—parsonage built; 1865—parochial school established; 1870—new church erected and school house built; 1883—congregation incorporated; 1891—Sisters' house built.

Glenmore, Wis.: 1850—First Mass celebrated; 1874—church erected; 1886—church rebuilt; church of the Assumption of the B. V. M. built at Stark.

Grand Rapids, Wis.: 1857—SS. Peter and Paul's congregation organized; 1886—school opened; parish incorporated.

Greenville, Wis.: 1855—Immaculate Conception congregation organized and first Mass celebrated; 1865—church erected. Stephensville, Wis.: 1860—congregation of St. Patrick's organized by Father Hermon.

Hilbert, Wis.: 1890—St. Mary's congregation organized and church built; 1894—parsonage erected.

Hofa Park, Wis.: 1884—Congregation of St. Stanislaus established.

Holland, Wis.: 1848—St. Francis Seraph's congregation founded; 1884—parish incorporated.

Hortonville, Wis.: 1870—Frame church erected and parsonage built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1892—present church built; 1898—new priest's house built.

Hull, Wis.: 1871—St. Casimir's congregation organized; 1877—new church built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1888—parochial school built.

Jericho, Wis.: 1871—Holy Trinity congregation established; 1880—new church erected by Father Gasper.

Kaukauna, Wis.: 1869—Holy Cross church built; 1873—church dedicated; 1877—new parsonage built; 1877—school established; 1883—parish incorporated.

South Kaukauna, Wis.: 1885—St. Mary's church organized by Father Rhode; same year school established; 1885—parish incorporated; 1887—pastoral residence erected.

Kellnersville, Wis.: 1852—St. Joseph's congregation organized; 1896—school built by Father Maly; 1862—church built at Kossuthtown.

Keshena, Wis.: 1670—First Catholic mission established at Keshena; 1700—mission abandoned; 1820—mission reorganized; 1829—confirmation services held by Father Badin; 1883—school established at Keshena; 1884—school burned; 1885—new school and shanty church built; 1886—new church built; 1891—Sisters' house destroyed by fire; new church erected at Oconto; 1892-93—church built at Kenepowa; 1895—church at Keshena improved.

Kewaunee, Wis.: 1863—Holy Rosary church built; 1871—school completed; 1883—new church built; parish incorporated; 1890—new parsonage built.

Kilbourn City, Wis.: 1850—St. Caecilia's congregation founded; 1866-68—church built.

Kingston, Wis.: 1876—Congregation of the Immaculate Conception established and church built; mission at Buffalo attached.

Lanark, Wis.: 1890—St. Patrick's parish established and church built.

Lebanon, Wis.: 1856—St. Patrick's church erected; 1865—new church built; missions attached: St. Bridget's (English), at Northport, and SS. Peter and Paul's (German), at Weyauwega.

Lincoln, Wis.: 1857—St. Peter's congregation established and church built; 1897—parish incorporated.

Little Chute, Wis.: 1834—St. John Nepomucene's congregation founded by Father Van den Broek.

Luxemberg, Wis.: 1862—Congregation of St. Mary's organized; 1864—first church built; 1875—church built by French Canadians; 1881—parochial school established; 1884—new church built by Father Praesser; parish incorporated.

Manawa, Wis.: 1874—Sacred Heart church built by Father Annen; 1890—mission of St. Mary Magdalen at Waupaca City organized; 1894—present church at Manawa built; 1896—parish incorporated.

Maple Grove, Wis.: 1850—St. Patrick's congregation organized; 1861—first church built; 1879—second church built; 1883—congregation incorporated.

Marinette, Wis.: 1893—Congregation of the Sacred Heart founded by the Rev. J. J. Fox; parish incorporated the same year.

Marinette, Wis.: 1868—Our Lady of Lourdes' congregation founded; 1871—church destroyed by fire; 1876—church rebuilt by Father Pernin and school established; 1881—St. Mary's institute established by Sisters of Notre Dame.

Marinette, Wis.: 1887—St. Joseph's parish incorporated; 1890—French Catholic church of St. Joseph built; 1891—new church built; 1893—school established.

Martinsville, Wis.: 1878—St. Martin's congregation established; 1883—parish incorporated; missions at Robinsonville and Walhain attached.

Menasha, Wis.: 1888—St. John the Baptist (Polish) congregation established; 1888—parsonage built and parochial school established, in charge of Sisters of St. Francis; 1889—parish incorporated.

Menasha, Wis.: 1848—Regular mission established; 1853—first church erected; 1882—church on Doty Island destroyed by fire; rebuilt same year; 1883—parish incorporated; 1884—new church built and patron of the old church changed to St. Patrick.

Menasha, Wis.: 1867—St. Mary's congregation organized; 1867—parochial school established and parsonage built; 1883—church destroyed by fire; rebuilt the same year; parish incorporated.

Merrill, Wis.: 1884—St. Francis Xavier church built; 1885—parish incorporated; mission at Bloomville attached.

Montello, Wis.: 1856—brick church built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1889—present St. John's church built.

Morrison, Wis.: 1855—First Mass celebrated; 1860—first church built; 1868—new church erected; 1871—parsonage built; 1883—church, school and parsonage destroyed by fire; 1884—new church erected; parish incorporated.

Neshkoro, Wis.: 1874—Congregation of St. James organized and church built.

New Franken, Wis.: 1862—St. Kilian's congregation established; 1883—parish incorporated.

New London, Wis.: 1855—Most Precious Blood congregation organized; 1881—school house built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1886—parsonage built; 1861—mission of SS. Peter and Paul at Hortonville established.

Oconto, Wis.: 1870—St. Joseph's congregation organized; 1874 school erected; 1884—parish incorporated.

Oconto, Wis.: 1844—St. Peter's congregation established; 1857 first church erected; 1883—parish incorporated; 1886—parochial school built.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1850—St. Mary's congregation organized by Father Fusseder; 1858—church built by German Catholics; 1865—pastoral residence built; 1871—parish school established; 1883—parish incorporated; 1889-92—new church built.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1851—St. Peter's parish established; 1885—parish incorporated.

Peshtigo, Wis.: 1847—Congregation of St. Mary's established; 1871—partially completed church destroyed by fire; rebuilt the same year. Porterfield: 1893—Mission established.

Phlox, Wis.: 1877—St. Joseph's congregation organized; 1881—log church built; 1882—school house erected; 1889—stone basement built under church; 1892—entire church structure veneered.

Pike Lake, Wis.: 1886—Polish congregation of St. Stanislaus organized by Father Grabowski.

Pilot Knob, Wis.: 1884—Church erected; mission at Friendship established; 1896—mission at Plover established; 1897—parsonage at Pilot Knob erected; 1898—mission at Plainfield established.

Pine Grove, Wis.: 1880—Holy Trinity congregation established and church built; parish incorporated.

Polonia, Wis.: 1855—Sacred Heart of Jesus congregation organized; 1863—first church built; 1879—church destroyed by fire; rebuilt the same year; 1880—church and parsonage and school destroyed by fire; rebuilt in 1881; 1883—parish incorporated.

Portage, Wis.: 1877—St. Francis Xavier's congregation established; 1886—parish incorporated.

Portage, Wis.: 1833—St. Mary's church erected by Peter Pauquette; 1886—parish incorporated.

Poygan, Wis.: 1873—St. Thomas' congregation organized.

Preble, Wis.: 1868—Congregation of the Holy Martyrs of Gorcum established; 1883—new church built and parish incorporated; 1886—priest's house built.

Princeton, Wis.: 1875—Polish congregation of St. John the Baptist organized; 1879—parsonage built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1892—Sisters' house built.

Pulaski, Wis.: 1887—April 27, congregation of the Assumption of the B. V. M. organized; 1887—monastery of Pulaski founded.

Reedsville, Wis.: 1866—Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary congregation organized; 1881—new church erected; 1886—school established; Catholic Knights of Wisconsin established; 1889— branch of the Third Order of St. Francis organized; 1891—parsonage built; 1895—new school house erected.

Rhinelander, Wis.: 1888—St. Mary's church built; 1892—parsonage erected and parish incorporated; 1895—Hospital of St. Mary's in charge of Sisters of the Dolorous Mother erected.

Rosiere, Wis.: 1866—Congregation of St. Hubert organized; 1871—church destroyed by fire; rebuilt same year; 1881—mission of St. Michael's established.

St. John, Wis.: 1862—St. John the Baptist congregation organized; 1870—new church erected.

Sevastopol, Wis.: 1883—SS. Peter and Paul's congregation organized; 1884—parish incorporated.

Seymour, Wis.: 1874—St. John the Baptist church erected; 1876—parochial school established and building erected.

Shawano, Wis.: 1862—First Mass celebrated by the Rev. John Martin Henni, who also baptized the first child in that place; 1863—congregation established and first church built at Shawano; 1889—new church built and parish incorporated; missions attached: Gresham, Leopolis, Waukechon, Gillet and Cecil; chapels erected at Gresham, Leopolis and Waukechon.

Sherwood, Wis.: 1866—Sacred Heart church built; 1871—new church erected.

Slovan, Wis.: 1857—Holy Trinity congregation organized; 1865—the building of the present church begun; 1876—a presbytery added to the church; 1881—Alasca given to Slovan as a mission.

Stevens Point, Wis.: 1863—Church erected; 1884—St. Joseph's German church erected; 1885—parish incorporated; 1890-93—school house erected.

Stevens Point, Wis.: 1876—St. Peter's (Polish) congregation established; 1883—parish incorporated.

Stevens Point, Wis.: 1839—St. Stephen's congregation organized by Father Godhart; 1863—first church built; 1873—St. Joseph's church founded; 1883—parish incorporated; 1893—school house erected.

Stiles, Wis.: 1885—St. Patrick's parish established; 1873—mission of St. John the Baptist established at Gillet.

Stockbridge, Wis.: 1882—Congregation of St. Mary's organized by Father C. A. Alten; 1883—parish incorporated.

Sturgeon Bay, Wis.: 1865—St. Joseph's congregation established; 1866—first church built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Tish Mills, Wis.: 1860—Congregation of the Nativity of the B. V. M. established; 1893—this congregation became an independent parish.

Tomahawk, Wis.: 1891—St. Mary's parish incorporated; 1892—St. Mary's church erected; 1893—hospital erected.

Two Rivers, Wis.: 1889—Sacred Heart congregation founded.

Two Rivers, Wis.: 1851—St. Luke's parish organized; 1851-53—church erected; 1882—parish incorporated; 1891-93—new church erected.

Wausau, Wis.: 1851—St. Mary's congregation organized; 1871—new church erected; 1883—school house built and parish incorporated; 1892—second church built.

Wausau, Wis.: 1887—St. Michael's parish established; 1888—new church erected.

Wausaukee, Wis.: 1889—Congregation of St. Augustine organized and church built. Amberg: 1892—Mission of St. Elizabeth established; 1896—parish incorporated.

Whitelaw, Wis.: 1873—St. Michael's parish established and church built; 1881—parochial school established and conducted by Sisters of St. Francis; 1897—parish incorporated.

Wrightstown, Wis.: 1861—St. Paul's mission church built; 1883—parish incorporated; 1886—parsonage, school house, Sisters' house and church built by Father De Wilt.

Diocese of La Crosse (Parishes.)

La Crosse Wis.: 1863—St. Joseph's Cathedral congregation established; 1869—corner stone of the present church laid; 1883—tower built; 1884—tower clock and bells purchased, the erection of a parochial school begun and the parish incorporated; 1887—the congregation divided.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1885—Holy Cross congregation established and incorporated, and the church dedicated.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1887—St. James' church completed and dedicated, and the parish incorporated.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1887—St. John the Baptist's Catholic congregation incorporated; 1894—St. John's church completed and dedicated.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1856—St. Mary's church completed; Catholic school opened; 1863— St. Mary's congregation divided; 1872—parochial school completed; 1874-75—church erected; 1883—the parish incorporated—1886—St. Mary's parish again divided; 1888—priest's house erected.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1887—Holy Trinity German congregation established and church built; 1892—new church built and dedicated; 1893—the parish incorporated; 1894—new parsonage erected; 1895-96—addition made to the interior furnishings.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1873—St. Wenceslaus' congregation established; 1883—the parish incorporated.

Arcadia, Wis.: 1864—Congregation of Our Lady of Perpetual Help organized; 1866-68—first church built in Meyer's Valley; 1883—first church in Arcadia built; mission at Glencoe, Buffalo County, attached; 1857—this mission established; 1858—small church erected at Glencoe; 1868—present church erected; 1890—congregation incorporated.

Ashland, Wis.: 1874—Erection of St. Agnes' church begun; 1879—church plastered and provided with pews; 1880—a steeple added and a bell purchased; 1881—a parochial school established; 1882—an addition added to the church; 1885—parish incorporated; 1886-88—a new church erected: 1892—a high altar added to furnishings; 1894-95—a new school erected.

Athens, Wis.: 1896—Holy Redeemer congregation established and incorporated.

Auburndale, Wis.: 1878—Congregation of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin Mary established; 1880—church erected; 1887—school erected; mission at Sherry attached.

Baraboo, Wis.: 1859—St. Joseph's parish founded and a church purchased from the Congregationalists; 1874—the present St. Joseph's church erected; 1885—parish incorporated.

Bayfield, Wis.: 1860—Christ church congregation established; and church erected.

Big River, Wis.: 1861—Congregation of the Nativity of the B. V. M. established; 1862—a log church completed; 1873—a new church completed; 1874—a priest's house erected; 1881—Sisters' house built, mission at Prescott attached; 1895—parish incorporated.

Bloomer, Wis.: 1884—St. Paul's parish established; 1884-88—parsonage erected and parochial school established; mission at Brush Prairie attached; 1887—parish incorporated.

Boyd, Wis.: 1890—St. Joseph's congregation established; 1894—church and school house built; 1895—parish incorporated.

Cazenovia, Wis.: 1855—The first child is said to have been baptized at Cazenovia; 1857—the first Mass celebrated; 1864—the first church erected; 1866—the parsonage erected; 1867—a parochial school established; 1883—parish incorporated; 1884—a new church erected; 1885—a new parsonage erected; missions at Westford and Irontown attached.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.: 1884—St. Charles Borromeo's congregation established; 1887—parish incorporated.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.: 1886—Congregation of the Holy Ghost established; 1887—parish incorporated.

Chippewa Falls, Wis.: 1856—The erection of a church begun, but before completed was blown down by a wind storm; 1857—erection of the church completed; 1860—parochial school opened; 1870—Notre Dame church erected; 1885—the Germans organized a separate congregation; Notre Dame parish incorporated; 1890—the corner stone of St. Joseph's hospital laid; death of Father Goldsmith.

Clayfield, Wis.: 1863—A mission established at Clayfield and a log church built; 1870—Bishop Heiss confirmed fifty-four in this parish; mission of St. Francis at Ellsworth attached; 1895—parish of Our Lady of Perpetual Help incorporated.

Colby, Wis.: 1886—St Kilian's congregation organized; 1889—the church completed and dedicated; mission at Milladore attached.

Cumberland, Wis.: 1885—St. Mary's congregation incorporated; 1887—church completed and dedicated; the Italian members withdrew and organized a separate congregation; missions at Shell Lake, Spooner and Almena attached.

Durand, Wis.: 1860—St. Mary's congregation established; 1876—a new parsonage erected; 1885—a church completed and dedicated; mission church built at Plum City; 1886—St. Peter's Aid Society established and St. Aloysius' school blessed by Bishop Flasch; mission church in Lima, dedicated; 1897—parish incorporated.

East Farmington, Wis.: 1884—Parish of the Assumption of the B. V. M. established.

Eau Claire, Wis.: 1875—Sacred Heart congregation organized; 1875-77—parsonage and school built; 1880—the erection of a church begun and the school enlarged; 1886—the parish of the Sacred Heart of Jesus incorporated.

Eau Claire, Wis.: 1865—St. Patrick's congregation organized; 1884—parish incorporated.

Eau Galle, Wis.: 1856—St. Henry's congregation established; 1884—congregation incorporated.

Elroy, Wis.: 1877—St. Patrick's congregation organized and the first church built; 1885—the parish incorporated.

Erin Prairie, Wis.: 1860—A small frame church built; 1864—the erection of a parsonage begun; 1866—the erection of St. Patrick's church begun; 1867—the unfinished church destroyed by fire 1869—the new church completed; 1884—a mission church erected at Cylon.

Fifield, Wis.: 1888—Congregation of St. Francis of Assissi established and the present church erected; 1890—a parsonage erected; missions at Glidden and Butternut, Ashland County, attached.

Fountain City, Wis.: 1860—A brick church built; 1867-76—a school built and the erection of a new church begun; 1883—the parish incorporated; 1887—the Free School system introduced.

Hammond, Wis.: 1876—Immaculate Conception congregation organized; 1889—the parish of St. Bridget's at Wilson attached.

Hewitt, Wis.: 1883—St. Michael's parsonage built at Hewitt; 1889—Hewitt became a mission of Marshfield; 1891—it again received a resident pastor and a church erected; 1892—the parish incorporated; 1894—the interior of the church frescoed; 1898—the school house and Sisters' residence built.

Hudson, Wis.: 1855—The first Mass celebrated; 1856—the first resident pastor sent to this place; 1874—St. Patrick's church completed; 1883—the parish incorporated.

Hurley Wis.: 1886—St. Mary's congregation established; 1890-91—a parochial school erected.

Independence, Wis.: 1875—SS. Peter and Paul's congregation established and a parsonage erected; 1886—a brick school house completed and dedicated; 1888—congregation incorporated; 1889—a new parsonage erected; 1895-96—a new church erected.

Junction City, Wis.: 1888—St. Michael's church built; 1897—the parish incorporated; mission of Holy Rosary at Sigel attached.

Keyesville, Wis.: 1859—Congregation of the Nativity of the B. V. M. established; 1864—this parish received its first resident pastor; 1869—a parochial school established; 1883—the parish incorporated.

Lyndon Station, Wis.: 1851—The first Mass celebrated at this place by Father Gaertner; 1853—St. Bridget's church erected; 1856-58—parsonage erected; 1860—St. Mary's church built; 1883—parish incorporated.

Marathon City, Wis.: 1863—St. Mary's church established; 1883—the parish incorporated under the title of the congregation of the Nativity of the B. V. M.

Marble Ridge, Wis.: 1865—St. Patrick's church built; 1869—church dedicated; 1872—new church erected; 1887—the churches at Marble Ridge and Keyesville destroyed by fire; 1888—the erection of a new church begun.

Marshfield, Wis.: 1874—The first services conducted; 1880—St. John the Baptist's church built; 1882—the church blessed and dedicated, and a school and parsonage erected; 1883—the congregation incorporated; 1888—a brick school erected; 1896-98—a new school erected.

Mauston, Wis.: 1857—St. Patrick's church organized and church built; 1877-85—a new church and parsonage erected; 1884—the parish incorporated; mission at Mariontown attached.

Medford, Wis.: 1877—Holy Rosary congregation organized and a parochial residence purchased; 1889—a parochial school opened in the old church building; 1890—the parish incorporated; 1890-92—a school house erected; 1893—the old school building and parsonage sold and a new parsonage erected.

Menomonie, Wis.: 1861—St. Joseph's congregation established and a small frame church erected; 1874—a parsonage erected; 1877—the erection of a church begun; 1884—the parish incorporated; 1890—the erection of a parochial school begun; the Sisters of the Sorrowful Mother established a hospital at Menomonie.

Mill Creek, Wis.: 1883—St. Bartholomew's church erected; 1891—the congregation received its first resident pastor; 1891-93—a parsonage erected and six acres of land purchased; 1894—Holy Rosary Society established; 1895—Society of the Sacred Heart of Jesus established.

Mondovi, Wis.: 1896—Sacred Heart Congregation established and a church erected; mission at Canton attached.

Mosinee, Wis.: 1874-75—St. Paul's church erected; 1886—the parish incorporated; 1895—church enlarged and renovated.

Necedah, Wis.: 1876—St. Francis of Assissi's congregation organized; 1892—the parish incorporated; mission of St. Paul's at New Lisbon attached.

Neillsville, Wis.: 1878—St. Mary's congregation established and a church erected; 1884—the first parsonage erected and the parish incorporated; 1887—a parochial school established and a school house built built; mission of St. Joseph's at Black River Falls attached.

New Richmond, Wis.: 1883—The congregation of the Immaculate Conception incorporated; 1890—the parish records destroyed by fire.

North Creek, Wis.: 1875—St. Michael's congregation organized; 1883—the congregation incorporated; 1888—a parochial school erected; 1890-92—a Sisters' house built.

Phillips, Wis.: 1888—St. Patrick's congregation organized and incorporated and a church erected; 1890—the congregation received its first resident pastor; 1894—a disastrous fire almost destroyed the city of Phillips; 1895—a new parsonage erected and a temporary building for a church purchased; mission at Prentice attached.

Pine Creek, Wis.: 1864—St. Wenceslaus' congregation established; 1876—the congregation received its first resident pastor; 1885—parish incorporated.

Pine Hollow, Wis.: 1867—SS. Peter and Paul's church organized; 1868—the first church erected; 1875—the church destroyed by a tornado; 1876-77—a new church erected; 1892-93—parochial school built; mission of St. Patrick's at Clinton attached.

Plain, Wis.: 1858—First Mass said; 1861—St. Luke's church built and dedicated; 1875—a stone parsonage erected; 1887-91—a new parsonage erected and a parochial school established in the old parsonage; 1894—a new school erected and an addition built to the church.

Plum City, Wis.: 1871—First Mass celebrated; 1883—St. John the Baptist's church erected; 1894—the parish received its first resident pastor; 1894-95—a pastoral residence erected.

Poniatowski, Wis.: 1877—Holy Family congregation first visited by a priest; 1883—the first resident pastor appointed; 1885—the parsonage destroyed by fire; 1886—a new parsonage erected; 1887—the parish incorporated; 1891—the present church built; 1892—a parochial school erected.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.: 1817—St. Gabriel's congregation supposed to have been established; 1836—a new church built; 1874—a parsonage erected; 1883—the parish incorporated; 1892—a brick school house erected.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.: 1891—St. John Nepomuc's congregation established and a frame church and parsonage erected; 1893—the parish incorporated; mission of St. Wenceslaus at Eastman attached.

Rice Lake, Wis.: 1880—St. Joseph's congregation established; 1890—a parochial school organized; 1891—the parish incorporated.

Richland Center, Wis.: 1858—First Mass celebrated; 1866—a small church erected; 1872—church enlarged; 1886—the congregation received its first resident pastor; 1887—a building purchased to be used as a parsonage; 1891-92—St. Mary's new church erected; 1892—parish incorporated.

Rising Sun, Wis.: 1868—St. James' church erected; 1870—the first resident pastor appointed; 1883—parish incorporated.

River Falls, Wis.: 1878—St. Bridget's church (frame) erected; 1883—parish incorporated; 1887-91—a new parsonage erected; 1890—the erection of a new church begun.

Rozellville, Wis.: 1893—The first resident pastor appointed to St. Andrew's congregation; 1894—the parish incorporated; 1897—new church completed; mission of Holy Trinity at Weber's P. O. attached.

Rudolph, Wis.: 1884—St. Philomena's congregation organized; 1885—a parochial school established.

St. Joseph's Ridge, Wis.: 1866—St. Joseph's congregation established; 1869—new church erected; 1873—a school house and parsonage erected; 1887—the congregation incorporated; mission of St. Peter's Ridge attached.

St. Mary's, Wis.: 1856—St. Mary's congregation organized; 1865—the first parsonage erected; 1883—the parish incorporated; 1889—parochial school erected; 1897—new church completed.

St. Philip's, Wis.: 1859-62—St. Philip's church erected; 1870—a new church built; 1872—the church dedicated and a pastoral residence erected; 1881—parochial school erected.

Sauk City, Wis.: 1844—St. Aloysius' congregation established; 1869—the present church erected; 1883—the parish incorporated.

Seneca, Wis.: 1874—St. Patrick's congregation organized and a church erected; 1886—parish incorporated.

Somerset, Wis.: 1856—St. Vincent de Paul's church erected; 1873—a parsonage erected; 1874-75—new church built; 1888—a school built and the church enlarged; 1896—the interior furnishings added to.

Stanfold, Wis.: 1870—Our Lady of Lourdes' congregation established; 1876—the first resident pastor appointed; 1883—parish incorporated; 1895—the church and adjacent buildings destroyed by fire.

Stanton, Wis.: 1875—St. Bridget's congregation organized.

Superior, Wis.: 1882—St. Francis Xavier church erected; 1883 a parochial school built; 1884—the interior furnishings of the church added to; 1889—Sisters' residence and St. Francis hospital erected; 1895—parish incorporated.

Tilden, Wis.: 1859—St. Peter's church built; 1869—the first resident pastor appointed; 1869-70—the parsonage erected; 1871-74—parochial school established and a school building erected; 1875—a new church erected; 1885—the present school house built; 1887—parish incorporated.

Turtle Lake, Wis.: 1884—St. Ann's church erected; 1890-94—a parochial residence erected; 1892—the parish incorporated; 1896—stone foundation built under the church and the church and parsonage repaired..

Union Center, Wis.: 1860—St. Theresa's congregation established.

Washburn, Wis.: 1887—St. Louis' church incorporated; 1890—a new church erected; 1891—a parochial school opened; 1891-92—a Sisters' house erected.

Waumandee, Wis.: 1867—St. Boniface's congregation organized; 1877—a church erected; 1884—the parish incorporated.

West Superior, Wis.: 1886—Sacred Heart congregation organized; 1887—a church erected; 1889—the parish incorporated; 1887-90—a school erected; 1890-91—parsonage erected and the church and school enlarged.

West Superior, Wis.: 1895—St. Joseph's congregation established and incorporated; 1896—church and school erected.

Wilton, Wis.: 1875—The congregation of St. John the Baptist established and a church erected; 1880—mission at Kendall established; 1892—the parish incorporated; 1896—the church struck by lightning; 1896-97—a new church erected.

Archdiocese of Milwaukee (Institutions.)

St Francis, Wis.: 1855-56—Seminary of St. Francis of Sales erected; 1873—German Debating Society organized; 1874—death of Rev. Joseph Salzmann; 1875—addition erected to Seminary.

St. Francis, Wis.: 1870—The Catholic Normal School and Pio Nono College founded; 1870-71—school building built and dedicated.

St. Francis, Wis.: 1847—The Convent of the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis established; 1863—the ceremony of making the vows and taking the veil took place; 1873—removal of a number of the Sisters to La Crosse; 1887-88—new large brick building erected; 1894-95—chapel erected.

St. Francis, Wis.: 1854—The first building of the St. Aemilianus Orphan Asylum erected; 1873—a large brick building erected; 1878—a Boys' Home established; 1885—an addition added to the building; 1889—the entire building enlarged; 1895—all of the buildings except one destroyed by fire; 1896—a new building erected.

St. Francis, Wis.: 1876—St. John's Institute for Deaf Mutes organized.

St. Francis, Wis.: 1869—The Capuchin Convent of St. Francis of Seraph's organized; 1873—the first Chapter held at Mt. Calvary.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1850—First arrival of the Sisters of Notre Dame in Milwaukee, and the location of the Mother-house there; 1851—first parochial school opened by Mother Caroline; 1897—the School Sisters celebrated their Golden Jubilee.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1843—The Order of Mercy first introduced into the United States; 1870—the Order established in Wisconsin; 1894—the Mother-house transferred from Fond du Lac to Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1876—The Little Sisters of the Poor first came to Milwaukee; 1877-78—the Sisters' building on Twentieth and Wells streets erected; 1884—chapel built.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1880—The corner-stone of Marquette College laid; 1884—the college incorporated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1892—Holy Angels' Academy dedicated; 1897—the erection of a new building commenced.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1893—Sacred Heart Sanitarium erected and dedicated.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1873—The School Sisters of St. Francis established their home in Wisconsin; 1874—the first parochial school opened; 1880—an addition built to St. Joseph's Convent; 1890—convent destroyed by fire; 1891—a new structure erected.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1879—St. Joseph's Hospital established; 1883—the hospital erected; 1885-86—a number of improvements added to the property; 1892—another building erected; 1894 and 1897—additions added to the building.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1895—St. Mary's Convent of the Society of the Divine Savior established.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1856—St. Mary's Hospital founded.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1846—The first Sisters of Charity came to Milwaukee and took charge of the parochial school; 1847—they removed to their new home; 1848—St. Rose's Orphan Asylum began its existence; 1852—the Orphan Asylum erected; 1853—a fair held to defray expenses; 1887—the present St. Rose's Orphan Asylum built at North Point.

Milwaukee, Wis.: 1877—St. Vincent's Infant Asylum founded; 1879—a new building erected; 1890-91—an addition added to the building.

Alverno, Wis.: 1869—Holy Family Convent established; 1870-71—a new building erected; 1881—the convent struck by lightning; 1881-82—a new convent erected; 1889-90—a new building added to the convent.

Fond du Lac, Wis.: 1870—Congregation of the Sisters of St. Agnes established; 1877—a new convent erected; 1887-88—a chapel erected; 1895—96—St. Agnes Hospital and Sanitarium erected.

Granville Center, Wis.: 1892-93—Servite Monastery of Mt. St. Philip erected.

Janesville, Wis.: 1873—St. Joseph's Convent of the Sisters of Mercy established.

Madison, Wis.: 1881—Sacred Heart Academy established; 1893-94—the present academy erected.

Madison, Wis.: 1871—St. Regina's Convent established.

Mt. Calvary, Wis.: 1857—The corner-stone of the Capuchin Monastery laid; 1861—a school opened; 1864—the school inaugurated as a college; 1868—the church and convent almost destroyed by fire; 1868-69—a new monastery erected.

Mt. Calvary, Wis.: 1857—The corner-stone of the Collegium Laurentium laid; 1862—the log church replaced by a new and larger building; 1868—the buildings destroyed by fire; 1869-70—a new college erected; 1872—St. Joseph's Hall built; 1885—chapel erected.

Racine, Wis.: 1862—St. Catherine's Convent founded; 1864—a day and parochial school opened; 1865—a chapel erected.

Sheboygan, Wis.: 1890—St. Nicholas Hospital established.

Sinsinawa Mound, Wis.: 1846—Convent of St. Clara founded; 1852—the school at Benton chartered as St. Clara's Academy; 1881—the Convent of St. Clara visited by the Master-General of the Order.

Watertown, Wis.: 1872—Sacred Heart College founded; 1874—the college incorporated.

Holy Hill, Wis.: 1862-63—A chapel erected; 1876—Holy Hill deeded to Archbishop Henni; the Way of the Cross established; 1879-81—a new church erected; 1880—a parsonage erected; 1889—a new set of stations built; 1892—the interior of the church improved.

Diocese of Green Bay (Institutions.)

Green Bay, Wis.: 1882—Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Refuge established; 1884—death of Mother Mary Jerome.

Green Bay, Wis.: 1877—St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum opened; 1894—new asylum erected; 1894-1896—additional land purchased.

Bay Settlement, Wis.: 1857—Convent of the Holy Cross established.

Bay Settlement, Wis.: 1867—St. Francis Convent founded; 1868—parochial school established.

Keshena, Wis.: 1883—Menomonee Institute established; 1886—Sisters of St. Joseph took charge of the Menomonee Hospital; 1887—parochial school opened.

Marinette, Wis.: 1876—St. Mary's Institute founded; 1890—corner-stone of the present building laid.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1884—Alexian Brothers' Hospital erected.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1894—St. Mary's Hospital erected.

Robinsonville, Wis.: 1880—Chapel of the Secular Sisters of St. Francis erected; 1885—convent erected.

Sevastopol, Wis.: 1892—St. Aloysius Institute erected.

Diocese of La Crosse (Institutions.)

La Crosse, Wis.: 1849—Convent of the Sisters of the Perpetual Adoration established at Jefferson; 1865—St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent established; 1870-71—convent erected at La Crosse; 1872—chapel erected; 1874—chapel dedicated under the title of "Mary of the Angels;" 1878—Chapel of Perpetual Adoration built; 1882—death of Mother M. Antonia; 1886—death of Rev. F. X. Obermueller, chaplain of the convent; 1892—convent enlarged.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1889—St. Ann's Orphan Asylum erected.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1883—St. Francis Hospital erected; 1886—hospital enlarged; 1891 and 1896—additions built.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1875—St. Michael's Orphan Asylum established.

Ashland, Wis.: 1884—St. Joseph's Hospital founded; 1885-88—new hospital erected.

Bayfield, Wis.: 1877—St. Mary's Industrial School established.

Marshfield, Wis.: 1890—St. Joseph's Sanitarium established; 1894—new structure erected.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.: 1880—College of the Sacred Heart established.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.: 1872—St. Mary's Institute founded.

West Superior, Wis.: 1894—St. Mary's Hospital established.

PAGE.

Chippewa Falls—St. Charles Borromeo's Parish..... 790-1
Chippewa Falls—Holy Ghost Parish 791-2
Chippewa Falls, Notre Dame Parish 792-801
Clayfield, Our Lady of Perpetual Help Parish..... 801
Clevelandtown, St. Joseph's Parish. 801-2
Colby, St. Kilian's Parish..... 802-3
Cumberland, St. Mary's Parish..... 803-5
Dorchester, St. Louis' Parish..... 805
Durand, St. Mary's Parish..... 805-6
East Farmington, Assumption of the B. V. M. Parish..... 806
Eau Claire, Sacred Heart Parish... 807-8
Eau Claire, St. Patrick's Parish... 808-9
Eau Galle, St. Henry's Parish..... 809
Elroy, St. Patrick's Parish..... 803-10
Erin, St. Patrick's Parish..... 810-12
Ettrick, St. Bridget's Parish..... 812-13
Fifield, St. Francis of Assisi's Parish..... 813-14
Fountain City, Immaculate Conception Parish..... 814-15
Genoa, St. Charles Barromeo's Parish..... 815
Hammond, Immaculate Conception Parish..... 816-17
Hewitt, St. Michael's Parish..... 817-18
Hudson, St. Michael's Parish..... 818-20
Hurley, St. Mary's Parish..... 820
Independence, SS. Peter and Paul's Parish..... 820-1
Junction City, St. Michael's Parish 821-22
Keyesville, Nativity of the B. V. M. Parish..... 822-23
Lyndon Station, St. Mary's Parish.. 823-25
Marathon City, St. Mary's Parish.. 825
Marble Ridge, St. Patrick's Parish. 825-28
Marshfield, St. John the Baptist's Parish..... 828-31
Mauston, St. Patrick's Parish..... 831-32
Medford, Holy Rosary Parish..... 832-33
Menomonie, St. Joseph's Parish.... 833-34
Mill Creek, St. Bartholomew's Parish..... 834-36
Minocqua, St. Patrick's Parish..... 836
Mondovi, Sacred Heart of Jesus Parish..... 836-37
Mosinee, St. Paul's Parish..... 837-38
Necedah, St. Francis of Assisi's Parish..... 839
Neillsville, St. Mary's Parish..... 839-40
New Richmond, Immaculate Conception Parish..... 840-41
Sith Creek, St. Michael's Parish. 841-842
St. Ips, St. Patrick's Parish..... 842-44
St. Treek, Most Sacred Heart and St. Wenceslaus' Parish..... 844
St. Patlow, SS. Peter and Paul's SS. Pete..... 844-45
St. Rose'ake's Parish..... 845-46
St. StanisSt. John the Baptist's St. Vincent..... 846-49
St. Wenceslaus Family Parish.. 849-50
t's Parish..... 850
CSt. Gabriel's Parish..... 850-54
In t' John Nepomish 854-55
Addison, SS. Peter a. Parish... 855-56
Alverno, St. Joseph's Par'h..... 856
Ashford, St. Martin's Parish..h 856-58
Ashton, St. Peter's Parish..... 858
Barton, Immaculate Conception... 859-61
Beaver Dam, St. Michael's Parish.. 861
Beaver Dam, St. Patrick's Parish... 862
Beaver Dam, St. Peter's Parish....3 63
Belgium, St. Mary's Parish.....36
Beloit Road, St. Mathias' Parish....36 64
Beloit, St. Thomas' Parish.....
Benton, St. Patrick's Parish.....37

PAGE.

St. Philip's, St. Philip's Parish..... 864-65
Sauk City, St. Aloysius' Parish..... 865-66
Seneca, St. Patrick's Parish..... 866
Somerset, St. Vincent de Paul's Parish..... 866-68
Sparta, St. Patrick's Parish..... 868-69
Stanfold, Our Lady of Lourdes' Parish..... 869-70
Stanton, St. Bridget's Parish..... 870
Superior City, St. Francis Xavier's Parish..... 871-878
South Superior, St. Mary's Parish. 879-880
Tilden, St. Peter's Parish..... 880-81
Tomah, St. Mary's Parish..... 881-82
Turtle Lake, St. Ann's Parish..... 882-83
Union Center, St. Theresa's Parish. 883-84
Washburn, St. Louis' Parish..... 884-86
Waumandee, St. Boniface's Parish.. 886
West Superior, Sacred Heart Parish 886-88
West Superior, St. Joseph's Parish 888-89
Wilton, St. John the Baptist's Parish..... 889-90

PART VIII.

Churches incorporated in the Archdiocese of Milwaukee, and Dioceses of Green Bay and La Crosse 891-896

PART IX.

Catholic Institutions—Archdiocese of Milwaukee.

St. Francis, Provincial Seminary....896-905
St. Francis, Normal School and Pio Nono College..... 905-8
St. Francis, Convent of the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis 908-10
St. Francis, St. Aemilianus' Orphan Asylum..... 910-11
St. Francis, St. John's Institute for Deaf Mutes..... 911-18
Milwaukee, Capuchin Institutions in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and elsewhere..... 918-20
Milwaukee, Convent of the School Sisters of Notre Dame..... 920-1
Milwaukee, Girls' Home, Motherhouse of Sisters of Mercy..... 931-2
Milwaukee, Industrial School of Our Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd..... 932-5
Milwaukee, Little Sisters of the Poor 935-7
Milwaukee, Marquette College..... 937
Milwaukee, Our Lady of Angels Academy..... 937-8
Milwaukee, Sacred Heart Sanitarium..... 938
Milwaukee, St. Joseph's Convent.... 938-40
Milwaukee, St. Joseph's Hospital... 940-1
Milwaukee, St. Mary's Convent of the Society of the Divine Saviour 941-2
Milwaukee, St. Mary's Hospital..... 942-3
Milwaukee, St. Rose's Orphan Asylum..... 943
Milwaukee, St. Vincent's Infant Asylum..... 947
Alverno, Holy Family Convent..... 947-8
Fond du Lac, Congregation of the Sisters of St. Agnes.....948-950
Granville Center, Servite Monastery of Mt. St. Philip..... 951
Holy Hill..... 967-78
Janesville, St. Joseph's Convent of Sisters of Mercy..... 952
Madison, Sacred Heart Academy.... 952-3
Madison, St. Regina's Convent..... 953-4
Manitowoc, Holy Family Hospital.. 955
Mt. Calvary, Capuchin Order in Wisconsin..... 955-7
Mt. Calvary, Collegium Laurentium 958
Racine, St. Catherine's Convent.... 958-63

PAGE.

Sheboygan, St. Nicholas' Hospital.. 963
Sinsinawa Mound, Convent of St. Clara..... 963-6
Watertown, Sacred Heart College.. 966

PART X.

Catholic Institutions—Diocese of Green Bay.

Green Bay, Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Refuge..... 979-80
Green Bay, St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum..... 980-1
Bay Settlement, Convent of Holy Cross..... 981-3
Bay Settlement, St. Francis' Convent..... 983
Keshena, Menomonee Institute..... 983-5
Marinette, St. Mary's Institute.... 985-6
Oneida, Mission of St. Mary's..... 988-9
Oshkosh, Alexian Brothers' Hospital 986
Oshkosh, St. Mary's Hospital..... 986
Pulaski, Commissariate General of Polish Franciscan Fathers..... 987
Robinsonville, Convent of the Secular Sisters of St. Francis..... 987
Sevastopol, St. Aloysius' Institute.. 987-8

PART XI.

Catholic Institutions—Diocese of La Crosse

La Crosse, Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration..... 990-7
La Crosse, St. Ann's Orphan Asylum..... 997
La Crosse, St. Francis' Hospital.... 997-9
La Crosse, St. Michael's Orphan Asylum.....999-1000
Ashland, St. Joseph's Hospital..... 1000-1
Marshfield, St. Joseph's Sanitarium. 1001-2
Prairie du Chien, College of the Sacred Heart..... 1002-3
Prairie du Chien, St. Mary's Institute..... 1003-4
Springfield, Ill., Sisters of St. Francis of St. John's Hospital.....1004-14
West Superior, St. Mary's Hospital. 1014

PART XII.

Biographical Sketches of Former Pastors in Wisconsin.....1015-1058

PART XIII.

Catholic Orders in Wisconsin.

Chapter I.—Religious.

Capuchin Order.....1059-69
Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary..... 1060-4
Franciscans..... 1064-5
Jesuits..... 1065-7
Order of Praemonstratensians..... 1067-8
Servites..... 1068
Sisters of Charity 1068
Sisters of the Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ..... 1068-9
Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi..... 1069

Chapter II.—Secular.

Ancient Order of Hibernians..... 1070-2
Catholic Knights of Wisconsin..... 1072-5
Catholic Order of Foresters..... 1075-8
Catholic Total Abstinence Union...1078-80
German Roman Catholic Central Society..... 1080-5
Knights of St. George..... 1085
Leo's Benevolent Society..... 1085-6

PART XIV.

Prominent Members of the Laity in Wisconsin.....1087-1134

lished; 1879-81—a new church erected; 1880—a parsonage erected; 1889—a new set of stations built; 1892—the interior of the church improved.

Diocese of Green Bay (Institutions.)

Green Bay, Wis.: 1882—Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Refuge established; 1884—death of Mother Mary Jerome.

Green Bay, Wis.: 1877—St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum opened; 1894—new asylum erected; 1894-1896—additional land purchased.

Bay Settlement, Wis.: 1857—Convent of the Holy Cross established.

Bay Settlement, Wis.: 1867—St. Francis Convent founded; 1868—parochial school established.

Keshena, Wis.: 1883—Menomonee Institute established; 1886—Sisters of St. Joseph took charge of the Menomonee Hospital; 1887—parochial school opened.

Marinette, Wis.: 1876—St. Mary's Institute founded; 1890—corner-stone of the present building laid.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1884—Alexian Brothers' Hospital erected.

Oshkosh, Wis.: 1894—St. Mary's Hospital erected.

Robinsonville, Wis.: 1880—Chapel of the Secular Sisters of St. Francis erected; 1885—convent erected.

Sevastopol, Wis.: 1892—St. Aloysius Institute erected.

Diocese of La Crosse (Institutions.)

La Crosse, Wis.: 1849—Convent of the Sisters of the Perpetual Adoration established at Jefferson; 1865—St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent established; 1870-71—convent erected at La Crosse; 1872—chapel erected; 1874—chapel dedicated under the title of "Mary of the Angels;" 1878—Chapel of Perpetual Adoration built; 1882—death of Mother M. Antonia; 1886—death of Rev. F. X. Obermueller, chaplain of the convent; 1892—convent enlarged.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1889—St. Ann's Orphan Asylum erected.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1883—St. Francis Hospital erected; 1886—hospital enlarged; 1891 and 1896—additions built.

La Crosse, Wis.: 1875—St. Michael's Orphan Asylum established.

Ashland, Wis.: 1884—St. Joseph's Hospital founded; 1885-88—new hospital erected.

Bayfield, Wis.: 1877—St. Mary's Industrial School established.

Marshfield, Wis.: 1890—St. Joseph's Sanitarium established; 1894—new structure erected.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.: 1880—College of the Sacred Heart established.

Prairie du Chien, Wis.: 1872—St. Mary's Institute founded.

West Superior, Wis.: 1894—St. Mary's Hospital established.

.90

0-762
762-3
763-4
764-5
765-7
767-9
769-70

ıe.

of Perpetual ..... 771-2 s' Parish..... 774-6
ıy Redeemer Parish 781
., Nativity of the B. V.
arish..... 781-2
, St. Joseph's Parish..... 782-4 d, Christ's Church..... 784-5 iver, Nativity of the B. V. M. rish..... 785-7
mer, St. Paul's Parish..... 787-8
l, St. Joseph's Parish..... 788 movia, St. Anthony de Padua's arish..... 788-90

PAGE.

Chippewa Falls—St. Charles Borromeo's Parish..... 790-1
Chippewa Falls—Holy Ghost Parish 791-2
Chippewa Falls, Notre Dame Parish 792-801
Clayfield, Our Lady of Perpetual Help Parish..... 801
Clevelandtown, St. Joseph's Parish. 801-2
Colby, St. Kilian's Parish..... 802-3
Cumberland, St. Mary's Parish..... 803-5
Dorchester, St. Louis' Parish..... 805
Durand, St. Mary's Parish..... 805-6
East Farmington, Assumption of the B. V. M. Parish..... 806
Eau Claire, Sacred Heart Parish... 807-8
Eau Claire, St. Patrick's Parish... 808-9
Eau Galle, St. Henry's Parish..... 809
Elroy, St. Patrick's Parish..... 809-10
Erin, St. Patrick's Parish..... 810-12
Ettrick, St. Bridget's Parish..... 812-13
Fifield, St. Francis of Assissi's Parish..... 813-14
Fountain City, Immaculate Conception Parish..... 814-15
Genoa, St. Charles Barromeo's Parish..... 815
Hammond, Immaculate Conception Parish..... 816-17
Hewitt, St. Michael's Parish..... 817-18
Hudson, St. Michael's Parish..... 818-20
Hurley, St. Mary's Parish..... 820
Independence, SS. Peter and Paul's Parish..... 820-1
Junction City, St. Michael's Parish 821-22
Keyesville, Nativity of the B. V. M. Parish..... 822-23
Lyndon Station, St. Mary's Parish. 823-25
Marathon City, St. Mary's Parish.. 825
Marble Ridge, St. Patrick's Parish. 825-28
Marshfield, St. John the Baptist's Parish..... 828-31
Mauston, St. Patrick's Parish..... 831-32
Medford, Holy Rosary Parish..... 832-33
Menomonie, St. Joseph's Parish.... 833-34
Mill Creek, St. Bartholomew's Parish..... 834-36
Minocqua, St. Patrick's Parish..... 836
Mondovi, Sacred Heart of Jesus Parish..... 836-37
Mosinee, St. Paul's Parish..... 837-38
Necedah, St. Francis of Assissi's Parish..... 839
Neillsville, St. Mary's Parish..... 839-40
New Richmond, Immaculate Conception Parish..... 840-41
North Creek, St. Michael's Parish. 841-842
Phillips, St. Patrick's Parish..... 842-44
Pine Creek, Most Sacred Heart and St. Wenceslaus' Parish..... 844
Pine Hollow, SS. Peter and Paul's Parish..... 844-45
Plain, St. Luke's Parish..... 845-46
Plum City, St. John the Baptist's Parish..... 846-49
Poniatowski, Holy Family Parish.. 849-50
Posen, St. Hedwig's Parish..... 850
Prairie du Chien, St. Gabriel's Parish..... 850-54
Prairie du Chien, St. John Nepomucene's Parish..... 854-55
Reedsburg, Sacred Heart Parish... 855-56
Rice Lake, St. Joseph's Parish..... 856
Richland Center, St. Mary's Parish 856-58
Rising Sun, St. James' Parish..... 858
River Falls, St. Bridget's Parish... 859-61
Rozellville, St. Andrew's Parish... 861
Rudolph, St. Philomena's Parish.. 862
St. Joseph, St. Joseph's Parish.... 862-63
St. Mary's, Nativity of the B. V. M. Parish..... 863-64

PAGE.

St. Philip's, St. Philip's Parish..... 864-65
Sauk City, St. Aloysius' Parish..... 865-66
Seneca, St. Patrick's Parish..... 866
Somerset, St. Vincent de Paul's Parish..... 866-68
Sparta, St. Patrick's Parish..... 868-69
Stanfold, Our Lady of Lourdes' Parish..... 869-70
Stanton, St. Bridget's Parish..... 870
Superior City, St. Francis Xavier's Parish..... 871-878
South Superior, St. Mary's Parish.. 879-880
Tilden, St. Peter's Parish..... 880-81
Tomah, St. Mary's Parish..... 881-82
Turtle Lake, St. Ann's Parish..... 882-83
Union Center, St. Theresa's Parish. 883-84
Washburn, St. Louis' Parish..... 884-86
Waumandee, St. Boniface's Parish.. 886
West Superior, Sacred Heart Parish 886-88
West Superior, St. Joseph's Parish 888-89
Wilton, St. John the Baptist's Parish..... 889-90

PART VIII.

Churches incorporated in the Archdiocese of Milwaukee, and Dioceses of Green Bay and La Crosse 891-896

PART IX.

Catholic Institutions—Archdiocese of Milwaukee.

St. Francis, Provincial Seminary....896-905
St. Francis, Normal School and Pio Nono College..... 905-8
St. Francis, Convent of the Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis 908-10
St. Francis, St. Aemilianus' Orphan Asylum..... 910-11
St. Francis, St. John's Institute for Deaf Mutes..... 911-18
Milwaukee, Capuchin Institutions in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and elsewhere..... 918-20
Milwaukee, Convent of the School Sisters of Notre Dame..... 920-1
Milwaukee, Girls' Home, Motherhouse of Sisters of Mercy..... 931-2
Milwaukee, Industrial School of Our Lady of Charity of the Good Shepherd..... 932-5
Milwaukee, Little Sisters of the Poor 935-7
Milwaukee, Marquette College..... 937
Milwaukee, Our Lady of Angels Academy..... 937-8
Milwaukee, Sacred Heart Sanitarium..... 938
Milwaukee, St. Joseph's Convent.... 938-40
Milwaukee, St. Joseph's Hospital... 940-1
Milwaukee, St. Mary's Convent of the Society of the Divine Saviour 941-2
Milwaukee, St. Mary's Hospital..... 942-3
Milwaukee, St. Rose's Orphan Asylum..... 943
Milwaukee, St. Vincent's Infant Asylum..... 947
Alverno, Holy Family Convent..... 947-8
Fond du Lac, Congregation of the Sisters of St. Agnes.....948-950
Granville Center, Servite Monastery of Mt. St. Philip..... 951
Holy Hill..... 967-78
Janesville, St. Josoph's Convent of Sisters of Mercy..... 952
Madison, Sacred Heart Academy.... 952-3
Madison, St. Regina's Convent..... 953-4
Manitowoc, Holy Family Hospital.. 955
Mt. Calvary, Capuchin Order in Wisconsin..... 955-7
Mt. Calvary, Collegium Laurentium 958
Racine, St. Catherine's Convent.... 958-63

PAGE.

Sheboygan, St. Nicholas' Hospital.. 963
Sinsinawa Mound, Convent of St. Clara..... 963-6
Watertown, Sacred Heart College.. 966

PART X.

Catholic Institutions—Diocese of Green Bay.

Green Bay, Monastery of Our Lady of Charity of Refuge..... 978-80
Green Bay, St. Joseph's Orphan Asylum..... 980-1
Bay Settlement, Convent of Holy Cross..... 981-3
Bay Settlement, St. Francis' Convent..... 983
Keshena, Menomonee Institute..... 983-5
Marinette, St. Mary's Institute.... 985-6
Oneida, Mission of St. Mary's..... 986-9
Oshkosh, Alexian Brothers' Hospital 986
Oshkosh, St. Mary's Hospital..... 986
Pulaski, Commissariate General of Polish Franciscan Fathers..... 987
Robinsonville, Convent of the Secular Sisters of St. Francis..... 987
Sevastopol, St. Aloysius' Institute.. 987-8

PART XI.

Catholic Institutions—Diocese of La Crosse

La Crosse, Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration..... 990-7
La Crosse, St. Ann's Orphan Asylum..... 997
La Crosse, St. Michael's Orphan Hospital... 997-9
La Crosse, St. Michael's Orphan Asylum.....999-1000
Ashland, St. Joseph's Hospital..... 1000-1
Marshfield, St. Joseph's Sanitarium. 1001-2
Prairie du Chien, College of the Sacred Heart..... 1002-3
Prairie du Chien, St. Mary's Institute..... 1003-4
Springfield, Ill., Sisters of St. Francis of St. John's Hospital.....1004-14
West Superior, St. Mary's Hospital. 1014

PART XII.

Biographical Sketches of Former Pastors in Wisconsin.....1015-1058

PART XIII.

Catholic Orders in Wisconsin.

Chapter I.—Religious.

Capuchin Order.....1059-69
Dominican Sisters of the Perpetual Rosary..... 1060-4
Franciscans..... 1064-5
Jesuits..... 1065-7
Order of Praemonstratensians..... 1067-8
Servites..... 1068
Sisters of Charity 1068
Sisters of the Poor Handmaids of Jesus Christ..... 1068-9
Sisters of St. Francis of Assissi.... 1069

Chapter II.—Secular.

Ancient Order of Hibernians..... 1070-2
Catholic Knights of Wisconsin..... 1072-5
Catholic Order of Foresters..... 1075-8
Catholic Total Abstinence Union...1078-80
German Roman Catholic Central Society..... 1080-5
Knights of St. George..... 1085
Leo's Benevolent Society..... 1085-6

PART XIV.

Prominent Members of the Laity in Wisconsin.....1087-1134

PART XV.

Catholic Art and Architecture.

PAGE.
Altars, Pulpits and Statuary.....1139-40
Altar Wines..... 1147
Architects and Superintendents..... 1138
Art Decorators..... 1140
Art Glass..... 1146
Centennial Bell Foundry..... 1142
Church and School Supplies..... 1136-8
Church and Tower Clocks..... 1142
Church Architecture..... 1138-9
Church Bells..... 1140-2
Church Goods..... 1135-6
Church Organs..... 1142-3
Church Statuary and Woodwork Decorations..... 1144-5
European Statuary Company..... 1146-7
Heating Buildings by Hot Water.... 1143-4
Introduction..... 1135
Pio Nono College..... 1147
School Literature..... 1147-8

PART XVI.

Chronological Table of Historical and Parochial Events.....1155-1168

General History.

Albanel, Rev. C.....251, 252, 262
Albers, Rev. J..... 274
Allouez, Rev. C.....199, 222, 223, 225, 234-40, 251-2-3
Altgeld, Gov..... 278
Andre, Rev. L.....241, 251
Aveneau, Rev. 252
Aylward, J. A..... 288
Badin, Rev. J. V.....254, 255, 259, 264
Baraga, Rt. Rev. F.....256, 258, 260, 265, 267, 268, 273
Barnum, Mark..... 288
Batz, Msgr. L..... 274
Beauprez, Rev. Fr..... 272
Bedin, Rev. C..... 273
Beitter, Rev. M.....270, 275
Bellcourt, G. A..... 258
Bellmont, F.....212, 217
Bennett Law.....281, 283
Bergmann, Rev. H.....273, 275
Bermadinger, Rev. F.....269, 272
Bernard, Rev. W..... 275
Biard, Rev. P.....3, 183, 184, 185
Bible in the Public Schools..... 279
Bigot, Rev. J..... 187
Binneteau, Rev. J.....187, 200, 226
Birkhauser, I. A..... 276
Bishops' Protest.....283-86
Bloesinger, F. J..... 274
Blondiuel, Rev. Fr.....258, 259, 264, 265
Boniface, Rev. Fr..... 208
Bonneault, Rev. P. A..... 251
Borgess, Rt. Rev. Bishop..... 277
Boulanger, Rev. J. I..... 228
Bovie, Rev. Fr..... 226
Bowe, Rev. J. F..... 281
Bray, E. A.....281, 291, 292
Bressani, Rev. Fr.....65, 91
Bruener, Rev. T.....276, 290
Bruyas, Rev. Fr.....207, 208, 216, 220
Buisset, Rev. L..... 212
Bullock, Rev. Fr..... 272
Callanan, Rev. Fr..... 272
Carroll, Rt. Rev. J..... 190
Casey, Rev. J.....291, 292
Cassoday, Hon. J. B..... 281
Catholic Press of Wisconsin.....291-94
Catholic School system in Wisconsin.289-91
Chabanel, Rev. Fr.....66, 88, 198
Chardon, Rev. J. B.....251, 253
Chatelain, Rev. Fr.....34, 195, 196
Chaumonot, Rev. Fr.....59, 103-4, 195, 196, 198, 202, 220
Cheverus, Rev. J..... 190
Chone, Rev. Fr..... 258
Ciquard, Rev. F..... 190
Colton, J.....270, 273
Columbia Catholic Schools.....287-8
Conrad, Rev. L..... 273
Coquart, Rev. Fr..... 189
Couture, W.....55, 57
Cretin, Rev. J..... 260
Dablon, Rev. Fr.....108, 202, 204, 240, 241
Daillon, Rev. J.....13, 59, 193, 196
Daniel, Rev. Fr.....26, 32, 82, 83, 194, 195, 197, 202, 204
David, T..... 274
Davost, Rev. Fr.....26, 194-5
De Behr, Rev. Fr..... 276
De Berge, Rev. P. J..... 273
De Brebeuf, Rev. Fr.....13, 21, 23, 26, 27, 28, 40, 59, 193, 194, 197
De Carheil, Rev. Fr.....207, 209, 220, 252
De Coen, Rev. Fr..... 273
De Jaunay, Rev. P.....253, 256
De Jean, Rev. Fr.....255, 256
De la Chasse, Rev. P..... 187
De la Roche, Rev. Fr..... 193
De Lamberville, Rev. J.....208, 213, 217
De Lamberville, Rev. John....209, 213, 214
Demuser, Edmond..... 191
De Noue, Rev. A.....13, 21, 22, 23, 69, 193
De Paris, Rev. I..... 186
De Quen, Rev. J..... 109
Desmond, Hon. H. J.....278, 279, 281, 286, 287, 292
Desseille, Rev. Fr..... 259
Deustler, P. V..... 272
De Vieuxpont, Rev. Fr..... 17
D'Heu, Rev. J..... 217
Donahue, Rev. J..... 273
D'Olveau, Rev. J.....9, 10
Dreuillettes, Rev. Fr.....79, 83, 186, 241, 242, 253
Du Guesiis, Rev. F.....208, 217
Dumphy, Richard..... 273
Du Peron, Rev. J. I.....43, 203
Du Plessis, Bro..... 9
Dwenger, Rt. Rev. Bishop..... 277
Egan, M. F..... 287
Edelbrock, Rt. Rev. A..... 277
Enjalran, Rev. Fr.....214, 224
Eries..... 167
Fagan, A..... 275
Fander, Rev. P. J..... 270
Farrel, P. J..... 274
Fenelon, Rev. Fr.....207, 211
Fenwick, Msgr.....255, 268
Flaget, Rev. Fr.....228, 264
Flasch, Rt. Rev. K.....274, 277, 281
Fletcher, Miss Alice..... 144
Foeckler, Rev. A..... 276
Foley, Rt. Rev. Bishop..... 277
Foxes..... 172
Francis, Rev. Fr..... 212
Freedom of Worship in Wisconsin.... 278
Fremin, Rev. J.....207, 209, 210, 211, 213
Frey, Rev. B..... 276
Fusseder, Rev. F.....269, 272, 274
Gachet, Rev. A. M..... 275
Galtier, Rev. Fr..... 274
Garacontie,.....205, 206, 207, 208,209
Garesche, Rev. Fr..... 277
Garnier, Rev. C.....34, 88, 195, 196, 198, 207, 209, 210
Garrow, Rev. Fr.....66, 88, 89, 110, 186, 203
Germain, Rev. Fr..... 189
Gernbauer, Rev. Fr.....269, 271
Godefroy, J. P..... 79
Gordon, Rev. M. A..... 219
Goupel, R.....55, 90
Grace, Rt. Rev. T..... 277
Gravier, Rev. Fr.....225, 226, 252
Grelon, Rev. Fr.....88, 89
Grutza, Rev. W..... 293
Guignas, Rev. I..... 253
Haas, Rev. F..... 275
Hackhofer, L..... 274
Hartigan, J. A..... 288
Healy, Rev. J.....279, 274
Heiss, Most Rev. M.....269, 272, 273, 274, 276, 277, 281
Hennepin, Rev. L.....212, 224, 225, 253
Hennessey, Rt. Rev. J..... 277
Henni, Most Rev. J. M.....209, 291, 264, 269, 270,-1-2-3-4-5-6-7
Hermon, J..... 274
Hetscher, Rev. F..... 256
Heyrman, J. B..... 291
Hoecken, Rev. J..... 259
Holzhauer, H. A..... 273
Huebner, Rev. F..... 272
Hughes, Rt. Rev. Bishop..... 278
Huron Country..... 164
Huron Dwelling Houses.....164, 165
Huron Food..... 166
Huron Fortifications..... 165
Huron Manufacturing..... 168
Huron Mode of Dress..... 167
Illinois..... 173
Inama, Rev. A.....270, 275
Indian Burial of the Dead.....152, 157
Indian Character.....117, 118
Indian Cooking..... 118
Indian Crees..... 117
Indian Dancing.....139, 151
Indian Divinities..... 119
Indian Dress..... 167
Indian Education..... 160
Indian Feast and War Dance.....124, 125
Indian Feasts.....136, 137
Indian Future State.....134, 138
Indian Gambling..... 122
Indian Government.....157, 159
Indian Hospitality..... 142
Indian Hunting.....122, 123
Indian Immortality of the Soul..... 135
Indian Marriage.....138, 141
Indian Murder..... 142
Indian Music.....144, 150
Indian Pipe of Peace.....133, 134
Indian Polygamy..... 160
Indian Superstition..... 120
Indian Treatment of Sickness..... 130
Indian War Dance.....124, 125
Indian Warfare.....126, 130
Iroquois.....168, 170
Jacker, Rev. E..... 247
Jackson, A. A..... 281
Jahan, Rev. E..... 258
Jamay, Rev. D.....9, 192
Jansen, Rev. Fr..... 275
Jaunay, Rev. P..... 228
Jarbon, Rev. Fr..... 272
Jaworuickia, Prof. Alex..... 229
Jogues, Rev. I.....54-8, 61, 64, 70, 72, 74, 75, 186, 195, 196, 197, 231
Johnson, R. B..... 291
Joliet, M.....242, 262
Juneau, Solomon.....264, 270
Katzer, Most Rev. F. X.....277, 281
Keenan, Rev. T..... 273
Keller, G..... 293
Kelly, J. T..... 288
Kendeler, Rev. Fr..... 270
Kenney, L.....273, 274
Keogh, Rev. J. J..... 288
Keppler, Rev. A.....271, 272
Kinsella, Rev. J.....274, 275
Know Nothings..... 278
Korfhage, Rev. H..... 276
Krautbauer, Rt. Rev. F. X.....262, 277
Krez, C..... 287
Kundig, Rev. M.....264, 269, 277
Kuypers, J. A..... 293
Kuk, John..... 293
La Boule, Rev. J. S.....226, 253

PAGE.
Lalemant, Rev. C.....13, 17, 193
Lalemant, Rev. G.....197-8
Lalemant, Rev. J.....43, 108, 184, 196, 197-8
Lausse, Rev. J.....270
Lauvergat, Rev. S.....187
Le Boesme, Rev. L.....109
Le Caron, Rev. Fr.....9, 10, 12, 192
Le Jeune, Rev. Fr.....22, 23, 32, 36, 38
Le Mercier, Rev. Fr.....108, 111, 192, 194, 196, 198, 204, 227
Le Moyne, Rev. Fr.43, 100, 101, 112, 201, 206
Leyes, Rev. Fr.....189
Lymoges, Rev. Fr.....226
Lyon, Justice.....279
Malot, Rev. L.....17
Manach.....189
Marcoux, Rev. J.....220, 221
Maresť, Rev. Fr.....226, 227, 252, 253
Mareuil.....217
Marquette.....199, 222, 223, 240-51, 274
Masse, Rev. Fr.3, 13, 14, 23, 69, 183, 184, 193
Matthews, G.....275
Mazzuchelli, Rev. F.....270
Mazzuchelli Rev. S.....255, 256, 260, 266, 270, 276
McBride, D. H.....288
McCloskey, Most Rev. J.....277
McDonnell, Rev. R.....219
McGinnity, D.....276
McGinnity, E.....276
McGowan, Rev. J.....274
McGuerk, Rev. P.....274
McKernan, Rev. Fr.....270
McLaughlin, Rev. Fr.....271
McMullen, Most Rev. A.....277
McQuaid, Rt. Rev. Bishop.....277
Melchet, Rt. Rev. J.....276
Membertou.....184
Membre, Rev. Z.....224
Menard, Rev. R.108, 111, 199, 209, 232-33, 253
Mermet, Rev. Fr.....226
Mesaiger, Rev. C. M.....228
Messmer, Rt. Rev. S. G.....277, 288
Meurin, Rev. S. L.....228
Mieskwat, C.....185
Milet, Rev. P.....207, 208, 213, 215
Minderer, Rev. J.....273
Montague, P. F.....274
Moran, J.....270
Morrissey, Rev. T.....270
Mrak, Rt. Rev. I.....258, 277
Mueller, M.....274
Murphy, Rev. W. S.....273
Negabamat, N.....186
Neutrals.....167
Nicolet, J.....50, 185
Nolan, Dr.....291
Nouvel, Rev. Fr.....199, 241, 251, 252
Noyrot, Rev. Fr.....13, 17
Obermüeller, F. X.....270
Obermüller, M.....272, 273
O'Connor, Rt. Rev. Bishop.....277
Ojibways.....170, 174
Olier, Rev. J. J.....52
Olwell, L. A.....288
Onahan, Hon. W. J.....287
O'Neill, E.....273
Pacificus, Rev. F.....9, 10
Pallen, Conde B.....288
Paulhuber, Rev. Fr.....273
Peck, Gov. G.....278
Perrot, N.....262, 263, 264
Perrouit, Rev. Fr.....47
Petit, Rev. B. M.....259, 260
Petit, P.....275
Petithomme, Mr.....191
Pfaller, F. X.....274
Pfeffer, Rev. N.....273
Picquet, Rev. Fr.....217, 218, 219
Pierron, Rev. J.....207, 210, 213
Pierson, Rev. Fr.....252
Piers, Rev. Fr.....258
Pijart, Rev. C.....196
Pijart, Rev. P.....194
Pinet, Rev. Fr.....226
Poncet, Rev. J. A..99, 100, 104, 195, 198, 201
Potier, Rev. P.....253
Pottawattomies.....171
Poulain, Rev. W.....11, 192
Proulx, Rev. Fr.....258
Purcell, Most Rev. J. B.....277
Putnam, Rev. Fr.....272
Quentin, Rev. Fr.....184
Raffeix, Rev. Fr.....210, 211
Ragueneau, Rev. P.....101, 203, 204
Rale, Rev. Fr.....187, 188, 189, 225
Ravoux, Rev. A.....265
Raymbaut, Rev. C.....64, 196, 231
Rehrl, Rev. G.....272, 275
Rehrl, Rev. K.....269, 273, 276
Reilly, Rt. Rev. Bishop.....280
Rese, Rt. Rev. F.....255, 257
Rese, Rev. R.....259
Ribourde, Rev. G.....224
Richard, Rev. G.....254, 255
Richer, Rev. P. D.....198
Roche, H.....275
Roche, R.....275
Rohault, Rev. R.....31
Romagne, Rev. Fr.....190, 191
Roncetti, Msgr.....277
Ryan, Rt. Rev. Bishop.....277
Sacs.....172
Sadler, Rev. J.....272
Sagard, Rev. G.....12, 193
Salzmann, Dr. J..269, 271, 272, 273, 274, 290
Sanderl, Rev. Fr.....256, 257
Sauteux.....177
Scheppert, Rev. A.....272
Schuhlaets, J. M. A.....203
Schwaiger, Rev. P.....276
Schwebach Rt. Rev. J.....277
Seidenbusch, Rt. Rev. R.....277
Self, Rev. S.....272
Shaw, Rev. Fr.....270
Silvy, Rev. A.....251
Singenberger, J.....276
Skolla, Rev. O.....258, 259, 267
Skulik, Rev. B.....92-3
Smarius, Rev. Fr.....275
Spalding, Most Rev. Archbishop.....277
Springob, J.....293
Steiger, Rev. Fr.....271, 272
Strickner, Rev. G.....275
Stucky, J.....274
Sullivan, R.....275
Thury, Rev. Fr.....187
Timon, Rev. J.....270
Towne, J. P.....281
Trouve, Rev. C.....207, 211
Tursis, Rev. C.....47
Urbanek, Rev. A.....269, 273
Van den Broek, Rev. T.....256, 257, 258, 265, 266, 267
Van den Huvel, Rev. Fr.....272
Van Paemel, Rev. A.....258
Verberk, Rev. A.....276
Verbort, W. W.....276
Verwyst, Rev. C.....247
Viel, Rev Fr.....12, 13, 192, 193
Vignal, W.....206
Vilas, Senator.....278
Vimond, Rev. Fr.....17, 38, 51, 67
Viszogsky, Rev. Mr.....257
Vivaldi, Rev. Fr.....260
Vivier, Rev. L.....228
Voissem, Rev. P.....275
Weikmann, Rev. C. B.....275
Weinhardt, Rev. Fr.....273, 275
Weninger, Rev. F. X.....272, 273, 274
Weikmann.....275
Weiss, Rev. M.....272
Wigert, P.....275
Wigman, J. H. M.....281
Willard, Rev. G. L.....275, 276, 291
Winans, J.....281
Wisbauer, Rev. Fr.....269, 270, 272
Zahm, Dr.....287
Zastera, Rev. J.....275

Personal Index.

Albers, Rev. A.....450
Albers, Rev. H. J.....1015
Allen, Rev. E.....504-5
Ambauan, Rev. A.....393-4
American Book Co.....1147
Anderegg, Rev. M. T.....587
Antonia, Mother M.....909-10
Babinski, Rev. A.....821
Bach, Dr. J. A.....1088-9
Bach, Rev. J. M.....387
Baeumle, Rev. A.....331
Bally, Rev. V.....744
Bardon, R.....875
Barney, Rev. J. A.....819
Barth, Rev. L.....347
Bastian, Rev. J.....731
Batz, Msgr, L.....353
Baur, Rev. J. M.....806
Beau, Rev. T.....823, 901, 1015
Becker, Rev. C.....901
Becker, Rev. N. D.....503
Becker, Rev. P.....832
Belle, Rev. A.....679
Beitter, Rev. M.....1015-16
Berchmann, Rev. Fr.....1015
Berg, Rev. J.....903
Bergen, Rev. J. C.....373
Bergen, Rev. T.....1016
Bermadinger, Rev. F.....1016
Bernard, Rev. S.....430-1
Bernard, Rev. W.....1018
Bertram, Rev. J. A.....424
Bienarzs, Rev. J. C.....587
Black, Hon. J.....315, 1087-8
Blackwell, Rev. E. J.....414
Blaschke, Rev. J. A.....770
Blum, Rev. H.....363-4
Blum, Rev. J. W.....525-6
Blum, Rev. L.....382
Boehm, Rev. J.....1018
Bonenkamp, Rev. W.....1018
Bongers, Rev. M.....720-1
Boucher, Rev. C.....409-10
Bourgmeyer, Rev. J. A.....619
Bowe, Rev. J. F.....476
Brady, Rev. G. W.....1018
Brehm, J.....1078
Brielmaier, E. & Sons.....1138-9
Broens, Rev. A.....626
Brouillard, Rev. J. F.....869-70
Brudermanns, Rev. J. B.....782
Bruecker, Rev. W.....518
Bruener, Rev. Leo.....1018-1020
Buckley, Rev. J.....375
Buczyaski, Rev. B.....355
Burelbach, Rev. P.....527
Burke, Rev. J. B.....373
Byrne, Rev. F. A.....813
Callahan, J. M.....1074
Callen, T. J.....1076
Campbell, Gardiner, & Sons.....1142
Campbell, Rev. J.....810
Campbell, Rev. J. T.....839
Caron, Rev. L. A. C.....687
Casey, Rev. J.....543-4
Causse, Rev. J.....472
Cautereels, Rev. P.....600
Chebul, Rev. J.....872-3
Cipin, Rev. A. J.....723
Cleary, .E.....1089-90
Clifford, Rev. M.....605
Condon, Rev. J. A.....427
Condon, Rev. M. A.....496
Condon, Rev. R.....856

PAGE.

Connolly, Rev. B. P. 816-17
Conrad, Rev. L. 337, 338, 339
Corbett, Dr. M. E. 1074
Couture, Rev. F. E. 867-8
Cramer, Mrs. W. E. 1090-1
Croke, Rev. J. 423
Cummane, Rev. J. D. 719
Czarnowski, Rev. J. 606
Czerwinski, I. 1091-2
Daems, Rev. E. 600-1
Dagnault, Rev. P. S. 753
Daleidid, J. P. 1136-7-8
Daniels, Rev. W. 818
De Berge, Rev. P. 1020
Decker, Rev. A. I. 324
Decker, Rev. J. 451-2
Degnan, Rev. W. E. 841
De Goey, Rev. B. 873
De Haan, Rev. W. H. 636
Deisenrieder, Rev. M. 1020-22
Dejalle, Rev. W. 531
De Kelver, Rev. W. 690
Delles, Rev. P. J. 417
De Louw, Rev. C. 646-7
Dempsey, Rev. T. 478
Derenthal, Rev. O. 659, 875
Desmond, Hon. H. J. 1092-3
Desmond, T. 1093
De Wilt, Rev. E. 755
Dickopf, Rev. P. 837
Diebold, Rev. J. 452-3
Dieringer, Rev. B. 903
Dieringer, Rev. N. 363
Donahoe, Rev. P. 1022
Dornbach, N. 1093-4
Dowling, Rev. M. P. 335
Downs, Rev. M. E. 457
Drees, Rev. J. 749
Dreis, Rev. J. 439
Drexel, Rev. L. 325, 902-3
Duffy, Rev. H. F. 865
Dunne, Rev. A. B. C. 808
Duren, Rev. S. 843-4
Durnin, Rev. P. H. 354-5
Durward, Rev. J. T. 783-4
Dwyer, Wm. 1094-5
Eisen, Rev. J. 831
Elskamp, Rev. B. 507
Etschmann, Rev. F. X. 1022
Fagan, Rev. T. 341
Fairbanks, Rev. H. F. 352-3
Fardy, Rev. W. 887
Feld, Rev. J. B. 407
Fessler, Rev. C. 1022, 1024
Fessler, Rev. G. 1024
Fessler, Rev. J. 1024
Fiss, Rev. F. 697
Fitzgibbon, Rev. J. 1024
Fitzgibbon, Dr. T. 1095-6
Fitzmaurice, Rev. W. 597
Flanagan, L. W. 1096-7
Flasch, Rt. Rev. K. 758-9
Flock, Rev. H. 689
Foeckler, Rev. A. 1025
Foley, Rev. J. D. 334-5
Forster, C. G. 1097
Fox, Rev. J. J. 580-81
Fox, Paul. 1098-9
Frantz, Rev. W. 512
Freiman, Rev. N. L. 501
Friedl, Rev. J. 434
Frey, Rev. B. 918, 958
Frieden, Rev. P. 1025
Froehlich, Rev. J. B. 524
Fusseder, Rev. F. 1025
Gallagher, Rev. C. 622
Gara, Rev. A. W. 850
Gardthaus, Rev. A. 364
Gartner, Rev. J. M. 1026
Gauche, Rev. J. 1026
Garus, Rev. L. 752
Gasper, Rev. P. L. 751

PAGE.

Geier, Rev. F. 696-7
Geissler, Rev. J. A. 749
Gernbauer, Rev. M. 903-4
Gerend, Rev. M. M. 468, 918
Gessl, Rev. A. 609
Geyer, Rev. P. 791
Glaser, Rev. H. 805
Gmeiner, A. 1081, 1085
Goebel, Rev. W. A. 520
Goepfert, Rev. P. 630-1
Goldsmith, Rev. C. F. X. 795-801
Gonski, C. 1099-1100
Gonski, Rev. H. 356
Graettinger, Rev. M. 389
Gratza, Rev. J. 605-6
Grenbowski, Rev. T. 596
Greulich, The Aug. Co. 1147-8
Grobschmidt, Rev. C. 533
Groff, Rev. M. J. 548
Grome, Rev. F. P. 346
Grosse, Rev. H. 790
Grossman, Rev. T. 596
Grutza, Rev. W. J. 343
Gstach, Rev. A. 1026
Guilman, Rev. I. 615
Gulski, Rev. H. 340
Haas, Rev. J. F. 957
Haberstock, Rev. W. 404
Hackner, E., Art Institution 1139-40
Hackner, Rev. W. 815
Hahn, Rev. C. 1028
Haider, Rev. M. 1028
Halbenkann, Rev. J. E. 444, 469
Hamm, Rev. J. 1028
Hannon, Rev. M. 390-1
Hanses, Rev. E. A. 825
Harlin, Rev. J. B. 402
Hart, Prof. T. D. 907-8
Hartmann, Rev. J. C. 560
Haslbauer, Rev. J. B. 1028
Hauck, Rev. J. B. 772
Havestadt, Rev. A. 886
Hayes, Hr. D. J. 1100, 1101
Healy, Prof. J. C. 908
Heder, Rev. W. J. 465-6
Heigl, Rev. M. 1028-1030
Heiss, Most Rev. M. 303-5, 307, 898
Heiss, Rev. M. 1030
Heller, Rev. F. X. 489
Hellweger, Rev. J. 436
Hemmer, Rev. J. 647-8
Hengen, Rev. C. 1030
Henderson, Rev. A. 107
Henni, Most Rev. J. M. ..... [illegible]
..... 295, 297, 310, 312, 313, 316
Hens, Rev. N. 611-12
Hermon, Rev. J. 801
Hess, Rev. F. 552
Huston, Rev. M. J. 320
Higgins, H. C. 1101-2
Hofer, Rev. J. 801-2
Hoffman, M. 1102-3
Holfeltz, Rev. P. 532
Holzhauer, Rev. H. J. 1030, 1032
Holzknecht, Rev. J. 674, 740
Hoogstoel, Rev. C. 747
Hopdegard, Rev. A. 856
Honeyman, Rev. B. 1030
Hugenroth, Rev. B. 725-6
Huebner, Rev. Fr. 358
Huitink, Rev. A. H. 643
Hummel, Rev. J. 701
Inama, Rev. A. 1032, 1034
Jachimiak, Rev. F. 835-6
Jacobs, M. A. 1103-4
Jacobs, Rev. T. 375-6
Jakobs, Rev. T. 1034
Jansen, Rev. H. 1034
Jaster, Rev. J. 1034
Jeka, Rev. S. 722
Joerger, Rev. M. J. 1034-5
Joerres, Rev. A. J. 834

PAGE.

Johnson, Rev. T. 397-8
Jones, Rev. P. J. 466-7
July, Rev. B. 370
July, Rev. N. 745
Kabat, Rev. E. 613
Kaluza, Rev. J. F. 786-7
Kampschroer, Rev. H. 557
Kasel, Rev. J. M. 906-7
Kaster, Rev. J. 734
Katzer, Most Rev. F. X. 307, 308, 314, 321
Keeley, Rev. J. M. 866
Keeley, L. S. 1104-5
Keenan, Rev. J. J. 411
Keenan, Rev. T. 1035
Kelleher, Rev. M. 678, 719
Keller, G. 1076-8
Keller, Rev. G. 806, 1035
Kelly, Rev. T. 849
Kennedy, Rev. J. F. 1035
Kenney, Rev. L. M. 1035
Kersten, T. 1084
Kessler, Rev. H. J. 543
Keyser, Rev. C. F. 539
Kiefner, Rev. G. 855
Kieser, Rev. J. A'. 1035-6
Kinsella, Rev. J. F. 540
Kinsella, Rev. J. 1036
Kirpal, Rev. J. 673
Klein, Rev. B. 814
Klein, Rev. I. 398
Klein, Rev. P. 491
Klop, Rev. J. B. 880
Knapstein, T. 1105-6
Knegtel, Rev. T. 679-80
Knox, Rev. P. B. 458
Kober, J. 1084
Koerner, Rev. W. 388
Koester, Rev. J. 485-6
Koetting, Rev. J. H. 325-6
Kolar, Rev. Fr. 746
Kolosinski, Rev. N. 649
Kopmeier, J. 850
Korczyk, Rev. J. 850
Korfhage, Rev. H. 464
Kozelka, Rev. V. Z. 638
Kraemer, Rev. W. 592
Krake, Rev. B. 660
Krautbauer, Rt. Rev. F. X. 576
Krauthan, Rev. C. 1036
Krekeler, Rev. P. 885-6
Kremer, Rev. A. P. 854
Krieger, Rev. C. 737
Kroeger, H. 1107-8
Kroll, Rev. A. 763
Kruszka, M. 1108-9
Kruszka, Rev. W. 521
Kruse, Rev. J. 1035
Krzywonos, Rev. W. 463
Kuehne, Rev. A. J. 547
Kundig, Rt. Rev. M. 296, 313, 318
Kurzejka, Rev. P. 713
La Boule, Rev. J. S. 902
Lakomy, Rev. R. 656
Lalumiere, Rev. S. P. 1036-38
Laslow, Rev. Fr. 634
Lau, Rev. C. 583
Laurer, Rev. J. G. 846
Lebl, Rev. Dr. S. 902
Leccia, Rev. E. E. 603-4
Leinfelder, Rev. S. A. 804-5
Leitner, Rev. A. S. 388
Lewandowski, Rev. V. 357
Leygraaf, Rev. H. 1038
Liebig, A. & Co. 1146
Lillis, Rev. F. J. 396
Lochemes, Rev. M. J. 905
Lochman, Rev. P. 703
Lopatto, Rev. S. 645
Lorigan, Rev. E. P. 677
Lugowski, Rev T. 844
Lynch, P. H. 1109-1110
Machan, Rev. Fr. 358

PAGE.

Mack, Rev. J. 754
Magott, Rev. R. 711
Maguire, Rev. J. J. 828
Mahoney, Rev. W. 320
Malkowski, Rev. T. 714-731
Maly, Rev. J. 1038-9
Manel, Rev. F. 645
Manitowoc Seating Co. 1144-5
Manning, Rev. D. J. 890
Martin, Capt. J. 1110-1111
Martin, P. H. 1111-1112
Maschelein, Rev. A. 1039
Matthew, Rev. G. W. 1039
Mayer, Rev. J. J. 864
McAteer, Rev. J. C. 857
McCarey, W. B. 1113-1114
McCarthy, Rev. W. 464
McDonough, F. 1114-1115
McFarland, Rev. J. 400-1
McGeehan, M. G. 1115-1116
McGill, Rev. W. F. 320, 337
McGinnity, Rev. D. V. 1039
McGinnity, Rev. E. M. 431
McGowan, Rev. J. 697
McIver, J. 1116-1117
McKenna, M. 1117-1118
McMahon, Rev. H. 494
McNulty, Rev. M. H. 480
Melcher, Rt. Rev. J. 574-6
Messmer, Rt. Rev. S. G. 578-80
Messmer, H. & Son 1138
Metzger, Rev. J. J. 1039
Metzler, Rev. J. B. 808
Meyer, Rev. E. J. 395
Meyer, Rev. T. 513-14
Mickers, Rev. S. C. 727
Mihm, Prof. L. W. 914
Miller, Rev. A. 803
Miller, C. B. 1084
Miller, Rev. J. J. 822
Miller, Rev. W. G. 558
Momo, Rev. G. 858
Morrissey, Rev. J. J. 320, 500
Mrak, D. D., Rt. Rev. I. 1039, 1041
Muehlenkamp, Rev. A. 781
Mueller, Rev. A. V. 517
Mueller, Rev. J. 1041
Mueller, Rev. O. 511
Muenich, Rev. J. S. 510
Muenzer, Rev. G. J. 529-30
Murphy, Rev. A. 763-4
Murphy, Rev. H. 385
Murphy, D. E. 1112-1113
Mutz, Rev. P. 530
Nau, Rev. C. 788
Naughtin, Rev. J. M. 320, 460
Neary, T. J. 1113, 1119
Nellen, Rev. W. 422-23
Neu, Rev. L. 1041
Nevins, Rev. J. 824
Nicholas, Rev. J. 403
Nickel, Rev. A. J. 397
Noever, Rev. G. 863
Noonan, J. 1119, 1120
Norton, Rev. M. B. 437
Nuonno, Rev. G. 820
Nuttmann, Rev. B. 487
Oberlinkels, Rev. M. 369
O'Brien, Rev. H. 426
O'Brien, Rev. M. J. 586
O'Brien, P. H. 1120-1
O'Connell, Rev. G. 610
O'Connor, Rev. A. 598
O'Connor, J. L. 1121-2
O'Hearn, Rev. D. J. 320
O'Keefe, Rev. J. 475
O'Keefe, Rev. J. 381
O'Leary, Rev. J. T. 415
Ollig, Rev. R. 445
O'Malley, Rev. J. 707-8
O'Malley, Dr. M. 1122-3
O'Reilly, Rev. L. P. 519

PAGE.

Oschwald, Rev. A. 1041-2
O'Toole, Rev. E. P. 836-7
Paiuch, Rev. I. 493
Panoch, Rev. L. 483
Pape, Rev. P. 508
Peil, Rev. W. J. 461
Pele, Rev. P. 623-4
Pellegrin, Rev. G. J. 617
Pennings, Rev. B. 619
Perrodin, Rev. J. C. 409
Pesch, Rev. G. 716-17
Peschong, Rev. L. 903
Pescinski, Rev. L. J. 740
Petit, Rev. F. 459, 540
Pfaller, Rev. F. X. 1042
Phelen, Rev. E. 793
Pierson, Rev. J. P. 903
Pischery, Rev. W. 484
Polak, Rev. J. 355
Pommer, Rev. F. 902
Pronold, Rev. I. 421
Prucha, Rev. J. E. 883-4
Quinlan, W. B. 1123-4
Raess, Rev. F. 805, 974-5
Ragan, C. T. 1072
Rainer, Rev. J. 900, 901
Rechtiene, Rev. F. 776
Reddin, Rev. D. 811-12
Reding, Rev. W. 809
Rehrl, Rev. C. 300, 1042, 1044
Rehrl, Rev. G. 1044
Reichert, C. 1124-5
Reilly, Thos. A. 1072
Reilly, Rev. E. 466-7
Reilly, Rev. F. P. 565-6
Reindl, Rev. J. B. 1044
Reinhart, Rev. H. 999, 1044
Reininger, Rev. A. T. 523
Rice, Rev. W. J. 742-3
Richard, Rev. T. 686
Ricklin, Rev. L. A. 584
Ries, Rev. H. B. 906
Ritz, Rev. J. W. 764-5
Roche, Rev. H. J. 441
Roche, Rev. R. R. 429-30
Roemer, C. 1084-5
Roettger, Rev. A. 1044
Rogozinski, Rev. C. 336
Rhode, Rev. J. 652
Rohr, Rev. S. 477
Romadka, A. V. 1125-6
Rossbach, Rev. A. 380
Roy, V. 874
Ruckengruber, Rev. M. 351
Ruessmann, Rev. F. L. 71
Ryan, Rev. F. C. 350
Ryan, Rev. J. F. 903
Ryan, T. E. 1026-7
Ryan, Rev. T. J. 684
Saile, Rev. C. 594
Sailer, Rev. F. X. 1046
Salentin, Rev. J. J. 482
Salick, Rev. A. B. 323
Salzmann, Rev. J. 300-1, 304, 337, 901, 905
Schaaf, Rev. N. 418-19
Schaettin, Rev. M. 477
Schaller, Rev. I. 829-30, 1046
Schauenberg, Rev. A. 861
Scheyer, Rev. J. B. 709
Schiefen, Rev. J. H. 492
Schinner, Rev. A. 296, 309, 900
Schleier, Rev. P. A. 362
Schmidt, Rev. C. 546
Schmit, Rev. C. 792
Schmitz, Rev. B. 561
Schmitz, Rev. M. J. 443
Schnitz, Rev. P. 614
Schneider, Rev. F. X. 412-13
Schnitzler, Rev. P. 845
Schoeberle, Rev. J. 1046
Schoelch, Rev. M. 788
Schoell, Rev. M. 681

PAGE.

Scholter, Rev. R. 707
Schuelke, Wm. 1142-3
Schulze, Rev. F. 901
Schumacher, Rev. P. A. 325
Schwaiger, Rev. P. 528
Schwalbach, M. 1142
Schwartzmeyer, Rev. J. 695
Schwebach, Rt. Rev. J. 759-60
Schweitzer, Rev. P. 542
Schwinn, Rev. F. 321, 551
Schwinn, Rev. 554
Seibold, Rev. Fr. 1048
Selbach, Rev. J. 639
Seubert, Rev. A. 691
Sheridan, P. 1127-8
Siepker, Rev. B. A. 564
Siegenberger, Prof. J. B. 907
Sirvici, Rev. A. 842
Sluyter, Rev. G. 762
Smedding, Rev. B. 1048
Smith, Rev. J. G. 393
Smith, Rev. R. 902
Smitz, Rev. A. M. 620-21
Somers, F. J. 1128
Snyder, M. L. 1074
Sonntag, L. 1076
Spath, Rev. F. 1048
Spitzlberger, Rev. L. 675-6
Staroszick, Rev. L. 722
Steiger, Rev. M. 908
Steinbrecher, Rev. F. X. 653-4
Stemper, Rev. H. T. 525
Stern, Rev. F. 1048
St. Louis, Rev. P. 635
St. Mary of Euphrasia 933-4
Strauss, R. P. 1146
Strickler, Rev. G. 1048
Stupfel, Rev. P. J. 562
Suchy, Rev. L. 357, 769, 1048, 1050
Szukalski, Rev. J. 327
Szulerecki, Rev. P. 356
Takken, Rev. W. 1050
Tarasiewicz, Rev. A. 326
Taugher, Rev. M. J. 408
Thelen, Rev. L. N. 534
Thill, Rev. D. 536-7
Thill, Rev. N. A. 432-3
Thillmann, Rev. J. 553
Till, Rev. F. X. 609
Toohey, Rev. J. 556
Toohey, J. 1129-30
Tormey, T. 406
Trant, Rev. S. 515
Treis, N. 1130
Trimberger, Rev. G. 416
Tully, Rev. P. 640
Ullrich, Rev. I. 328-30
Ulrich, Rev. C. 759
United Staes Heating Co. 1143-4
Untraut, Rev. H. J. 769
Urbanek, Rev. A. 1050
Vadder, Rev. G. 395
Vahey, Rev. J. 1050
Vaillant, Rev. F. 704
Vanduzen, The E. W. Co. 1140-1-2
Van Heyster, Rev. P. 850
Van Hootegem, Rev. E. M. 692-3
Vanier, Rev. C. 743-4
Van Paemel, Rev. A. 872
Van Ree, Rev. I. 602
Van Roosmalen, Rev. W. 746
Van Rooy, Rev. R. 628
Van Sever, Rev. A. 862
Van Susteren, Rev. P. 590
Van Treeck, Rev. J. A. 506
Van Treeck, Rev. J. P. 538
Verberk, Rev. A. J. 643-5
Verstegen, Rev. J. 624
Vertin, Rt. Rev. J. 1050, 52
Verwyst, Rev. C. 875
Videnka, Rev. J. 1052
Vogt, Rev. P. 1052

PAGE.

Vogt, Rev. C. 735
Vogt, Rev. P. J. 442
Vousem, Rev. P. J. 1052
Vollebregt, Rev. A. 882
Vollebrekt, Rev. F. 683
Vollmer, Rev. E. 878
Volz, Rev. J. F. 810
Voorjan, Rev. J. W. 650
Vorwerk, Rev. L. 328
Vychodil, Rev. A. 344
Wall, Rev. R. 366-7
Wambold, Rev. F. A. 425
Wapelhorst, Rev. I. 1052
Ward, Rev. M. J. 371, 384
Washburn, Hon. C. C. 552-3
Wawrozkowski, Rev. R. 592-3
Weber, Rev. C. 889
Weikmann, Rev. C. 883
Weinhart, Rev. F. X. 1053
Weinhoff, Rev. J. J. 400
Weiss, Rev. M. 1053-4
Weiss, Rev. S. ..... 10[illegible]
Welbes, Rev. M. ..... [illegible]
Welbes, Rev. P. H. ..... [illegible]
Wenker, Rev. M. ..... 3[illegible]
Wenning, Rev. [illegible] ..... [illegible]
Westkamp [illegible] ..... [illegible]
Wever [illegible] ..... [illegible]
[illegible] Rev. ..... [illegible]
[illegible] Rev. ..... [illegible]
[illegible] Rev. ..... [illegible]
[illegible] 766-7
[illegible] 881
[illegible] 866
Wiss [illegible] 684-5
Wigm[illegible] J. H. 1130-1-2
Wibbert, Rev. A. 498
Willard, Rev. G. L. 1055-6
Williams, Rev. H. 319
Wilms, Rev. F. X. 1056-7
Wiltzius, M. H. & Co. 1135-6
Wirtz, Rev. H. J. 848-9
Wisbauer, Rev. M. 375, 1057
Woelfl, Rev. S. G. 1057
Wryna, Rev. M. 333-4
Wuelfling, Rev. J. J. 410
Wurm, Rev. J. 420
Wurst, Rev. L. 882
Zardetti, Most Rev. O. 1057-8
Zarenczny, Rev. V. 366
Zawistowsky, Rev. J. 1058
Zielinski, Rev. Q. 721
Zeiniger, Msgr. A. 307, 309
Ziegler, G. 1133-4
Zimmer, Rev. N. M. 368, 977
Zirbes, Rev. J. 1058
Zitterl, Rev. A. 456-7

Illustrations.

(Archdiocese of Milwaukee.)

Milwaukee, Archbishop Katzer's residence 308
Milwaukee, Effigy of the face of our Divine Lord Jesus Christ 360
Milwaukee, First Catholic School in Milwaukee 316
Milwaukee, Gesu Church 332
Milwaukee, Holy Rosary Church 336
Milwaukee, Holy Trinity Church 338
Milwaukee, Immaculate Conception Church 340
Milwaukee, St. Ann's Church 322
Milwaukee, St. Anthony's Church 323
Milwaukee, St. Augustine's Church 325
Milwaukee, St. Boniface's Church 325
Milwaukee, SS. Cyril and Method's Church 327
Milwaukee, St. Francis Old Church and School 328
Milwaukee, St. Francis of Assissi Church 329
Milwaukee, St. Francis of Assissi (old hall) 330
Milwaukee, St. Hedwig's Church 335
Milwaukee, St. Hyacinth's Church 339
Milwaukee, St. John's Cathedral 311
Milwaukee, St. Josaphat's Church 342
Milwaukee, St. John De Nepomuc's Church 344
Milwaukee, St. Joseph's Church 344
Milwaukee, St. Lawrence Church 346
Milwaukee, St. Mary's Church and School 347
Milwaukee, St. Matthew's Church 349
Milwaukee, St. Michael's Church 350
Milwaukee, St. Patrick's Church 352
Milwaukee, SS. Peter and Paul's Church 353
Milwaukee, St. Rose's Church 354
Milwaukee, St. Stanislaus' Church 355
Milwaukee, St. Vincent de Paul's Church 356
Milwaukee, St. Wenceslaus' Church 357
Addison, SS. Peter and Paul's Church. 361
Alverno, St. Joseph's Church 362
Ashford, St. Martin's Church 363
Ashton, St. Peter's Church 364
Barton, Church of the Immaculate Conception 365
Beaver Dam, St. Michael's Polish Church 366
Beaver Dam, St. Peter's Church 367
Beaver Dam, St. Peter's School and Parsonage 368
Belgium, St. Mary's Church 369
Beloit Road, St. Mathias' Church 369
Beloit Road, St. Mathias' School 370
Beloit, St. Thomas' Church 371
Benton, St. Patrick's Church and Mission 372
Brighton, St. Francis Church 373
Brighton, Wreck of old St. Patrick's Church 373
Brodhead, St. Rose's Church 374
Burlington, St. Mary's Church, Parsonage and School 375
Byron, St. John's Church 376
Caledonia, St. Louis' Church 377
Cascade, St. Mary's Church 378
Cassville, St. Charles' Church 379
Cedarburg, St. Francis Borgia's Church 380
Charlesburg, St. Charles Borromeo's Church 381
Charlestown, St. Mathias' Church 381
Clyman, Church of the Holy Assumption 383
Columbus, St. Jerome's Church 384
Cross Plains, St. Francis Xavier's Church 386
Dacada, St. Nicholas' Church 388
Dane, St. Michael's Church and Parsonage 388
Darlington, Holy Rosary Church 390
Delavar, St. Andrew's Church and Rectory 392
Dodgeville, St. Joseph's Church 392
Dotyville, St. Michael's old and new Church 394
Doylestown, St. Patrick's Church 395
Eagle, St. Theresa's old and new Church 396
East Bristol, St. Joseph's Church 397
East Troy, St. Peter's Church 399
Eden, St. Mary's Church 400
Edgerton, St. Joseph's Church 401
Elkhorn, St. Patrick's Church 402
Elm Grove, Church, School and Convent of the B. V. M. 403
Farmersville, St. Andrew's Church 405
Fennimore, St. Mary's Church 406
Fennimore, Immaculate Conception Mission 406
Fond du Lac, St. Joseph's Church 408
Fond du Lac, St. Louis' Church, School, Sisters' Residence and Parsonage 409
Fond du Lac, St. Mary's Church 410
Fond du Lac, St. Patrick's Church 411
Ft. Atkinson, St. Joseph's Church 412
Fox Lake, St. Mary's Church 413
Franklin, Holy Assumption Church 414
Franklin, Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary Church 415
Fredonia, Master Dolorosa Church 416
Fussville, St. Anthony's Church 418
Germantown, St. Boniface's Church 419
Grafton, St. Joseph's Church 420
Granville Center, St. Catherine's Church 421
Granville Center, St. Michael's Mission Church 421
Granville Center, Mission of St. James at Mequon 422
Gratiot, St. Joseph's Church 423
Hartford, St. Kilian's Church, School and Parsonage 424
Highland, St. John's Church 425
Highland, St. Philip's Church 426
Hollandale, St. Patrick's Church and Parsonage 426
Holy Cross, Holy Cross Church 428
Janesville, St. Mary's Church 428
Janesville, St. Patrick's Church 430
Jefferson, St. John's Church 432
Jefferson, St. Lawrence Church 433
Johnsburg, St. John's Church 435
Kendaltown, Immaculate Conception Church 436
Kenosha, St. George's Church 438
Kenosha, St. George's School, Sisters' Residence and Parsonage 439
Kenosha, St. James' Church 440
Kewaskum, Holy Trinity Church 441
Kiel, SS. Peter and Paul's Church 442
Kieler, Church of the Immaculate Conception 443
Lake Geneva, St. Francis of Sales' Church 445
Lake Geneva, Interior of St. Francis of Sales' Church 446
Lancaster, St. Clement's Church, School and Parsonage 447
Lomira, St. Mary's of the Nativity Church 450
Lost Lake, St. Mary's Church 451
Madison, Holy Redeemer's Church 454
Madison, St. Patrick's Church 457
Madison, St. Raphael's Church 458
Madison, St. Raphael's School and Parsonage 459
Manitowoc, St. Boniface's Church 461
Manitowoc, St. Mary's Polish Church 462
Mapleton, St. Catherine's Church 463
Marytown, Church of the Visitation of the B. V. M. 464
Mayville, St. Mary's Church 465
Mazomanie, St. Barnabas' Church 466
Meeme, St. Isidore's Church 467
Middleton, St. Bernard's Church 468
Mineral Point, St. Mary's Church 469
Mineral Point, St. Paul's Church 470
Monches, St. John's Church and St. Columba's Mission 475
Monroe, St. Mary's Church 476
Monroe, St. Victor's Church 478
Mt. Hope, St. Lawrence Church 480
Muscoda, St. John the Baptist's Church 482
Neosho, St. Matthew's Church 483
New Berlin, Holy Apostles' Church 484
New Berlin, Holy Apostles' School 485
Newburg, Holy Trinity Church 487
New Cassel, St. Matthew's Church 489
New Coeln, St. Stephen's Church 490

	PAGE.
New Meunster, St. Alphonsus' Church and Parsonage	4[illegible]
Northeim, St. Casimir's Church	"
Oconomowoc, St. Jerome's Church
Oregon, Holy Mother of Consolation Church	991
Osceola, Our Lady of Angels' Chur	992
Oshkosh, St. Vincent's Church	993
Oshkosh, St. John's Church
Paris, St. John the Baptist's Ch	994
Pewaukee, St. Mary's Church
Pine Bluff, St. Mary's Church,	ormal
Plattville, St. Mary's Chu	994
Plymouth, St. John's Ch	of "Mary
Port Washington, St. Ma	Convent	995
Potosi, St. Andrew's C	an Asylum	996
Racine, Holy Name C	Francis Hos-
Racine, St. John Nep	on Tenth
Racine, St. Joseph's	997
Racine, St. Mary's Operating Room,
Racine, St. Patrick	ital	998
Racine, St. Ro	hael's Orphan Asy-
Random Lake	999
Richfield, St	eph's Hospital	1000
Richwood, St	Mary's Industrial and
Ridgeway,	chool	1001
Ripon, St.	St. Joseph's Hospital.	1011
Rive	red Heart Hospital	1012
Rh	field, St. Joseph's Sanitarium	1001
	elander, St. Mary's Hospital	1002
	lahawk, Sacred Heart Hospital	1002
	rie du Chien, Sacred Heart Col-
	ge	1003
	t Superior, St. Mary's Hospital	1014

Portraits.

belen, Rev. P. M	929
nes, Ven. Mother M	949
ers, Rev. A	448
ers, Rev. H	1015
en, Rev. E	505
bauen, Rev. A	394
deregg, Rev. M. T	587
tonia, Ven. Mother	908
binski, Rev. A	821
eh, Dr. J. A	1088
ach, Rev. J. M	387
lally, Rev. V	744
daraga, Bishop F	1015
Bardon, R	876
Barney, Rev. J. A	819
Barth, Rev. L	346
Bastian, Rev. J	731
Baur, Rev. J. M	806
Bazelmanns, Rev. A. J	1017
Beau, Rev. T	1017
Becker, Rev. C	899
Becker, Rev. N. D	502
Becker, Rev. P	832
Beerhorst, Rev. H	1017
Belle, Rev. A	679
Berg, Rev. J	899
Bergen, Rev. J. C	372
Bergen, Rev. T	1016
Bernadinger, Rev. F	1016
Bernard, Rev. S	451
Bernhard, Rev. W	1017
Bertram, Rev. J. A	424
Beyerle, Rev. C	1018
Bickel, A	1083
Bienarzs, Rev. J. C	595
Birkhaeuser, Rev. J. A	962
Black, Hon. J	1087
Blackwell, Rev. E. J	413
Blaschke, Rev. J. A	769
Blum, Rev. H	363
Blum, Rev. L	382
Blum, Rev. J. W	526
Boehm, Rev. J	1018
Bonenkamp, Rev. W	1019
Bongers, Rev. M	720
Boucher, Rev. C	409
Bourgmeyer, Rev. J. A	618
Brady, Rev. G	1019
Brady, Rev. J	1019
Brehm, J	1077
Broens, Rev. A	625
Broens, Rev. L	688
Brooks, Miss A. M	1079
Brouillard, Rev. J. F	869
Brudermanns, Rev. J. B	782
Bruecker, Rev. W	518
Bruener, Rev. L	1019
Brunner, Rev. G	608
Buckley, Rev. J	374
Burelbach, Rev. P	527
Burke, Rev. J. B	378
Butler, Rev. Fr	1021
Byrne, Rev. F. A	813
Callahan, J. M	1073
Callen, T. J	1077
Campbell, Rev. J.	810, 1079
Campbell, Rev. J. T	839
Carolina, Ven. Mother M	928
Caron, Rev. L. A. C	687
Cautereels, Rev. P	599
Cipin, Rev. A	724
Cleary, E	1089
Clifford, Rev. M	605
Colbert, M	1071, 1077
Collins, Rev. J. G	1021
Colovin, Rev. P. J	1021
Condon, Rev. J. A	496
Condon, Rev. M. A	427
Condon, Rev. R	855
Connolly, Rev. B. P	816
Conrad, Rev. L	338
Corbett, Dr. M. E	1073
Corby, Rev. W	1021
Couture, Rev. F. E	867
Cramer, Mrs. W. E	1090
Croak, Rev. Fr	1020
Croke, Rev. J	423
Cummane, Rev. J. D	718
Czerwinski, I	1092
Daems, Rev. Fr	600
Dagnault, Rev. P. S	753
Dalu, Rev. L	1023
Daleiden, J. P	1137
Daniels, Rev. W	817
De Berge, Rev. P	1020
Decker, Rev. A. I	324
Decker, Rev. J	451
Degnan, Rev. W. E	841
De Goey, Rev. B	870
Delles, Rev. P. J	417
De Louw, Rev. C	646
Dempsey, Rev. T	478
Derenthal, Rev. O	658
Desmond, Hon. H. J	1092
Desmond, T	1093
De Wilt, Rev. E	755
Dickopf, Rev. P	838
Diebold, Rev. J	452
Dieringer, Rev. B	899
Dieringer, Rev. N	362
Donahoo, J. C	1079
Dornbach, N	1094
Dourche, V. Rev. J	951
Dowling, Rev. M. P	334
Downs, Rev. M. E	497
Doyle, Rev. J	1023
Drees, Rev. J	749
Dreis, Rev. H	889
Dreis, Rev. J	440
Dreis, Rev. J	438
Dreis, Rev. P	439
Dunegon, J. W	1077
Dunne, Rev. A. B. C	809
Duren, Rev. S	843, 860
Durnin, Rev. P. H	355
Durward, Rev. J. T	783
Dwyer, W. D	1094
Eisen, Rev. J	830
Elskamp, Rev. B	597
Engel, Rev. W	1023
Etschmann, Rev. F. X	1022
Fagan, Rev. T	341
Fairbanks, Rev. H. F	352
Feld, Rev. F. R	407
Fessler, Rev. C	1022
Fessler, Rev. G	1023
Fessler, Rev. J	1024
Fiss, Rev. F	697
Fitzgibbon, Rev. J	1024
Fitzgibbon, Dr. T	1095
Fitzmaurice, Rev. W	597
Flannigan, L. W	1096
Flasch, Rt. Rev. K	757
Flock, Rev. H	868
Foeckler, Rev. A	1025
Foley, Rev. J. D	333
Forster, C. G	1097
Fox, Very Rev. J. J	580, 1077
Fox, P	1025
Frank, Rev. R	1026
Frantz, Rev. W	512
Freiman, Rev. N. L	501
Frey, Rev. B	958
Friedl, Rev. J	433
Froehlich, Rev. J. B	524
Fusseder, Rev. F	1025
Gara, Rev. A. W	850
Gartner, Rev. J. M	1026
Garus, Rev. L	752
Gasper, Rev. P. L	751
Geier, Rev. F	696
Geissler, J. A	748
Gerend, Rev. M. M	918
Geyer, Rev. P	790
Gmeiner, A	1083, 1085
Goebel, Rev. W. A	520
Goepfert, Rev. P	629
Goldsmith, Rev. C. F. X	796
Gonski, C	1100
Goss, Rev. Fr	1027
Graettinger, Rev. M. A	389
Gratza, Rev. J	606
Gray, Rev. E	1027
Grenbowski, Rev. T	715
Groff, Rev. M. J	548
Grome, Rev. F. P	345
Grossmann, Rev. T	596
Grutza, Rev. W. J	243
Gstach, Rev. P. D	1027
Gulski, Rev. H	340
Haas, Rev. J. F	957
Haberstock, Rev. W	404
Halbenkann, Rev. J. E	469
Hahn, Rev. C	1027
Haider, Rev. M	1028
Heigl, Rev. M	1029
Hamm, Rev. J	1028
Hannon, Rev. M	390
Hanses, Rev. E. A	825
Harlin, Rev. J. E	401
Hartmann, Rev. J. C	560
Hasibauer, Rev. J. B	1029
Hauck, Rev. J. B	772
Hayes, Dr. D. J	1101
Heder, Rev. W. J	465
Hegemann, Rev. T	790
Heiss, Most Rev. M	304
Heiss, Rev. M	1029
Heller, Rev. F. X	488
Hellweger, Rev. J	435
Hemmer, Rev. J	648
Hengen, Rev. C	1029
Henni, Most Rev. J. M	297
Hens, Rev. N	611
Hess, Rev. F	552
Higgins, H. C	1101
Hintze, C. F. A	1073
Hodnett, Rev. T	1030

INDEX—Continued.

PAGE.

Vogt, Rev. C. 785
Vogt, Rev. P. J. 442
Volkem, Rev. P. J. 1052
Vollebregt, Rev. A. 882
Vollebrect, Rev. F. 683
Vollmer, Rev. E. 878
Voiz, Rev. J. F. 840
Voorjan, Rev. J. W. 650
Vorwerk, Rev. L. 328
Vychodil, Rev. A. 344
Wall, Rev. R. 366-7
Wambold, Rev. F. A. 425
Wapelhorst, Rev. I. 1052
Ward, Rev. M. J. 371, 384
Washburn, Hon. C. C. 952-3
Wawrzekowski, Rev. R. 592-3
Weber, Rev. C. 889
Welkmann, Rev. C. 883
Weinhart, Rev. F. X. 1053
Westkemp, Rev. J. J. 400
Weiss, Rev. M. 1053-4
Weiss, Rev. S. 1053
Welbes, Rev. M. ..... [illegible]
Welbes, Rev. P. H. 428
Wenker, Rev. M. 364-5
Wenning, Rev. [illegible] 1055
Westkemp, [illegible] 728
Wieser, [illegible] 504
[illegible] 544-5
[illegible] 374
[illegible] 1055
[illegible] 766-7
[illegible] 881
[illegible] B. 866
Wiesner, [illegible] V. 684-5
Wigman, J. H. M. 1130-1-2
Wibbert, Rev. A. 498
Willard, Rev. G. L. 1055-6
Willmes, Rev. H. 940
Wilms, Rev. F. X. 1056-7
Wiltzius, M. H. & Co. 1135-6
Wirtz, Rev. H. J. 848-9
Wisbauer, Rev. M. 375, 1057
Woeil, Rev. S. G. 1057
Wrynn, Rev. M. 383-4
Wuelffing, Rev. J. J. 410
Wurm, Rev. J. 420
Wurst, Rev. L. 882
Zardetti, Most Rev. O. 1057-8
Zarenczny, Rev. V. 366
Zawistowsky, Rev. J. 1058
Zielinski, Rev. Q. 721
Zeiniger, Msgr, A. 307, 309
Ziegler, G. 1133-4
Zimmer, Rev. N. M. 368, 977
Zirbes, Rev. J. 1058
Zitterl, Rev. A. 456-7

Illustrations.

(Archdiocese of Milwaukee.)

Milwaukee, Archbishop Katzer's residence 308
Milwaukee, Effigy of the face of our Divine Lord Jesus Christ 360
Milwaukee, First Catholic School in Milwaukee 316
Milwaukee, Gesu Church 332
Milwaukee, Holy Rosary Church 336
Milwaukee, Holy Trinity Church 338
Milwaukee, Immaculate Conception Church 340
Milwaukee, St. Ann's Church 322
Milwaukee, St. Anthony's Church 323
Milwaukee, St. Augustine's Church 325
Milwaukee, St. Boniface's Church 325
Milwaukee, SS. Cyril and Method's Church 327
Milwaukee, St. Francis Old Church and School 328
Milwaukee, St. Francis of Assissi Church 329

PAGE.

Milwaukee, St. Francis of Assissi (old hall) 330
Milwaukee, St. Hedwig's Church 335
Milwaukee, St. Hyacinth's Church 339
Milwaukee, St. John's Cathedral 311
Milwaukee, St. Josaphat's Church 342
Milwaukee, St. John De Nepomuc's Church 344
Milwaukee, St. Joseph's Church 344
Milwaukee, St. Lawrence Church 346
Milwaukee, St. Mary's Church and School 347
Milwaukee, St. Matthew's Church 349
Milwaukee, St. Michael's Church 350
Milwaukee, St. Patrick's Church 352
Milwaukee, SS. Peter and Paul's Church 353
Milwaukee, St. Rose's Church 354
Milwaukee, St. Stanislaus' Church 355
Milwaukee, St. Vincent de Paul's Church 356
Milwaukee, St. Wenceslaus' Church 357
Addison, SS. Peter and Paul's Church. 361
Alverno, St. Joseph's Church 362
Ashford, St. Martin's Church 363
Ashton, St. Peter's Church 364
Barton, Church of the Immaculate Conception 365
Beaver Dam, St. Michael's Polish Church 366
Beaver Dam, St. Peter's Church 367
Beaver Dam, St. Peter's School and Parsonage 368
Belgium, St. Mary's Church 369
Beloit Road, St. Mathias' Church 369
Beloit Road, St. Mathias' School 370
Beloit, St. Thomas' Church 371
Benton, St. Patrick's Church and Mission 372
Brighton, St. Francis' Church 373
Brighton, Wreck of old St. Patrick's Church 373
Brodhead, St. Rose's Church 374
Burlington, St. Mary's Church, Parsonage and School 375
Byron, St. John's Church 376
Caledonia, St. Louis' Church 377
Cascade, St. Mary's Church 378
Cassville, St. Charles' Church 379
Cedarburg, St. Francis Borgia's Church 380
Charlesburg, St. Charles Borromeo's Church 381
Charlestown, St. Mathias' Church 381
Clyman, Church of the Holy Assumption 383
Columbus, St. Jerome's Church 384
Cross Plains, St. Francis Xavier's Church 386
Dacada, St. Nicholas' Church 388
Dane, St. Michael's Church and Parsonage 388
Darlington, Holy Rosary Church 390
Delavau, St. Andrew's Church and Rectory 392
Dodgeville, St. Joseph's Church 393
Dotyville, St. Michael's old and new Church 394
Doylestown, St. Patrick's Church 395
Eagle, St. Theresa's old and new Church 396
East Bristol, St. Joseph's Church 397
East Troy, St. Peter's Church 399
Eden, St. Mary's Church 400
Edgerton, St. Joseph's Church 401
Elkhorn, St. Patrick's Church 402
Elm Grove, Church, School and Convent of the B. V. M. 403
Farmersville, St. Andrew's Church 405
Fennimore, St. Mary's Church 406
Fennimore, Immaculate Conception Mission 406

PAGE.

St. Francis, St. John's Deaf Mute Institute 912
St. Francis, Deaf Mutes in the Class Room 913
Fond[illegible]rancis, Deaf Mutes at Work 914
Fond[illegible]rancis, Deaf Mutes in the Carv-
Ft. Atk[illegible] Shop 914
Fox Lak[illegible]s, Deaf Mute Girls at Play.. 915
Franklin, [illegible]t, Deaf Mute Boys at Play.. 916
Franklin, S[illegible] Chapel at St. John's Insti-
Mary Chu[illegible] 917
Fredonia, Mas[illegible]puchin Convent 919
Fussville, St. A[illegible]chin Fathers (group) 919
Germantown, St. [illegible]t of School Sisters
Grafton, St. Joseph's 1850 921
Granville Center, [illegible]Building of Notre Church 922
Granville Center, St. M[illegible]ing of Notre Church 923
Granville Center, Mission [illegible] the South
at Mequon ..... [illegible]vent 924
Gratiot, St. Joseph's Church [illegible] the North Hartford, St. Kilian's Church [illegible]nt 925 and Parsonage ..... Chapel
Highland, St. John's Church 926
Highland, St. Philip's Church.. Dame
Hollandale, St. Patrick's Chur[illegible] .....
Parsonage ..... [illegible]or 936
Holy Cross, Holy Cross Church 937
Janesville, St. Mary's Church 42
Janesville, St. Patrick's Church 430
Jefferson, St. John's Church 432
Jefferson, St. Lawrence Church 433
Johnsburg, St. John's Church 435
Kendaltown, Immaculate Conception Church 436
Kenosha, St. George's Church 438
Kenosha, St. George's School, Sisters' Residence and Parsonage 439
Kenosha, St. James' Church 440
Kewaskum, Holy Trinity Church 441
Kiel, SS. Peter and Paul's Church 442
Kieler, Church of the Immaculate Conception 443
Lake Geneva, St. Francis of Sales' Church 445
Lake Geneva, Interior of St. Francis of Sales' Church 446
Lancaster, St. Clement's Church, School and Parsonage 447
Lomira, St. Mary's of the Nativity Church 450
Lost Lake, St. Mary's Church 451
Madison, Holy Redeemer's Church 454
Madison, St. Patrick's Church 457
Madison, St. Raphael's Church 458
Madison, St. Raphael's School and Parsonage 459
Manitowoc, St. Boniface's Church 461
Manitowoc, St. Mary's Polish Church. 462
Mapleton, St. Catherine's Church 463
Marytown, Church of the Visitation of the B. V. M. 464
Mayville, St. Mary's Church 465
Mazomanie, St. Barnabas' Church 466
Meeme, St. Isidore's Church 467
Middleton, St. Bernard's Church 468
Mineral Point, St. Mary's Church 469
Mineral Point, St. Paul's Church 470
Monches, St. John's Church and St. Columba's Mission 475
Monroe, St. Mary's Church 476
Monroe, St. Victor's Church 478
Mt. Hope, St. Lawrence Church 480
Muscoda, St. John the Baptist's Church 482
Neosho, St. Matthew's Church 483
New Berlin, Holy Apostles' Church 484
New Berlin, Holy Apostles' School 485
Newburg, Holy Trinity Church 487
New Cassel, St. Matthew's Church 489
New Coeln, St. Stephen's Church 490

(Diocese of La Crosse.) PAGE.
La Crosse, St. Rose de Viterbo's Convent ... 990
La Crosse, Rear View of St. Rose's Convent—showing Chapel of Adoration ... 991
La Crosse, St. Clara's Convent ... 992
La Crosse, St. Ann's Orphan Home ... 993
La Crosse, St. Rose de Viterbo's Normal School ... 994
La Crosse, View of St. Rose's Convent Garden—showing part of Normal School and Hospital ... 994
La Crosse, Interior of Chapel of "Mary of Angels," of St. Rose's Convent ... 995
La Crosse, St. Ann's Orphan Asylum ... 996
La Crosse, View of St. Francis Hospital—showing wing on Tenth Street ... 997
La Crosse, Corner in Operating Room, St. Francis' Hospital ... 998
La Crosse, St. Michael's Orphan Asylum ... 999
Ashland, St. Joseph's Hospital ... 1000
Bayfield, St. Mary's Industrial and Parochial School ... 1001
Chippewa Falls, St. Joseph's Hospital ... 1011
Eau Claire, Sacred Heart Hospital ... 1012
Marshfield, St. Joseph's Sanitarium ... 1001
Rhinelander, St. Mary's Hospital ... 1002
Tomahawk, Sacred Heart Hospital ... 1002
Prairie du Chien, Sacred Heart College ... 1003
West Superior, St. Mary's Hospital ... 1014

Portraits.

Abbelen, Rev. P. M. ... 929
Agnes, Ven. Mother M. ... 949
Albers, Rev. A. ... 448
Albers, Rev. H.J. ... 1015
Allen, Rev. E. ... 505
Ambauen, Rev. A. ... 394
Anderegg, Rev. M. T. ... 587
Antonia, Ven. Mother ... 908
Babinski, Rev. A. ... 821
Bach, Dr. J. A. ... 1088
Bach, Rev. J. M. ... 387
Bally, Rev. V. ... 744
Baraga, Bishop F. ... 1015
Bardon, R. ... 876
Barney, Rev. J. A. ... 819
Barth, Rev. L. ... 346
Bastian, Rev. J. ... 731
Baur, Rev. J. M. ... 806
Bazelmanns, Rev. A. J. ... 1017
Beau, Rev. T. ... 1017
Becker, Rev. C. ... 899
Becker, Rev. N. D. ... 502
Becker, Rev. P. ... 832
Beerhorst, Rev. H. ... 1017
Belle, Rev. A. ... 679
Berg, Rev. J. ... 899
Bergen, Rev. J. C. ... 372
Bergier, Rev. T. ... 1016
Bermadinger, Rev. F. ... 1016
Bernard, Rev. S. ... 451
Bernhard, Rev. W. ... 1017
Bertram, Rev. J. A. ... 424
Beyerle, Rev. C. ... 1018
Birkel, A. ... 1083
Bienarzs, Rev. J. C. ... 595
Birkhaeuser, Rev. J. A. ... 962
Black, Hon. J. ... 1087
Blackwell, Rev. E. J. ... 413
Blaschke, Rev. J. A. ... 769
Blum, Rev. H. ... 363
Blum, Rev. L. ... 382
Blum, Rev. J. W. ... 526
Boehm, Rev. J. ... 1018
Bonenkamp, Rev. W. ... 1019
Bongers, Rev. M. ... 720
Boucher, Rev. C. ... 409
Bourgmeyer, Rev. J. A. ... 618
Brady, Rev. G. ... 1019
Brady, Rev. J. ... 1019
Brehm, J. ... 1077
Broens, Rev. A. ... 625
Broens, Rev. L. ... 688
Brooks, Miss A. M. ... 1079
Brouillard, Rev. J. F. ... 869
Brudermanns, Rev. J. B. ... 782
Bruecker, Rev. W. ... 518
Bruener, Rev. L. ... 1019
Brunner, Rev. G. ... 608
Buckley, Rev. J. ... 374
Burelbach, Rev. P. ... 527
Burke, Rev. J. B. ... 378
Butler, Rev. Fr. ... 1021
Byrne, Rev. P. A. ... 813
Callahan, J. M. ... 1073
Callen, T. J. ... 1077
Campbell, Rev. J. ... 810, 1079
Campbell, Rev. J. T. ... 839
Carolina, Ven. Mother M. ... 928
Caron, Rev. L. A. C. ... 687
Cauterels, Rev. P. ... 599
Cipin, Rev. A. ... 724
Cleary, E. ... 1089
Clifford, Rev. M. ... 605
Colbert, M. ... 1071, 1077
Collins, Rev. J. G. ... 1021
Colovin, Rev. P. J. ... 1021
Condon, Rev. J. A. ... 496
Condon, Rev. M. A. ... 427
Condon, Rev. R. ... 855
Connolly, Rev. B. P. ... 816
Conrad, Rev. L. ... 338
Corbett, Dr. M. E. ... 1073
Corby, Rev. W. ... 1021
Couture, Rev. F. E. ... 867
Cramer, Mrs. W. E. ... 1090
Croak, Rev. Fr. ... 1020
Croke, Rev. J. ... 423
Cummane, Rev. J. D. ... 718
Czerwinski, I. ... 1092
Daems, Rev. Fr. ... 600
Dagnault, Rev. P. S. ... 753
Dale, Rev. L. ... 1023
Daleiden, J. P. ... 1137
Daniels, Rev. W. ... 817
De Berge, Rev. P. ... 1020
Decker, Rev. A. I. ... 324
Decker, Rev. J. ... 451
Degnan, Rev. W. E. ... 811
De Goey, Rev. B. ... 870
Delles, Rev. P. J. ... 417
De Louw, Rev. C. ... 646
Dempsey, Rev. T. ... 478
Derrenthal, Rev. O. ... 658
Desmond, Hon. H. J. ... 1092
Desmond, T. ... 1093
De Wilt, Rev. E. ... 755
Dickopf, Rev. P. ... 838
Diebold, Rev. J. ... 452
Dieringer, Rev. B. ... 899
Dieringer, Rev. N. ... 362
Donahoo, J. C. ... 1079
Dornbach, N. ... 1094
Dourche, V. Rev. J. ... 951
Dowling, Rev. M. P. ... 334
Downs, Rev. M. E. ... 497
Doyle, Rev. J. ... 1023
Dreis, Rev. J. ... 749
Drexel, Rev. L. ... 899
Dreis, Rev. H. ... 440
Dreis, Rev. J. ... 438
Dreis, Rev. P. ... 439
Dunegon, J. W. ... 1077
Dunne, Rev. A. B. C. ... 809
Duren, Rev. S. ... 843, 860
Durnin, Rev. P. H. ... 355
Durward, Rev. J. T. ... 783
Dwyer, W. D. ... 1094
Eisen, Rev. J. ... 830
Elskamp, Rev. B. ... 507
Engel, Rev. W. ... 1023
Etschmann, Rev. F. X. ... 1022
Fagan, Rev. T. ... 341
Fairbanks, Rev. H. F. ... 352
Feld, Rev. F. R. ... 407
Fessler, Rev. C. ... 1022
Fessler, Rev. G. ... 1023
Fessler, Rev. J. ... 1024
Fiss, Rev. F. ... 697
Fitzgibbon, Rev. J. ... 1024
Fitzgibbon, Dr. T. ... 1085
Fitzmaurice, Rev. W. ... 597
Flannigan, L. W. ... 1096
Flasch, Rt. Rev. K. ... 757
Flock, Rev. H. ... 868
Foeckler, Rev. A. ... 1025
Foley, Rev. J. D. ... 333
Forster, C. G. ... 1097
Fox, Very Rev. J. J. ... 580, 1077
Fox, P. ... 1098
Frank, Rev. R. ... 1026
Frantz, Rev. W. ... 512
Freiman, Rev. N. L. ... 501
Frey, Rev. B. ... 868
Friedl, Rev. J. ... 433
Froehlich, Rev. J. B. ... 524
Fusseder, Rev. F. ... 1025
Gara, Rev. A. W. ... 850
Gartner, Rev. J. M. ... 1026
Garus, Rev. L. ... 752
Gasper, Rev. P. L. ... 751
Geier, Rev. F. ... 686
Geissler, Rev. J. A. ... 748
Gerend, Rev. M. M. ... 918
Geyer, Rev. P. ... 790
Gmeiner, A. ... 1083, 1085
Goebel, Rev. W. A. ... 520
Goepfert, Rev. P. ... 629
Goldsmith, Rev. C. F. X. ... 796
Gonski, C. ... 1100
Goss, Rev. Fr. ... 1027
Graettinger, Rev. M. A. ... 389
Gratza, Rev. J. ... 606
Gray, Rev. E. ... 1027
Grenbowski, Rev. T. ... 715
Groff, Rev. M. J. ... 548
Grome, Rev. F. P. ... 345
Grossmann, Rev. T. ... 596
Grutza, Rev. W. J. ... 843
Gstach, Rev. P. D. ... 1027
Gulski, Rev. H. ... 340
Haas, Rev. J. F. ... 957
Haberstock, Rev. W. ... 404
Halbenkann, Rev. J. E. ... 469
Hahn, Rev. C. ... 1027
Haider, Rev. M. ... 1028
Heigl, Rev. M. ... 1029
Hamm, Rev. J. ... 1028
Hannon, Rev. M. ... 390
Hanses, Rev. E. ... 825
Harlin, Rev. J. E. ... 401
Hartmann, Rev. J. C. ... 560
Haslbauer, Rev. J. B. ... 1029
Hauck, Rev. J. B. ... 772
Hayes, Dr. D. J. ... 1101
Heder, Rev. W. J. ... 465
Hegemann, Rev. T. ... 790
Heiss, Most Rev. M. ... 304
Heiss, Rev. M. ... 1029
Heller, Rev. F. X. ... 488
Heilweger, Rev. J. ... 435
Hemmer, Rev. J. ... 648
Hengen, Rev. C. ... 1029
Henni, Most Rev. J. M. ... 297
Heus, Rev. N. ... 611
Hess, Rev. F. ... 552
Higgins, H. C. ... 1101
Hintze, C. F. A. ... 1073
Hodnett, Rev. T. ... 1030

	PAGE.
Hofer, Rev. J.	802
Hoffmann, M.	1102
Holfeltz, Rev. P.	532
Holzhauer, Rev. H. J.	345, 1033
Holzknecht, Rev. J.	674
Honeyman, Rev. P.	1030
Hoogstoel, Rev. C.	747
Hopdegard, Rev. A.	856
Horan, Rev. C.	1031
Huber, Rev. J.	183, 1031
Hugenroth, Rev. B.	725
Huitink, Rev. A. H.	642
Hummel, Rev. J.	791
Huston, Rev. M. J.	315
Inamo, Rev. A.	1031
Jachimiak, Rev. F.	835
Jacobs, M. A.	1103
Jacobs, Rev. T.	375
Jansen, Rev. H.	1032
Jaster, Rev. J.	1032
Joerger, Rev. M.	1032
Joerres, Rev. A.	834
Jones, Rev. P. J.	467
Jeka, Rev. S.	722
July, Rev. B.	370
July, Rev. N.	745
Juneau, S.	320
Just, Rev. F. J.	636
Kabat, Rev. E.	612
Kaluza, Rev. J. F.	786
Kampschroer, Rev. H.	556
Kane, Miss N.	1079
Kaster, Rev. J.	733
Katzer, Most Rev. F. X.	308
Keeley, L. S.	1104
Keenan, Rev. T.	1033
Kelleher, Rev. M.	719
Keller, Rev. G.	1033
Keller, G.	1077
Kelly, E. G.	1077
Kelly, Rev. C.	1033
Kennedy, Rev. J. F.	1034
Keogh, Rev. J. J.	313
Kersten, V. Rev. N.	911
Kersten, T.	1083
Kessler, Rev. H. J.	543
Keyser, Rev. C. P.	539
Kieser, Rev. A. P.	1034
Kinsella, Rev. J.	1035
Kinsella, Rev. J. F.	540
Kirpal, Rev. J.	673
Klein, Rev. B.	814
Klein, Rev. I. A.	398
Klein, Rev. P.	490
Klop, Rev. J. B.	880
Knapstein, M.	643
Knapstein, T.	1105
Knegtel, Rev. T.	680
Knox, Rev. P. B.	458
Kobler, J.	1083
Koerner, Rev. W.	738
Koester, Rev. J.	486
Koke, Rev. A.	1036
Kolosinski, Rev. N.	649
Kopmeier, J.	1106
Korfhage, Rev. H.	464
Kozelka, Rev. V. Z.	637
Kraemer, Rev. W.	591
Krake, Rev. B.	659
Krautbauer, Rt. Rev. F. X.	576
Krekeler, Rev. P.	885
Kremer, Rev. A. P.	853
Krieger, Rev. C.	737
Kroeger, H.	1107
Kroll, Rev. A.	762
Kruszka, M.	1108
Kruszka, Rev. W.	521
Krzywonos, Rev. N.	462
Kuehne, Rev. A. J.	547
Kundig, Rt. Rev.	302
Kurzejka, Rev. P.	712
La Boule, Rev. J. S.	799

	PAGE.
Lakomy, Rev. R.	656
Lalumiere, Rev. S. P.	1037
Laslow, Rev. Fr.	633
Lau, Rev. C.	582
Laurer, Rev. J. B.	846
Lay, Rev. L.	1036
Lebl, Rev. Dr.	899
Leccia, Rev. E. E.	603
Leinfelder, Rev. S.	804
Leygraaff, Rev. H.	1038
Lillis, Rev. F. J.	395
Lochemes, Rev. M. J.	908
Lochman, Rev. P.	702
Looze, Rev. J.	580
Lorigan, Rev. E. P.	677
Lynch, P. H.	1110
Mack, Rev. J.	754
Magott, Rev. R.	711
Maguire, Rev. J. J.	827
Maly, Rev. J.	1038
Malkowski, Rev. T.	714
Manel, Rev. Fr.	645
Manning, Rev. D. J.	889
Mayer, Rev. J. J.	864
Martin, Capt. J.	1111
Martin, P. H.	1112
Mazzuchelli, Rev. S.	1039
McAteer, Rev. J. C.	857
McCarey, B. W.	1114
McCarthy, Rev. W.	463
McDonough, F.	1115
McFarland, Rev. J. B.	400
McGann, Rev. F.	1040
McGeehan, M. G.	1116
McGill, Rev. W. F.	337
McGinnity, Rev. D.	1039
McGinnity, Rev. E. M.	431
McGowan, Rev. J.	607
McIver, J.	1116
McKenna, M.	1117
McMahon, Rev. H.	494
McNulty, Rev. M. H.	480
Melcher, Rt. Rev. J.	574
Messmer, Rt. Rev. S. J.	576
Metzler, Rev. J. B.	807
Meyer, Rev. E. J.	395
Meyer, Rev. T.	513
Mickers, Rev. S. C.	727
Miller, Rev. A.	803
Miller, C. B.	1073, 1083
Miller, Rev. J. J.	822
Miller, Rev. W. G.	558
Minderer, Rev. J.	1040
Mueller, Rev. A. V.	517
Mueller, Rev. J.	1040
Mueller, Rev. L.	1040
Muenich, Msgr. J. S.	510
Muenzer, Rev. G. J.	529
Murphy, Rev. A.	764
Murphy, Rev. A.	1071
Murphy, D. E.	1113
Murphy, Rev. H.	385
Mu.z, Rev. P.	530
Nau, Rev. C.	788
Naughain, Rev. J. M.	460
Neacy, T. J.	1119
Nellen, Rev. W.	432
Neu, Rev. L.	1041
Nevins, Rev. J.	824
Nicholas, Rev. J.	402
Nickel, Rev. A.	396
Niehaus, Rev. J.	1041
Noever, Rev. J.	863
Noonan, Hon. J.	1120
Norris, Rev. J. D.	1043
Norton, Rev. M. B.	437
Nuonno, Rev. G.	820
Nuttmann, Rev. B.	487
Obermueller, Rev. J. M.	1043
Obermueller, Rev. F. X.	1043
O'Brien, Rev. H.	426

	PAGE.
O'Brien, Rev. M. J.	586
O'Brien, P. H.	1121
O'Connell, Rev. G.	610
O'Connor, J. L.	1121
O'Hearn, Rev. D.	314
O'Keefe, Rev. J.	471
O'Keefe, Rev. J. W.	381
O'Leary, Rev. J. T.	415
Ollig, Rev. R.	444
O'Malley, Rev. J.	707, 1079
O'Malley, Dr. M.	1122
O'Reilly, Rev. L. P.	519
O'Reilly, Rev. S. P.	1079
Oschwald, Rev. A.	1042
O'Toole, Rev. E. P.	837
Paluch, Rev. I.	493
Panoch, Rev. L.	482
Pape, Rev. P.	509
Pele, Rev. P.	623
Pellegrin, Rev. G. J.	616
Pesch, Rev. G.	716
Peschong, Rev. L.	899
Pescinski, Rev. L. J.	741
Petit, Rev. A.	1043
Petit, Rev. F.	440
Pettit, Rev. A.	1044
Pfaller, Rev. F. X.	1045
Phillips, Rev. Fr.	1044
Pierron, Rev. J. T.	899
Pischery, Rev. W.	484
Pommer, Rev. F.	899
Prucha, Rev. J. E.	884
Quinlan, W. B.	1123
Rademacher, Rev. V.	1045
Raess, Rev. F.	465
Ragan, C. T.	1071
Rainer, Rev. J.	899
Rapp, Rev. J.	758, 1042
Rechtiene, Rev. F.	775
Reddin, Rev. D.	811
Reding, Rev. W.	809
Reichert, C. K.	1124
Reilly, Rev. E.	443
Reilly, Rev. F. P.	565
Reilly, T. W.	1071
Reindl, Rev. J. B.	1044
Reinhart, Rev. H.	999
Reininger, Rev. A. T.	523
Rice, Rev. W. J.	742
Richard, Rev. T.	686
Ricklin, Rev. L. A.	583
Ritz, Rev. J. W.	765
Roche, Rev. H. J.	441
Roche, Rev. R.	429
Roemer, C.	1083
Roettger, Rev. A.	1045
Rohde, Rev. J.	652
Rohr, Rev. S.	477
Romadka, A. V.	1125
Rossbach, Rev. A.	380
Roy, V.	877
Ryan, Rev. F. C.	349
Ryan, Rev. J. T.	899
Ryan, Rev. T. J.	624
Ryan, Rev. J. J.	946
Ryan, T. E.	1126
Saile, Rev. C.	594
Sailer, Rev. F. X.	1046
Salick, Rev. A. B.	323
Salzmann, Rev. J.	360
Schaaf, Rev. N.	418
Schaefer, Rev. M.	477
Schaller, Rev. I.	1046
Schauenberg, Rev. A.	861
Scheidhauer, Rev. J. C.	377
Scheyer, Rev. J. B.	708
Schinner, Rev. A. F.	309
Schieler, Rev. P. A.	362
Schmidt, Rev. C.	546
Schmit, Rev. C.	792
Schmitz, Rev. B.	561
Schmitz, Rev. M. J.	443

	PAGE.
Schnitz, Rev. P.	614
Schneider, Rev. F. X.	412
Schnitzler, Rev. P.	845
Schoeberle, Rev. J. J.	1047
Schoelch, Rev. M.	787
Schoell, Rev. M.	681
Scholter, Rev. R.	706
Schulze, Rev. F.	899
Schumacher, Rev. P. A.	325
Schwaiger, Rev. P.	528
Schwartzmeyer, Rev. J.	695
Schwebach, Rt. Rev. J.	757
Schweitzer, Rev. P.	541
Schwinn, Rev. F.	391
Schwinn, Rev. S. P.	550
Scott, Rev. R. J.	1047
Seeber, Rev. A.	987
Selbach, Rev. J.	639
Selinger, Rev. J.	899
Seubert, Rev. A.	691
Sheridan, P.	1127
Sherman, J. J.	1073
Siepker, Rev. B. A.	563
Simonik, Rev. F.	1047
Sirviec, Rev. A.	842
Smyter, Rev. G.	760
Smith, Rev. J.	1047
Smith, Rev. R.	899
Smitz, Rev. A. M.	620
Snyder, M. G.	1073
Somers, P. J.	1128
Sonntag, L.	1077
Soath, Rev. F.	1048
Spitzlberger, Rev. L.	676
Stehle, Rev. Fr.	1048
Steinbrecher, Rev. F. X.	654
Stemper, Rev. H. T.	525
Stern, Rev. F.	1049
Stiglbauer, F. J.	1077
St. Louis, Rev. P.	635
Strickner, Rev. G.	1049
Stupfel, Rev. P. J.	561
Suchy, Rev. L.	1049
Szukalski, Rev. J.	227
Taugher, Rev. M. J.	408
Thelen, Rev. L. N.	534
Thill, Rev. D.	535
Thill, Rev. N. A.	432
Thillmann, Rev. J.	553
Till, Rev. F. X.	609
Toohey, Rev. J.	555
Toohey, J.	1129
Trant, Rev. S.	515
Treis, N.	1130
Trimberger, Rev. G.	416
Ullrich, Rev. I.	328
Ulrich, Rev. C.	728
Untraut, Rev. H. J.	768
Urbanek, Rev. A.	1049
Vadder, Rev. G.	804
Vahey, Rev. J. W.	1050
Vaillant, Rev. F.	704
Van Hootegem, Rev. E. M.	693
Vanier, Rev. C.	743
Van Rooy, Rev. R.	627
Van Susteren, Rev. P.	589
Van Treeck, Rev. J. A.	506
Van Treeck, Rev. J. P.	538
Verbart, Rev. W.	1051
Verberk, Rev. A. J.	644
Verstegen, Rev. J.	624
Victor, Rev. H.	1051
Videnka, Rev. J.	1051
Vogt, Rev. C.	784
Vogt, Rev. P. J.	442
Voissem, Rev. P.	1051
Vollebregt, Rev. A.	882
Vollebregt, Rev. F.	682
Vollmer, Rev. E.	874
Volz, Rev. J. F.	840
Wall, Rev. R.	367
Wambold, Rev. F. A.	425
Wapelhorst, Rev. I.	1052
Ward, Rev. M. J.	371, 1073
Watypka, Rev. C.	358
Wawrczykowski, Rev. R.	593
Weber, Rev. C.	888
Weinhart, Rev. F. X.	1053
Weikmann, Rev. C.	833
Weinhoff, Rev. J. J.	399
Weiss, Rev. G.	909
Weiss, Rev. M.	1054
Weiss, Rev. S.	1053
Welbes, Rev. M.	699
Welter, Rev. Fr.	1055
Wenker, Rev. M.	365
Wenning, Rev. J. B.	1055
Weyer, Rev. B.	504
Weyer, Rev. M.	545
Weyer, Rev. N.	373
White, Rev. M.	1055
White, Rev. W.	766
Wicker, Rev. J. M.	881
Wiedmann, Rev. J. B.	865
Wiercinski, Rev. V.	685
Wigman, J. H. M.	1073, 1131
Wibbert, Rev. A.	499
Willard, Rev. G.	1056
Willmes, Rev. H.	348
Wirtz, Rev. H. J.	849
Wisbauer, Rev. M.	1056
Woelfl, Rev. S.	1056
Wrynn, Rev. M.	383
Wuelfling, Rev. J. J.	411
Wurm, Rev. J.	419
Wurst, Rev. L.	882
Zawistowsky, Rev. J.	1057
Ziegler, G.	1133
Zielinski, Rev. Q.	721
Zimmer, Rev. N. M.	368
Zitterl, Rev. A.	455
Zirbes, Rev. J.	1057

CATHOLIC THEOLOGICAL UNION
3 0311 00108 5385

3 0311 00108 5385